Principal Herr Introduces an Innovation by Awarding Business College Diplomas.

THE GRADUATION PROGRAM.

Herbert E. Parker, Rev. E. E. Roberson, "The Bungalow Man" and S. S. Swackhamer Make Addresses.

Having raised the standard of business college education to the highest plane of practical education, the innovation of awarding diplomas to the graduates of the Plainfield Business College graduates was marked by elaborate exercises at the college last night. One hundred and nine pupils, of whom seventy-six received diplomas for completion of the full course of study, and the others were given certificates in their special courses, received the awards from Principal A. S. Herr, proprietor of the school. The exercises, the first of their kind in this city, marked the conclusion of the thirteenth year of the Plainfield Business College, and the third year of its ownership by Professor Herr.

It was a red hot night, but nevertheless more than 500 people gathered in the assembly hall of the college for the graduation exercises. The rooms were elaborately decorated in red and white, the college colors, and the "P. B. C." banner was much in evidence. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity when the graduates marched in to music by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, and took seats on either side of the speakers' platform. On the platform were Principal A. S. Herr and wife, with the speakers of the evening, Rev. Henry Bice, of Newark; R. R. King and G. A. Meinecke, of New York; General Secretary Herbert E. Parker, of the Y. M. C. A.; William Jeffrey, "the Bungalow Man;" Rev. E. E. Roberson, formerly pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, and former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer.

After introductory music by the orchestra and the invocation by Rev Mr. Bice, R. R. King spoke briefly on "The New Era of Business Opportunity," and G. A. Meinecke told "Why So Many Stenographers Fail."

Herbert E. Parker at the outset of his remarks referred to the precedent of commencement exercises founded by Principal Herr and spoke of their fittingness. "All institutions," he said, "owe their existence to ideals, and we should all cherish high ideals. You have learned here 'The Three R's,' but I want to give you three more R's. These are Reason, Right and Reverence. You have learned practical things here, but must know how to think independently. Then you must appreciate the right. 'Right' is a superlative term; there is nothing right unless it is 100 per cent. right. Have your own standards and do not compromise your ideals of right and wrong by the standards of what others do.

"God is a power in your lives which must be recognized in everyday work. Be idealistic. Live in a draem of idealism, if you will, but dream while you're awake and dream while you're at work."

Following Mr. Parker, "the Bungalow Man" injected lots of merriment into the gathering by a snappy talk on the history of the institution. He spoke of the small beginning, of the advancement of the work since Professor Herr took it in charge three years ago, of the advantages of the new building, of the superior equipment. Turning to the graduates, he told them that they had the advantages of the highest character training in connection with their curriculum work. "You go out from this college prepared for the worst, and you will get the best. Character is the surest foundation essential to education. Its development is

DR. WHITNEY SERENADED BY FORMER TOWNSPEOPLE

Headed by the Hackettstown band, nearly 1,000 citizens of that town marched to the Centenary Collegiate Institute Thursday night to serenade Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, of this city. Dr. and Mrs. Whitney are guests of Rev. Dr. Jonathan M. Meeker, and his wife, at their home in the school building. Rev. Dr. Whitney was president of the institute from its founding, in 1869, to 1905, a period of twenty-six years. With his family he resided at Hackettstown from 1874 to 1895, when he resigned the presidency and established a home in this city.

In 1900 he was president-emeritus of the school, which position he still holds. Thursday night's demonstration was in honor of Dr. Whitney's seventy-sixth birthday.

A reception was held on the porch of President Meeker's home. Among those who joined in the greetings were: Rev. Dr. Robinson, pastor of the Hackettstown M. E. church; Rev. Dr. Meeker, Rev. A. O. Hammond and others. Attorney Jacob C. Allen was spokesman of the occasion. Dr. Whitney responded happily.

Rev. Dr. Meeker, who has been recenty chosen president to succeed Rev. Dr. Noble, spoke briefly. Dr. Meeker was pastor of the Hackettstown M. E. church a few years ago.

BRYAN'S NOTIFICATION WILL BE NON-PARTISAN

A call was sent from Lincoln, Neb., yesterday by the local committee in charge of the Bryan notification ceremonies to Democrats of Nebraska, asking that as large a representation as possible be sent to Lincoln on the day that the event occurs. Mayor Brown, Lincoln's Democratic executive, says that this call is issued in order to bring the biggest crowd ever in the town, but that in fact with the exception of the speeches, everything is to be of a non-partisan character.

To emphasize this Governor Sheldon and other Republican State officials of Nebraska, have been asked to take a leading part, and an invitation was sent last night to Senator La Follette, of Winconsin, to participate as a personal friend of Bryan. Laffollette is to speak at the local Methodist chautauqua at Lincoln on the evening of August 12 and will be in Lincoln during the afternoon. The mayor says he has invited LaFollette to "participate in as much of the ceremonies as he may wish to."

Mr. Bryan declines to say how long his speech will be. He says he does not know, but that he proposes to cover sufficiently each issue raised in the two platforms. The fact that he has by him during the periods of the day devoted to dictate a pamphlet copy of Taft's speech, indicates one trend of the discussion. He expects to finish the speech by Monday, and to have it ready for distribution to the press representatives by Wednesday.

What time the candidate can spare from his literary labors is devoted to overseeing the farm work and selling off live stock.

HERMAN UNGER'S WILL.

Grandsons Are Among the Chief Beneficiaries.

By the will of Herman Unger, who committed suicide at his summer home on the Raritan River, near Riverside Park, filed for probate in New Brunswick, the testator leaves to the executors $50,000, to be held in trus, the income to be paid to his grandson, Herman Unger Clark. A like sum of $50,000 is held in trust, the income to be paid to another grandson, Francis H. Clark. Upon their death the principal is to be paid to their surviving child or children.

The deceased also directs that his brother, Eugene Unger, shall have the option to purchase all of his stock in the Unger Bros. Corporation at $70 a share at any time within three years of the testator's death. All remainder of the real and personal property, inclusive of his stock, subject to the provisions above stated, is bequeathed to Miss Caroline Unger, a daughter. The deceased named as executors Mrs. Clark and Eugene Unger. The will is dated February 19, 1908.

Master Builders Plan Outing.

The Master Builders' Association, of this city, will hold an outing at the Krausse farm on Johnson's drive next Wednesday. A clambake, served in the afternoon by Timbo, will be a feature of the affair. Philip Jahn and Walter Apgar are in charge of the arrangements.

ANOTHER LOCAL CHARITY

A GIRLS' FRESH AIR HOME.

A delegation of New York girls, between the ages of twelve and sixteen years of age, are now in camp near Riverton, Litchfield county, Conn., where they were taken yesterday for a two weeks' sojourn. Miles Roberts, of Kensington avenue, Mrs. Burton E. Moore and the Misses Ellen L. Merrill and Margaret Goddard, of this city, have been at Riverton for several days, preparing for the young people.

The "camp" is the old Miles Loomis farm, which has been in the family for six generations. The present owners do not care to sell the property, which is about three miles from Winsted, Conn., but have offered it for this charitable use. The farmhouse is ideal for such a purpose, with its large open fireplaces and its brick oven, its gigantic sugar maples more than a hundred years old and its natural beauty of isolation. Several partitions have been removed to give better sleeping accommodations.

No charity gives outings or vacations for girls between the ages of twelve and sixteen—girls too young to be employed, according to the child labor law, and too old to go to baby camps. Plainfielders are interested in the movement for vacations for these girls, and it was only a few weeks ago that a sale and lawn fete was held for the benefit of this work at the home of Miss Goddard, on East Ninth street.

POLICE CHIEF RESIGNS

Raritan Official Has Saloon License Transferred and Will Conduct Business.

Cornelius Creeden, chief of police of Raritan, who was placed on the rack by the State Excise Commission at Elizabeth last week for owning a saloon and running it in connection with his official duties, made application before Judge Lewis H. Schenck, in the Somerset Court, yesterday, for the transfer of the license of the saloon which he owns from the name of William Hoonen to that of Cornelius Creeden.

It was authoritatively stated outside of court that Creeden had resigned his office of chief of police, and would hereafter devote his attention to the more profitable occupation of running a saloon. Judge Schenck asked if there was any remonstrance against the transfer of the license to Creeden and as no one appeared in court to protest, the transfer was made by the court without reference to the testimony brought out by the State Excise Commission that Creeden had given his friends beer to drink on Sunday.

SMALL BOY HELD ON A CHARGE OF GAMBLING.

On a technical charge of gambling, William Peel, a fifteen-year-old boy, was arraigned in the city court this morning. He pleaded not guilty and Judge Runyon adjourned the case to a later date, releasing the defendant in his own recognizance.

Peel was arrested by the police Thursday night on suspicion of knowing something about a theft committed at the North Avenue station. He was subjected to a rigid examination but steadfastly maintained that he knew nothing about the matter. He had been detained at headquarters since his arrest, the police asserting that he and other boys have been shooting crap in the basement of the depot.

THIEVES IN MONTCLAIR.

The Montclair police are investigating the robbery of the home of Oliver C. Grinnell, 10 Erwin Park, Montclair. The house had been entered and jewelry and silverware worth $500 had been taken by the burglars.

Mr. and Mrs. Grinnell had spent the day in New York and had given their servant, Anna Anderson, to go out for the afternoon. When they returned at night the house had been ransacked. A gold watch and several stickpins had been stolen from Grinnell and a watch and several pieces of jewelry were lost by Arthur Winter, a brother of Mrs. Grinnell.

Mrs. Albert G. Negley, of West Seventh street, who have been seriously ill with stomach trouble, is improving very slowly, but will be unable to be about for some time.

PROMISED TO KILL HIMSELF "NO MORE"

"Judge, if you let me go this time I won't kill myself no more," declared Zakiel Farraro in pleading for mercy when arraigned this morning before Recorder Charles Sheelen at Fanwood on a charge of having attempted to commit suicide. Farraro in a fit of despondency ten days ago slashed his throat five times with a razor and was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital in a supposedly dying condition. On his release from that institution yesterday afternoon, he was taken in custody by Marshal Logan, of Fanwood, and placed in the jail there.

NEWARK WOMAN MAY LOSE $4,000.

Officer's Error In Serving Papers May Cost Mrs. Patterson Big Verdict.

Mrs. Martha B. Patterson, formerly of Omaha, Neb., but now of Newark, is in danger of losing a $4,000 suit because a Sheriff's officer in Omaha failed to make the proper return of a summons. Through her counsel, Simeon H. Rollinson, Mrs. Patterson brought suit for the above amount against Thomas H. Taylor. She holds five judgments for $800 each against Taylor, which the Rochester Loan and Banking Company, of Nebraska, recovered in 1891, and assigned to her in 1893, as the recovery was on promissory notes indorsed by her husband, Richard C. Patterson.

Judge Heisley, in an opinion handed down yesterday, declared that although there is no doubt that the judgments held by Mrs. Patterson are bona fide, yet the defect in the service of the summons in the case was so serious that there was great doubt as to whether she could recover the $4,000 from Taylor.

In the return made by the Sheriff's officer in Omaha nothing was said about any effort having been made to locate Taylor, nor was anything said about any inability to find the defendant, the summons simply being left at Taylor's house. Although this point, as to the seriousness of the defect in service, has not been settled by the courts of New Jersey, Judge Heisley said that such recital seemed obligatory by the laws of Nebraska.

YOUNG MEN BATTLE ON THE DUER STREET BRIDGE.

Backed up by seconds and a crowd of friends to see fair play, a couple of well known local young men, selected the Duer street bridge over Green brook as a spot to settle a grievance, last night. They sailed into each other just as the clock struck nine and for five minutes or more had a battle royal. At the end of that time, one of the combatants was put down and out with a colar plexus blow. He was taken home by some of his pals.

The bridge was evidently picked out for the fight in order to cross the dividing line either one way or the other in the event of city or borough cops showing up. None appeared, however, and the affair was settled to the full satisfaction of all concerned. It was witnessed by a number of residents in the neighborhood.

Fight Cost Him $5.

William Mollison, arrested as a participant in a four-cornered street fight in the borough Thursday night, was fined $5 at the hearing of the quartette last night before Borough Recorder Dolliver. The other three prisoners, John Walsh, Leonard Young and John Kerry, colored, were released with suspended sentence. Kerry told the judge that he was attacked by Mollison as he was ministering unto Walsh, whom he found sick in the road before the scrappy pair came along.

Boy Drowns In the Raritan.

Maurice Baum, twelve years old, son of M. Baum, president of the Carbon Stove Works, of Somerville, was drowned in the Raritan River between Somerville and Finderne while bathing with a party of boys yesterday afternoon. He was seized with cramps and suddenly sank. His elder brother and other companions tried to save him, but without success. Help was secured and the body was found about an hour afterward.

Fire Destroys Small Building.

A small frame building one th premises at 404 East Fourth street, occupied by F. S. Emmons, caught fire from a pile of burning rubbish, shortly before noon today, and was practically destroyed. An alarm was turned in from box 23 but when the department arrived there was little left to save. A couple of extinguishers put out the flames.

NEIGHBORS IN A BATTLE

AFFAIR ENDS IN POLICE COURT.

Mrs. Hennessey and Her Father Complain Against Patrick O'Brien and Latter Is Fined $20.

According to testimony brought out in the city court, this morning, the upper end of Belvidere avenue was the scene of a battle royal during a neighborhood quarrel Wednesday afternoon. There were five participants all told and besides fists, some of the weapons used were a single-barrelled shot-gun, a pair of garden shears two feet long and a whalebone horsewhip. There were no casualties but two of the combatants were injured.

The complainants in the case were Mrs. Edwin Hennessey and her father, Otto Gunther. They accused Patrick O'Brien of striking them and threatening to kill both and also two of Mrs. Hennessey's children. The whole rumpus grew out of some bad feeling between the families, who live on adjoining properties, and was brought to a head by the Hennessey chickens getting into O'Brien's garden.

Mrs. Hennessey asserted that O'Brien started in to slaughter the offending fowls and when she protested he struck her with the shears. She was so badly hurt, she said, that Dr. Lufburrow had to treat her. She sent her daughter for her father and when Mr. Gunther came up on the run he was knocked down by a well aimed fist blow. O'Brien then withdrew to his home. Gunther recovered after five minutes, so his daughter said, and he went in front of the O'Brien house to declare the law would be called upon to punish his assailant.

"I don't care for the law, Chief Kiely or anybody else," is what O'Brien is alleged to have said in reply and he sallied out of the front door with the shot gun. Mrs. Hennessey and the children twenty-threed it for their own fireside, but Pa Gunther stood his ground until the muzzle of the weapon was shoved against his chest. He recalled then that he had an important engagement somewhere and left in a hurry to keep it.

When placed on the stand by his counsel, John P. Owens, O'Brien stated that he had struck Gunther and threatened to use the shot-gun but denied assaulting Mrs. Hennessey. It was she, he said, who was at the bottom of the fight. He claimed that she was intoxicated at the time and that after calling him names, lashed him across the shoulders with the horsewhip. In rebuttal, Mrs. Hennessey said she had grabbed up the whip to protect herself.

At the conclusion of the case, Counsellor Owens made an eloquent plea for his client's discharge but spoiled the effect by failing to get Mrs. Hennessey's name fixed in his mind. He called her "Mrs. Gunther" first and when she exclaimed that wasn't her title he said "all right," but the next moment referred to her as "Mrs. Sweeney." He jumped from one name to the other all through his address.

"Twenty dollars or twenty days," was all Judge Runyon said when he concluded and O'Brien paid up in preference to going to Elizabeth.

DOCTORS FEAR RABIES.

Cared for Boy Who Died of Hydrophobia in Jersey City.

Drs. Costello and Whalen, of the City Hospital, Jersey City, are taking treatment at the Pasteur Institute in New York, where the physicians say they are out of danger. The Jersey City doctors treated Henry Luttman, 10 years old, when he was taken to the hospital to die several days ago. They assumed entirec harge of the case.

Several days ago Dr. Costello experienced a peculiar feeling of numbness in his throat, and immediately went to the Pasteur Institute and began treatment. Dr. Whalen decided to take the treatment in order to avoid unnecessary risks.

Carnival Week at Flemington.

Flemington's annual carnival, under teh auspices of the Woman's Club, will begin on Tuesday morning and continue during the remainder of the week. Tuesday will be firemen's parade; Wednesday, horse parade; Thursday, automobile parade; Friday, school children's parade; Saturday will be Mardi Gras. The proceeds will be used to beautify Flemington and enlarge the public park.

AUNT'S SLAYER IS PUT UNDER GUARD

Hackensack, Aug. 1.—Coroner C. A. Demund, of Ridgewood, last night swore in the following jury that is to investigate the murder of Mrs. Otillie Eberhard by her nephew, Gus Eberhard, who yesterday was indicted by the Bergen County Grand Jury: Edward T. White, forean; Fred C. Board, E. B. Thornton, Roger Bridgeman, Walter Stude and States Hagerman. The difference of opinion between the Coroner and Prosecutor Koester has been settled by Supreme Court Justice Parker, who sustained the Prosecutor in every particular. Coroner Demund demanded the money found in the woods and the $2,450 stolen by the murderer from his aunt and he wanted Gus Eberhard to be present at the inquest.

The Prosecutor refused to comply.

The Coroner also complained because he could not see Eberhard while the Prosecutor was endeavoring to get a confession and Judge Parker said it was an inopportune time to break in upon so important an interview. Mr. Koester told the Coroner to proceed with his inquest in order to have the post-mortem officially on record and the Coroner, after swearing his jury, indefinitely postponed the inquest until Prosecutor Koester returns from his vacation. Eberhard is being kept in a room separated from the jail and is guarded night and day. The authorities fear he may attempt suicide.

BABY CAMP DONATIONS PASS THE $100 MARK

Two more donations of goodly size were received today for the Baby Camp on the mountains conducted by the City Union of King's Daughters. One was from Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, who sent $5, and another contributed a similar amount.

From the Junior Endeavorers of Warren chapel comes still another check for $5. Another handsome contribution has been received from Mrs. L. M. Myers, who sends $20.

These subscriptions bring the total fund to date $100.50, and bring the aggregate transmitted through The Daily Press to the two local charities, $122.

These subscriptions have been received by The Daily Press for the Baby Camp on the mountain conducted by the City Union of King's Daughters:

HERRON NOW AT DEATH-HOUSE.

Convicted Murderer of Rev. S. B. D. Prickitt Removed from Middlesex Jail.

Archibald Herron was taken from New Brunswick to the death-house at Trenton yesterday morning. Unless his counsel, Charles T. Cowenhoven, succeeds in securing a stay, Herron will be electrocuted during the week of September 7. He was convicted on Tueday of the murder of Rev. S. B. D. Prickitt, at Metuchen. Herron had a gradge against the clergyman because the latter, when recorder of Metuchen Borough, had sentenced him to jail.

Warden Charles Rogers and Watchman Charles Bach guarded Herron and two other prisoners, Elwin Telwach and Joseph Silinski. Telwach is to serve three years for attempted assault, and Silinski has a sentence of three years and six months for housebreaking.

PASTOR ANSWERS CRITICS

Rev. C. S. Kemble Defends the Sermon He Preached on the Cordova Case.

GIVES SOME INSIDE FACTS.

Minister Declares That South River Man Has Been Judged Too Harshly—His Sin Not As Bad As David's.

Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, who has been the object of a volley of editorial criticism since he preached a sermon last Sunday taking a merciful position in the case of Rev. Mr. Cordova, the South River unfrocked pastor, who is soon to finish his prison term. The Plainfield pastor decreed that Cordova had been "prejudged by a sensational press and prejudiced by a biased judge," and that he was not half as bad as painted.

The advice given him editorially by a Newark paper has prompted him to make a reply.

"With all due respect to the editorial omiscience, I cannot admit the assumption of the esteemed Newark editor," said he, "of either a superior exegetical ability or a superior knowledge of the facts in the Cordova case. First as to exegsis, Paul's injunction as the duty of restoring one overtaken in a fall does not presuppose 'works meet for repentence,' or any effort to return of the part of the sinner, it makes it the duty of the church to seek out the wanderer and endeavor to beget repentnce in him.

"It applies to all sinners not as has been so generally assumed to all sinners but Cordova. As to the statement that Cordova was 'not taken in a fault but was condemned for a continual series of faults of the gravest character.'"

"This involves a more intimate knowledge of the circumstances of Cordova's trangression, than is probably possessed by the editor. No one but Cordova and the Final Supreme Judge can tell how sudden or how aginous was the fall.

"No one has cared to get Cordova's side to render him even justice, let alone mercy. Merely presuming that Cordova's previous character irreproachable character entitles his word to some respect, I give his own explanation to me. In the first place there was no law guilty intimacy before the elopement, but an angry public accusation of it by the girl's father goaded on by an enemy's suspicion precipitated an elopement that had never been planned or thought of. The fact that both reputations were already at the mercy of public opinion made this impetuous step irreversible. The fact that his marital relations had not become but had always been unhappy helped to make the separation permanent. It is not generally known but it was established before the Board of Pardons that Cordova supported his family regularly after getting safely out of the country and with no legal compulsion, and that he was only brought back under the jurisdiction of the United States courts by a decoy appeal to his affection for his little daughter who was falsely reported to him as going insane for a sight of her father.

"He did not beat his wife and children. His sentence for assault was based on unsupported statements of his wife and one instance in which in a little spat, he confesses to have thrown a glass and a tine pie plate at his wife as a result of a taunt and a dare. Now all this is submitted not to deny that Cordova has committed a crime but to establish my claim that as sentences go he has been punished already, with undue severity, and that though he has sinned he has not sinned 'above all the Gallieeans,' so as to be entirely beyond the pale of mercy extended to others. David's sin was greater; he was forgiven and became a saint afterwards. Give Cordova the same chance."

WESTFIELD.

Complaint is being made by the Central Railroad officials concerning the alleged carelessness of the employes of a factory at Garwood. They cross the railroad tracks to get to the trolley on South avenue. It is said they do not exercise proper care. Several times the railroad company has put up fences and closed the crossing, but each time has relented at the petitions of the people working in the factory, since the crossing saves nearly a mile walk. It is said the workmen are getting careless again and the company threatens to close the crossing permanently.

The Cranford ball team and an out-of-town team will play at Westfield ball grounds this afternoon. Westfield has had no ball team this season.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The disbanding of the McKinley Club in the city of Elizabeth is of no political importance or significance whatever. It has been moribund for a year or two. When first formed it was a vigorous political campaign club, and did its appointed work successfully. When the campaign was ended somebody proposed to make it a permanent organization, and when President McKinley was assassinated there was a flood of local sentiment in favor of perpetuating his memory by means of the organization. Very naturally everybody who was asked to join it did so, and it became strong in numbers. But when the universal sorrow over President McKinley's untimely death had somewhat subsided the attendance at the club rapidly diminished, and it soon fell into the hands of a faction. or a time it was currently known as the "Charley" Fowler Club, though its real name was never changed, and of late its members found other places of amusement, recreation and political refreshment. It has not been self-supporting for several years, and has simply gone the way of the mapority of the local party clubs. There is no particular significance in the demise of such organizations, though they m ayhave done good work in their day.—Newark News.

"Don't follow me, pup," said the good-natured man to the lost dog. "I haven't any more home than you have. I live in a flat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WITH A SIX-INCH GASH IN HIS HEAD

BOY SWIMS THE KILL VON KULL

With a deep gash in his head, caused by being struck by the paddlewheel of a ferryboat, James Van Pelt, ten years old, of 300 Richmond avenue, Port Richmond, S. I., yesterday kept his wits and nerve and by plugging away in the Kill von Kull swam to the Jersey shore. He collapsed after being assisted from the river.

The lad is an expert swimmer and had dived from Van Clief's dock at Port Richmond, clad in bathing tights. He found the tide much stronger than usual and he was carried swiftly out to midstream. The ferryboat M. B. Shanley, which plies between Bayonne and Port Richmond, was headed for Bayonne and passengers on the bow watched the lad in swimming. They cried out in alarm when they saw the boy carried by the tide toward the boat and before the boat could be stopped Van Pelt was thrown against the paddle wheel, which struck him on the head.

The blow opened the boys' head, and as he sank the waters were dyed. When he came to the surface the ferryboat had reached its slip and several men prepared to go out after Van Pelt. The latter, however, was making good headway, having gotten away from the worst of the tide, and he managed to swim to a float on the Bayonne side, where he was lifted from the water. Then he fainted and was removed to the residence of Dr. Albert Daly, who found a gash six inches long in his head. It required a dozen stitches to draw the flesh together, but the boy never whimpered.

"You haven't any money or clothes. How are you going to get home?" asked Dr. Daly.

"Guess I'll have to swim back," replied Van Pelt, as he looked down at his tights. He didn't have to swim, however, for the doctor got a suit of clothes for him and had him placed aboard the ferryboat.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Convictions Not Impossible.

Those who argue that it is impossible to enforce the "bishops' law" are asked to turn their attention to Union county. Three convictions for violations of the screen law were recorded there on Wednesday, following the conviction of a liquor dealer on Tuesday for the same offense. A person indicted for selling bottled beer pleaded guilty, and was fined $50. Those guilty of violating the screen provision of the "bishops' law" were fined $100 to $200 each.

Now this is in the county of Union and city of Elizabeth, which has been pronounced about the worst managed city thus far probed in this State. And what is most pertinent in this connection is the fact that hitherto it has been practically impossible to convict any of those indicted for such violations of the excise law. Mr. English, the former prosecutor, attempted to try several of the cases of indictments found by the Fisk grand jury, but became so discouraged and disgusted that he refused to try any more before the jurors the sheriff had impaneled.

Prosecutor Swift, the new appoin-ee, who succeeded Mr. English, has had no difficulty in securing the convictions referred to and others besides. Making full allowances for the zeal, determination and ability of the new prosecutor, and giving him credit for vigorous work, there is still reason for believing that some other factor has assisted in bringing about the changed conditions in Union county.

There is hardly a doubt that the disclosurfes made by the State excise commission have awakened a sentiment in Union county that will no longer tolerate such a state of affairs as has existed there for ten or a dozen years past. In a word, there is a public demand that the law shall be enforced, and even petit jurors dare not defy that sentiment, however willing they may be to protect their friends in the liquor business.

The law can be enforced. There is not the slightest doubt about it. When the majority of the people wake up to a proper sense of their obligations and duties and make their determination known, they will find that the officials, from the highest to the lowest, are very much pleased indeed to act as the public demands. The law-abiding, law-enforcing citizens of Union county can clean the Augean political stables, if they will, by simply turning the stream of their votes into the right channels. There's no difficulty in enforcing any law if those who favor it will only act together.—Newark News.

ONE BRIDE'S CAKE.

While a certain bride-to-be may not have won her sweetheart with butter cake—the recipe follows—she admits that he is most enthusiastic over it,

To make it, one creams one tablespoonful of butter. Then add a cup of sugar, two eggs, separately, stirring between each addition: two-thirds of a cup of milk, one and a half cups of flour mixed with one teaspoon baking powder. "When nearly done pour plenty of melted butter over," sprinkle with powdered sugar and bake until a good brown.

This sounds well worth trying, and one is willing to believe it delicious.

ACCESSORIES.

Cretonne stocks with jabot trimming will be worn with shirtwaist suits. Belts are made to match.

Fancy Dutch collars can be purchased in any size, color or material for decorating plain wash dresses.

Ribbons continue to be worn in the hair. They are wound around the coiffure.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The first piling in the work of creating a harbor entrance at Cold Spring Inlet was driven by the contractors yesterday.

Although ten cars were wrecked and an engine was derailed when freight trains side-swiped at Prospect Plains, no one was injured.

John Waters, an official of the Gloucester Ferry Company, has been mentioned in Democratic circles as a candidate for Mayor of that city.

Owing to the illness of Bishop Scarborough, the laying of the corner-stone for the Chapel of the Good Shepherd at Pitman has been postponed until September.

David Kalt and Samuel Klapkin, Atlantic City sailors, were seriously burned by an explosion of gasoline in Kalt's shop, which was gutted by the fire that followed.

Charles Kelso, of 60 Dewey street, Philadelphia, sustained a fractured arm when struck by an air brake hose at the Camden terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday.

Cutting his hand with a butcher knife, Abram Rosenfeld, of 712 Cherry street, Camden, is suffering from blood poisoning. He was operated upon yesterday and is expected to recover.

Grease boiling over caused a fire in the Chinese restaurant of King Sam, at 342 Kaighn avenue, Camden, last evening. The proprietor was severely burned and the fire department quickly extinguished the flames.

Irate heads of the Ocean City government are preparing to raise a rumpus over the car signs and other advertisements of Atlantic City hotlers in return for the removal of Ocean City signs from Atlantic City trolley cars. They plan to take measures to bar rum from the confines of this city.

James Hugh, of Philadelphia, was arrested during the Pomona Grange picnic at Rancocas Park last night, after he was alleged to have snatched a pocketbook containing $55 from Daniel Wilkins, a Medford farmer. Frank Lippincott, Wilkin's son-in-law, captured Hugh and recovered the pocketbook.

Two persons were fined by Justice of the Peace Schmitz, of Camden, yesterday, for cruelty to animals. Harry Sheppard, of Trothtown, paid a fine of $10 and costs for knocking down a mule with a fence rail, and Mrs. Massey, of 1155 Frederal street, Camden, was fined $5 and costs for beating a cat with a club.

After complaining against and securing the conviction of a man on a charge of crap-shooting, Rev. P. H. Anderson, pastor of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church at Trenton, yesterday paid the fine imposed on the man and walked out of the courtroom arm in arm with him, administering a stern lecture on the evils of gambling.

The many friends of Frederick Wells, a prominent young lawyer of Philadelphia, and son of Edward Wells, a summer cottager at Sea Isle City, were surprised to hear of his marriage on Wednesday last to Miss Kelly, niece of J. B. Van Sciver, a Camden merchant. The wedding was kept a secret until Mr. Wells telephoned to his home.

Death yesterday came to the relief of Mrs. Thomas O'Donnell, who lived on the G. G. Green farm, near Woodbury, and who was terribly burned the night before by a gasoline stove. While preparing supper the gasoline caught fire. In attempting to throw the stove out the door she was sprinkled with the flaming liquid, and before aid could be summoned the woman was a mass of flames.

A Southern Omelet.

Bread omelet is one of the favorite luncheon dishes in an out-of-town house where the housewife is a transplanted New Orleans woman. Her idea originated with a famous French restaurant in that city. A cupful of stale bread cut in dice is fried in deep fat until is a golden brown. Then two or three eggs are baten thoroughly, seasoned with salt, pepper and minced parsley, and are turned over the bread and cooked until the bottom is brown.

Fame.

"The boys in this town must have heard all about me before we moved here," boasted Tommy on the day after the family's arrival.

"But there's no one here that knew us," objected his mother.

"That's all right," persisted Tommy. "Just as soon as I came in the schoolyard this morning, they all yelled: "'Hello, Bricktop!' just the way they used to do at home."—Lippincott's.

Legal Battles.

"Some of our hardest legal battles are fought out of court."

"How can that be?"

"For instance, "explained the lawyer, "in case the heirs to an estate want to come to an agreement."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

True to the Letter.

The assistants at a small shop were preparing for the yearly sale. "What shall I mark that lot of black silk?" asked an assistant of the employer.

"Mark the selling price 50 cents a yard," was the answer.

"But it only cost 30 cents a yard," said the astonished employe.

"I don't care what it cost. I am selling off regardless of cost," retorted the shop-owner.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

AMUSEMENT.

The program offered at Proctor's Newark theatre during the week of August 3 abounds as usual with novelties and stellar features. One of the program's most entertaining numbers will be an elaborate dramatic production presented by Mr. and Mrs. Robyns and Company entitled "Shore Folks." The playlet is the joint work of Mr. Robyns and W. L. Dockstader. Another dainty offering that will serve to introduce Felice Morris, daughter of that sterling actor, Felix Morris, to the vaudeville public is "The Old Old Story" by Francis Wilson. Charles Silkvan, Russell Barrett will assist Miss Morris in the exploitation of this comedy. The Willy Parris Troupe, without peers in their line, will be seen in a series of acrobatic feats each bordering on the sensational. Now that the directoire gown has the call "The quartette with the Four Sheath Gown Girls" will find immediate favor. Gilday and Fox, notwithstanding their Celtic names, are a pair of clever Hebrew dialect comedians. Sharp Brothers and their Six Dusky Belles appear in a Southern scenic specialty entitled "Dancing on the Levee." Marcello, a rapid sculptor, offers a distinct novelty using cloth instead of clay in all his models. Leonie Pam, an attractive and pretty new-comer in the vaudeville ranks, will be heard in some of her musical comedy successes. New animated pictures as usual close the bill.

LITTLE BOY.

Little boy, with eyes of blue,
And of self-possession rare,
Down the years awaiting you
There are joys beyond compare.
Also there are bits of rue—
Shaded places to go through—
But, as love will go with you,
Don't you care.

Little boy, with lips that smile
And God's sunshine on your hair,
All along life's every mile
There are lilies tall and fair;
Though temptations may beguile,
Rocks retard you, pile on pile,
Love will guard you all the while,
Don't you care.

Don't you care or grieve at all,
All the world loves you, and fair
May your skies be, and the call
Of glad birds ring everywhere—
Roses red and lilies tall
Soften shock and scar and wall—
Love's dream between you and it all,
Don't you care.
—Houston Post.

When a pan is used for the water from the refrigerator it should be so large that it cannot overflow before the time comes for emptying it.

MISCELLANEOUS, BUT WHOLLY USEFUL.

For evening entire toilettes of metallic tissue, very transparent and soft, are seen. The skirts is the sheath cut and the bodice is in the high-waisted effect, draped in folds across the front. The idea is from the directoire period, which now seems to govern the fashion world, and the effect is one of utter simplicity.

A smart, distinctive and inexpensive little suit can be made of pongee, jumper style, with an ecru net blouse strapped with pongee, the whole lifted out of the commonplace by touches of Oriental embroidery.

The tailored net shirtwaist is new. Made of fine white net, tucked, with the new tucked band cuffs, finished with knife pleating coming well down over the hand, it is a picture of simple, snowy beauty.

Dimity underclothes are new and fascinating in their crisp daintiness.

"Guest coats" are the latest in auto clothes. It seems it is up to owners of motor cars to keep handy a number of long coats for the guests he may invite impromptu.

The fad of wearing pretty ribbons in the hair has brought out the ribbon comb which enables one to arrange the ribbons more easily and securely in one's tresses.

Which Is the Better?

A distinguished author says that a woman who cannot read or write, but who makes her home and husband comfortable, is a far better wife than a girl who can speak six languages and does not know how to cook a dinner and keep a house clean. Unless a bride's brains are turned to domestic account they are of very little practical use to a husband.

The fact that she is a brilliant musician and a mistress of French and Italian is poor consolation for burnt chops and muddy coffee. Talent, like charity, should begin at home, and no woman can be called clever who does not use her wits first toward achieving home comfort and skilled housekeeping.

At the same time I know many a bride who is ignorant of "book learning," shaky in her spelling and a shocking housewife, too! After all, to be clever and to cultivate one's mind—without neglecting cookery and the domestic arts—makes a wife a more charming companion to her husband.

The Sorrow of It.

"It's too bad," observed the man who seemed to be thinking aloud.

"What's too bad?" queried the party who had overheard the observation.

"That our neighbors always know when we have fried onions for supper, but never get nert when we have strawberries and ice cream," explained the noisy thinker.—Chicago News.

On Again, Off Again.

A young Chicago artist who is almost as noted for his convivial tendencies as he is for his genius, was recently asked by a friend:

"What does your wife think of these spells? I should think she would not submit to them."

"When I have a spree," confessed the intemperate one, frankly, "she is just as good to me as anyone possibly could be. She takes care of me and nurses me back to decency with a kindness that is superhuman—it is angelic and beyond belief.

"But once I am sober again, she begins to nag that I never, never, never again will drink a drop, and she keeps at me so determinedly and so persistently that—by Jove—she makes me so desperate that I have to go and fill up again so that I can forget it."

A Cloak Made of Canvas.

The material was a kind of canvas, not unlike hopsacking, and of a peculiar shade of dark blue. It was fashioned on the loose lines of the kimono and trimmed with broadcloth collar and deep turnback cuffs in an odd shade of geranium red.

The coat was quite simple in design, but owed its distinction to the unusual shades selected. The edges of collar and cuffs were decorated with rows of black and gold soutache braid.

$25 FOR A LETTER

CAN YOU WRITE ONE?

Eight Prizes to Be Awarded in a Letter Writing Contest Open to Everyone in New Jersey.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been used in this State for a generation. Hundreds of remarkable cures have been reported during that time and there is scarcely a family in which the remedy has not been tried with beneficial results. This furnishes the material for the letters to be written in this contest. There is no demand upon the imagination, every narrative must deal with facts.

The Prizes.

The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., of Schnectady, N. Y., will award a prize of $25.00 for the best letter received on or before August 8, 1908, from the State of New Jersey, on the subject, "Why I Recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

The Conditions.

The cure or benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills described in the letter may be in the writer's own case or one that has come under his or her personal observation.

More than one cure may be described in the letter, so long as every statement made is literally true.

The letter should be no longer than is necessary to relate the benefit obtained from the remedy in the case described.

Each letter must be signed by the writer with his or her name and full address and the letter must give the correct name and address of the person whose cure is described. THESE WILL BE STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL and will not be made public. Letters containing addresses that cannot be verified will not be considered in awarding the prizes.

The writer of each letter must state the name and date of the paper in which he or she saw the announcement of this competition.

Fine writing will not win the prize unless you have a good case to describe. The strength of the recommendation and not the style of the letter will be the basis of award.

The contest will close August 8, 1908. Do not delay, but if you know of a cure write your letter NOW. Observe the above conditions carefully or your letter may be thrown out.

Address all letters as follows:

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

When Lew Dockstader's minstrels open the season at the New Plainfield theatre on August 10 it will be noticed by the people of Plainfield that every vaudeville feature that was at one time so prevalent in minstrel performances, has been eliminated and that the entertainment is built strictly along those lines which Mr. Dockstader has laid out in years gone by as his idea of what a minstrel show should be. And, as he has been uniformly successful and has played to increasing patronage every season it is only logical to glean from this condition of affairs that he has been doing what the amusement loving public wish him to do. In other words he has accomplished that always to be sought for result—he has pleased the people. Mr. Dockstader has contended for years that the introduction of acrobatic acts, club swingers, musical acts and others that are germaine absolutely to a vaudeville entertainment, is a great mistake and he has carefully kept this class of performances out of his bill. Instead of the usual programme without a connected story, he has tried to gradually pull his various numbers together into an amalgamated whole that would appeal strongly to lovers of minstrelsy and yet be free from the sameness which without the most earnest thought and the most untiring energy would result from the rather sharp limitations offered by the medium of black face art.

Gardening More Than a Fad.

According to the annual report of the Horticultural College for Women, at Swanley, England, the interest in outdoor life among women is steadily increasing. The number of students graduated last year was sixty-eight. Before the end of six months more than half the number reported that they had secured good places as gardener teachers in charge of garden schools, head gardeners, under gardeners and market gardeners.

As their pay is, as a rule, as high as that received by men in similar places, the work is looked upon as very desirable among women who are fond of outdoor life.

He Liked This Camphor.

Little Harry had not been talking many months when he expressed himself this way upon one occasion. He had often smelled of camphor, but one day got a bottle of perfumery and was delighted. "Mamma," he said, "this funny camphor makes me good breathing."—Delineator.

D., L. & W. DEFIES SWITCHMEN.

Strike Will Affect All Lines Running to Buffalo.

Scranton, Pa., August 1.—Little satisfaction is found by the switchmen of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad in the answer of President W. H. Truesdale to their demands. President Truesdale refuses to have any conference with the switchmen or to make an appointment with their national officers.

This is the first time he has refused to meet a committee of the employes and his answer has cast gloom over the committeemen, who were confident that he would meet with them and listen to their side of the dispute. There now seems to be little hope of preventing a strike. When the strike is called its centre will be in Buffalo, where the present trouble originated over the discharge of two men.

John Cannon, the member of the grievance committee from that yard, stated that all the roads running into Buffalo will be effected, as well as the various grain lines over the lakes.

THE ANGELS AND THEIR MINISTRY

Third of a Series on Heaven by

REV. DR. CHARLES E. HERRING

The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews, in speaking of the angels, says: "And are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation." Mark you, it says, "are they not ministering spirits" today, in this age of the Holy Spirit's activity. We do not read, "have not these angels been ministering spirits in the past, but are they not inspirations to men today under the leading of the Holy Spirit? The angels ministered not only to the saints of the Old Testament, but they visited and blessed men who lived in New Testament times—Cornelius, Peter, Paul and John.

Who are the angels? They are created beings. Therefore they have not lived always. The Psalmist says, "Praise ye Him, all His angels—for He commanded and they were created." They are spirits. That does not necessarily imply that they are incorporeal. A spirit certainly has not flesh and bones but there are different kins of bodies. There are "bodies celestial," as well as "bodies terrestrial." There is a "spiritual body" and also a "natural body." The Council of Nice declared that the angels have bodies not of flesh but of light or ether; they have appeared with visiblo bodies.

They are not represented in the Scriptures as impersonal forces of nature but as real persons. They possess superhuman intelligence. They are pictured as being "full of eyes," which is a figurative way of expressing their great knowledge. Again, it is said, that "the day and the hour of the coming of the Lord knoweth no man not even the angels in heaven." Such a verse as this is an evidence of the great knowledge the angels have of the laws and plans of God.

The knowledge of the angels is related to their power. Israel's protecting angel slew one hundred and eighty-five thousand Assyrians in a single night, not because of his omnipotence but because of his greater knowledge of the laws of God.

The angels are not glorified men. They are an order of spiritual intelligence older than men. In Hebrews, "the church of the first born" and "the spirts of just men made perfect" are distinguished from "the innumberable hosts of angels." Then we are told that we shall "judge angels." Again, it is very evident, from what the Scripture says, that the angels are of different ranks. Paul speaks to the Colossians of "thrones, dominions, principalities and powers." Then again, we read of the "archangel Michael." These expressions reveal the different orders in the heavenly world. I hardly think, however, as some have held that the cherubim and seraphim are the highest order of angels. It is far better to think of these as symbolic appearances and that they picture humanity as redeemed and sanctified.

What does the Scripture say as to the employment of the angels? They stand before Him and worship. They sing his praises, but their very name is suggestive of their great work. The word "angels" means "messengers." Their business is to fly on God's errands. They guide the affairs of nations. It is not inconsistent with the teaching of Scripture to say that each nation has its guardian angel. We ceretainly read of "Michael who standeth" for Israel and then we are told of the prince of Persia and the prince of Grecia.

The angels do have a practical and powerful interest in the affairs of men. They are interested in everything that pertains to the welfare of humanity. We are told that "the angels encamp round about them that fear the Lord and delivereth them." The Psalmist assures us, "He shall give His angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways"—in all thy ways—that is through whatever experience thou art called to pass.

If all this is true, why is it that we do not see them? Perhaps there is an answer in the admonition of Paul, when he speaks against the worship of angels. The help of these beings is so signal, men would be led to direct their worship to them instead of God.

The angels we are told are interested in the worship of God's people. They "desire to look into" the things that pertain to the kingdom of God. Paul tells the Corinthians that a woman ought to worship with head covered "because of the angels." It is very evident therefore, that when we worship in the house of the Lord the angels are present.

It has been said that each individual has his own guardian angel. We cannot be sure of that, but we are told of God's little ones that their angels always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven." I take that to mean not only the children in years, but the children in faith. Someone has said: "It makes no difference whether each one has a guardian angel when we know that each one has a guard of angels."

When Lazarus died, it is said that the angels came and carried him to Abraham's bosom. At the end of the world, Scripture tells us that "Christ will send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." It is one of the duties of the angels to carry home God's people.

We have heard the dying saint exclaim just before passing over, "I see them. They have come to take me home." The vision is not the result of a tired and worn out brain. It is a vision of a great reality. If God's saints in the past have seen them, why may not his people today see them as they come to the borderland?

WANTS PRIVATE TALK WITH GOVERNOR FORT.

Dean Gessner Has Frank Statement for His Ears.

Very Rev. Dean Martin Gessner, of St. Patrick's church in Elizabeth, did not hold conference with Governor Fort on Thursday, in compliance with an invitation, as religious matters at home made the meeting impossible.

"I wrote to Governor Fort some time ago telling him that I would be unable to accept his invitation to take lunch with him," Father Gessner said yesterday. "I said in my letter that I should be glad to meet him in private conference any time agreeable to him, and I expect to hear from him soon.

"I do not care to dine with him. What I want is to talk with him in private, and tell him that the Excise Committee in Elizabeth is rotten, and that anybody wanting a license can get it. I understand that crowds were around him all day Thursday. In that case I could not have talked to him in private even if I had been there."

Baby Played Near Dead Mother.

With her baby playing in the bed beside her, Mrs. Frederick Meyers, of Montclair, was found dead at the home of her mother in Little Falls yesterday. Mrs. Meyers had been feeling ill when she retired, but it was not supposed that she was in a dangerous condition. The woman's mother went to take the baby to another room, when she found Mrs. Meyers dead.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The guests at Mildner's Mountain View House, near Glenside Park, held a mid-summer lawn fete and barn dance on the spacious lawn and in the large barn last night. Landlord Mildner outdid himself, the affair being one of the most enjoyable ones yet held at this popular house, which is the home for a number of New Yorkers and their friends from early June until the late autumn. The lawn was prettily trimmed with Chinese lanterns, the effect being very pretty as the house is situated on the hilltop. The interior of the barn was transformed into a pleasing dance hall, with the aid of greens and the use of the National colors. At midnight a short intermission was held while a collation was served in the dining room, after which dancing was again resumed and continued until a late hour. Besides the guests of the house there were a number of invited guests from New York, Newark, Plainfield, Murray Hill and the 'Plains.

Owing to illness, Manager Frentz and Captain Flannery will both be out of the game at Somerville this afternoon. Joe Alberts' face will also be among the missing, as he plays with the Rahway F. C. at Rahway. These familiar faces will be missed from the usual lineup. The team will probably lineup as follows: Baldwin, ss; H. Alberts, c; Allen, 1b; Carlstrom, 3b; Schreinbeck, 2b; Ortlieb, p or rf; Weiner, p or rf; Reick, lf; Eller, cf.

Services at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours: Morning preaching, 10:45; B. Y. P. U., 7:15 p. m.; followed at 8 o'clock by the evening sermon. At the close of the morning service the monthly communion will be held.

The Town Committee met last night in the town rooms. Only the regular routine business was transacted.

The weekly prayer meeting will be held at the Methodist church tonight.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The report that the vote stood eight to four for conviction in the Trainor case at New Brunswick came as a surprise to Dunellenites who had been following the case. Seven local people testified for the State in the case, among them Mrs. Van Cleef, who instigated the action. Peter Scott was one of the jurymen. There is no announcement as to a retrial.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will be in charge of the services tomorrow and will leave Monday for Adams, N. Y., where he will spend the first part of his month's vacation. Mrs. Casselberry has been visiting relatives there for the past month.

Reports from Joseph Fisher, Joseph Galligher and Leo Logan, who are camping at Stirling, indicate that they are getting lots of fun out of their out-door vacation.

Mrs. Charles S. Day and son, Master C. Howell, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Day's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Nelson, at Roselle.

G. Archibald Brakeley is at work as a newspaper man again after a week's illness which kept him confined to his home.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Christian Endeavor Society will be in charge of the only service which will be held at the Baptist church tomorrow. Miss M. Nevius will lead and will take as her subject, "How Can We Best Serve the Church?"

The invitation dance given by the Climax Athletic Club last night was greatly enjoyed by a large number.

Gladys Thorne has returned from a visit to her uncle, John Chamberlain, of Plainfield.

Sadie Randolph is home from Westfield, where she visited friends.

Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Johnson are entertaining guests from Brooklyn.

NO LIQUOR "ADS" IN GEORGIA.

Court of Appeals Affirms Conviction of Chattanooga Dealer.

Of wide-reaching importance was the decision of the Court of Appeals at Atlantic City yesterday in the case of R. M. Rose, proprietor of a Chattanooga liquor house, against the State. The case came up on appeal from the Bartow County Court.

In affirming the decision of the lower court, finding Rose guilty of soliciting through the mails, the Court of Appeals held that it was a crime in Georgia for liquor houses to solicit trade through the mails, and that sending letters was as much soliciting as personal request, and that the crime was committed at the point where the latter was received.

The court held that this barring of the mails of liquor advertisements could not be considered infringing on the United States prerogatives.

more essential than securing culture and refinement. Every one of you must set up his own standard of character." After Mr. Jeffery's address, Harry Weber played a zither solo, and Miss Josephine M. Martin won merited applause by her rendition of a soprano solo.

Rev. E. E. Roberson emphasized two points in his remarks. He urged the graduates to work, not to compel their employers to make them work. In living and working, he urged them to work with a margin,—in morals, finance and education.

Principal Herr made a few remarks on the growth of the college previous to his presentation of the diplomas. He said that all but twenty-one of the graduates had already secured positions. He stated that between two and three hundred pupils have attended the college during the past year, and that the greatest daily enrollment has reached 97. He outlined his plans for the enlargement of the scope of the college curriculum.

Former Assemblyman Swackhamer was the last speaker. He was characteristically oratorical and spun a series of anecdotes which allayed the heat for the listeners. He displayed a gaily colored placque of a rooster, which he said he had just purchased because he felt that tre rooster, with his crow, and his spurs to back up his crow with, was something worth imitating. Self-confidence and courage of one's own convictions were the qualities the speaker brought out in his application. "Don't get carried away with money," he said, "for character is the highest and most important thing. Hold to the straight line and never swerve in your purpose."

The music was by seven members of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, under the direction of Martin A. Korff. A photograph of the exercises was taken by P. Frank Stone. The ushers were Sallo Kahn, Harry F. Lunger, Fred Stryker, William Latourette, Charles Windham, Frank Briscoe.

SNOWPLOWS CHEAP YESTERDAY

At Receiver's Sale at New Brunswick —Clay Lands Disposed Of.

While the thermometer registered 90 degrees and more at New Brunswick yesterday afternoon, a snow plaw was sold there for $1, and a double snow plow for fifty cents, at the receiver's sale of the J. B. Appleby Sand and Clay Company, by Auctioneer William A. Housell.

Four tracts of land and considerable personal property was sold. A tract of land along the Raritan River Railroad, in Milltown, of sixty-two acres, and containing clay desposits, was sold to Cornelius A. Price, of Jersey City, for $8,500. William Reinhart, of Camden, bought the Old Bridge tract, known as the Wall and Spearn farms, for $2,250; William L. Marshall, of New York, bought the Appleby property, at Old Bridge, for $3,450, and former Freeholder Joseph Allgair paid $7,100 for the remainder of the property in Old Bridge. The personal estate brought about five hundred dollars.

DEAL BALL OPENED BY GOVERNOR FORT

Deal, August 1.—The most elaborately executed society function that has been seen on the Jersey coast since the opening of the present season was the horse show ball at the beautiful Deal Casino last night. Governor John Franklin Fort opened it. Music was by the Seventn Regiment Band, of New York, and most everybody with social claims in the summer colonies of Seabright, West End, Elberon, Allenhurst, Spring Lake, and even Bay Head, was there. Together they made up a throng of some 3,000 or 4,000 people, for the most part as stunningly dressed a gathering as could be found during the summer at any resort in America.

A feature of the decoration was the transformation of the large swimming pool which faces the Casino, and of the walks surrounding it, so that they suggested some beautiful Venetian scene. The pool is about 100 by 200 feet, and upon it floated a couple of gondolas, from which professional singers in costume rendered vocal music to the accompaniment of stringed instruments. Covering the space adjacent to the pool were hundreds of palms and large potted plants. Electricians had woven a mesh of tiny electric bulbs through them, and among them were the tables, upon which a New York caterer served refreshments.

Coming with Governor Fort from the State encampment at Sea Girt was his full staff and more than a score of other officers, both of the National Guard and of the regular army. In their dress uniforms, they gave to the scene a touch of the military with decidedly good effect.

On the committee of entertainment were Mayor Hogencamp, Charles Fritz, Fred Gerken, Charles D. Bernheimer, E. G. Snow, Jr., Harry B. Hemming, Louis Prout, H. Nicholas Crusius, Joseph E. Meyer, Arthur McAlenen, Harry A. Content, Gerald Meyer, Fred Gerken, Jr., J. J. O'Donohue, 3d, Herbert S. Mesick, Louis W. Minford, Jr., and Edward G. Burghard.

SINGERS' VOICES SEALED.

Grand Opera Singers to Be Heard a Hundred Years Hence.

How would you like to hear Mozart or Wagner himself interpret his own works? Suppose you could hear Moliere recite his comedies! Some such thing will be possible for future generations. Through the gift of Alfred Clarke, a New Yorker, a vault has been built in the cellars of the Paris Opera House in which hermetically sealed lead caskets containing numbers of records of present day singers and orchestral pieces have been placed. One hundred years from now our descendants may hear, as we do, with delight the wonderful tenor of Caruso, the mellow sympathetic voice of Sembrich or Melba, or the thundering tones of Plancon. The vault is hermetically sealed and the key to the doors is placed with the archives of the Opera. The door cannot be opened for fifty years and after that, only with the permission of the Minister des Beaux Arts. The records include the voices of Caruso, Scotti, Plancon, Tamagano, Melba, Patti, Schumann-Heink, Calve, Kubelik, Renaud, Pugno and others.

William E. Taylor Dead.

William E. Taylor, of Hackensack, who attracted widespread attention years ago by his novel methods in advertising his real estate auction sales, died in Belmar Thursday night from paralysis. He was fifty-seven years old and leaves four sons.

HOLDING BABY SHE STABS HER RIVAL.

Wife Cuts Young Girl She Finds Standing Beside Her Husband in Street.

New York, Aug. 1.—Seeing a young girl standing beside her husband as he sold peaches from a push-cart at Seventh street and Cooper Square, yesterday, Mrs. Marie Consalate, 27 years old, with a baby in her arms and a girl of 3 tugging at her skirts, rushed up and stabbed the girl in the neck and in the right cheek.

The woman, still carrying the baby, was arrested after a chase, and her young victim, Marie Bogo, 18 years old, who lives in Eleventh street, near First avenue, was taken to Bellevue Hospital. The stab wound in her cheek will leave a scar, but the one in her neck was only a small cut.

The wife was held in $1,000 bail for trial, and was sent to the Tombs.

PROVIDING SEATS FOR NEW JERSEY MOTORMEN.

Owing to the protests of the people living in Verona and Caldwell, the Public Service Corporation announced yesterday that it will run its pay-as-you-enter cars to those points when they are put on the Montclair line next week. It was originally intended to run the cars only as far as Montclair, because an extra fare is collected to the other points, and with the pay-as-you-enter system in operation it seemed impossible to make an additional collection from the passengers without much confusion arising.

The company believes that this trouble will be obviated by having inspectors board the cars as they enter and depart from Montclair, who will collect the extra nickel. A seat for the motorman is an innovation on the cars. Should the use of the seats result in carelessness on the part of the motormen, the company announces that they will be removed from the cars.

MONTCLAIR'S GALLANTRY.

Policemen Instructed to Escort Women Afraid to Go Home in the Dark.

Montclair has established another point of superiority over its rivals, the Oranges. Patrick Reynolds, a patrolman, was dismissed from the police force of South Orange because he went off his post of duty to escort a young woman to her home. The Montclair policemen are under orders from their gallant chief, "Harry" Gallagher, to act in the capacity of escort to any woman to her home after dark, providing she makes such a request.

A woman who is afraid to traverse the streets alone when the shades of night fall, may ask a policeman to conduct her to her destination, and under the existing rules he can promptly respond to this call. Upon his return to his post of duty, all that is required of him is to call up headquarters and report the gallant service that he has performed.

A FEW HINTS FOR HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

In very warm weather to rub the body violently after getting out of a tub is not beneficial unless the plunge has been a cold one. Then active friction is required to restore circulation. Otherwise less heat may be generated by merely patting the body with a soft towel, drying off the moisture without bringing the blood to the surface.

Any king of exercise, such as sweeping or lifting a slight weight, grasping it firmly, will develop the forearm. The object is to use the hands in such a way as to bring up the cords and muscles of the arms. Closing the hands, with the fingers lying in the palms, and then pressing down the fingers, will use the muscle above the wrist and is developing.

It is hard for the woman who is obliged to remain in office and store all day to keep her skin from assuming that yellow tint which is so fatal to her other charms. A corrective for sallowness is sometimes found in wiping the skin with a lotion of two drams of iodide of potassium, an ounce of glycerine and a pint or rain water. Apply with a little sponge several times a day, and at night, letting it dry on.

You can perfume your clothes in simple ways. For instance, you can keep your winter clothing and furs in ground cloves and other spices. This will make them sweet and will keep the moths out at the same time. Powdered orris root rubbed into the skin after the bath will give a sweet odor. Your bath can have bags of lavender and sweet cloves, dried from summer, stirred into them, and you can use a spray of toilet water upon your underwear, which will become sweet. The thing lies in using perfumes constantly. A little every day is better by far than a great deal once in a while.

A soothing foot bath is made by mixing an ounce of powdered alum with two ounces each of salt and borax. Of this a tablespoonful is put with two gallons of hot water and the feet should be soaked in the solution for fifteen minutes. Sea salt, a couple of handfuls of it to a foot tub of water, is another coloing bath; and still another is to soak the feet in simple warm water and then rub them with spirits of turpentine. Fresh lemon juice is also cooling.

In order to preserve the whiteness of the neck demanded by the present lowcut gowns, most women will find it necessary to use some good cold cream or emollient. One that is found very helpful in whitening the neck is made from the raw white of an egg beaten to a froth, into which an equal quantity of sweet oil has been added. After the oil is put in it is beaten again and applied to the neck with a soft cloth. After this mixture is thoroughly wiped off the neck is washed with soap and water.

DO NOT NEGLECT THE FLATIRON

The needle is not the ily implement required in the making and keeping of clothes. A flatiron is a close second.

The tailored skirt, especially, is in constant need of being pressed.

The pressing of a suit requires some skill—but more patience and care.

In the case of a pleated skirt, first baste in place each pleat its entire unstitched length with fine cotton; coarse thread will leave its imprint after pressing.

When a skirt is put over the padded board, place a chair or small table beneath it to lift the skirt to prevent stretching.

Provide two hot irons—heavy irons are best—and cover the portion to be pressed with a piece of doubled unbleached muslin thoroughly wet.

Do not "iron," but literally "press," lifting the iron from place to place rather than rubbing it over the surface. The iron should not be allowed to remain too long in one place, or it will leave its imprint.

The seams of coats and sleeves may be pressed over a broomstick which has been evenly paded and covered with muslin.

Newer Than the Sheath Skirt.

The sheath skirt, it would seem, is sufficiently "new." But there is a skirt which is newer, says Vogue.

The "really new" skirt, which we find is silk cachemire, in heavy crepe de chine, in thick eastern silks of all kinds, as in supple light cloths, is made with folds dragged across the front from bust to ankles, the tendency of the lines being to mount toward the back, perhaps crossing over obliquely there and ending under the buckle on one hip, or at the shoulder blade. Fancy this in dead leaf color, meager as to underskirt, slightly trailing, and worn with a taffeta coat in light jade green, which, short-waisted and tailless behind, has two long side pieces that almost reach the ankles, fringed and embroidered in soutache.

There is a soft sash of black liberty satin, which is carried across the bust under the coat, high enough behind to just show under the short coat back, and crossing there, returning to droop in front and knot at the bend of the limbs.

Others Spell It Chumley.

There was a fair golfer named Cholmondely,
With a face so uncommonly colmondely,
That fellows who came
To join in the game
Could only makes tees for her dolmondely.

HANDKERCHIEFS SEEN IN THE SHOPS.

It was not so long ago that women considered colored pocket handkerchiefs incorrect. Now these are widely used. Not only are borders of white handkerchiefs in colors, but there is a wide display of colored stripes over the surface.

The latest development is to have a fine linen handkerchief in a light color with a border in white and the initials embroidered in white across the croner.

Even when one does not care for so much color, the all-white handkerchief has an embroidered design in a faint color in the corner with the initials in the centre.

The empire design is still very much favored; Mercury wings are considered new and pretty and circles of solid embroidery one-sixteenth of an inch wide are used with the initials in teh centre.

All of these come in different grades of linen and handiwork. It is not necessary to pay $1.50 for a handkerchief to get it in the latest style of coloring.

Those who have plain white handkerchiefs and want some fancy work to take away with them in the summer could get colored mercerized floss to use in embroidering tiny block initials across the corners.

The long family monogram has been out of style for some time. There is no sign of its return. The letters are not interlaced any more. They are rather widely separated. They are small and done in the open block shape which is easy to do and easy to read.

All the pastel colors are preferred to the vivid ones. Red, purple and green are voided. Dull blue, pale pink and light violet are used instead.

THE NEWEST STYLES IN CALLING CARDS.

Three inches and a half is supposed to be the proper size for a lady's visiting card, and three inches by one inch and a half for a gentleman's.

There have been some slight variations in size, however, in ladies' cards of late, and their tendency is to become smaller and smaller. Small cards are more convenient to carry, but the old-fashioned size is the best style.

Some people assert that the first visiting cards originated from playing cards when ladies used to stake enormous sums on "faro" and "Pope Joan."

At the end of an exciting evening some of the players would clamor for another meeting, at which they could have their revenge, and one of the ladies would scrawl her name and address on one of the cards they had been playing with, adding, the day and hour for the renewal of hostilities.

Cards would seem to be returning to their original use, for after years of gentle seclusion they find themselves writer in all kinds of ways and unceremoniously sent by post.

A USEFUL GIFT TO THE BRIDE.

A set of dust protectors to cover her clothes as they hang in the closet was the most useful gift that one spring bride found in her linen chest. They were just big enough to cover a waist or the top of a skirt, though one could make them larger.

Cross-barred dimity showing a dainty pink or blue flowered design is attractive for this purpose. A piece of six oreight yards will make as many as most women require. Remnants can be found on the wash goods counters, and even if one cannot pick up a piece of sufficient length to make a complete set of protectors, two or three kinds will answer well.

The material is cut in thirty-inch squares. The two raw edges are then hemmed on the machine. In the centre of this square cut out and eyelet and neatly roll the curved edge on the wrong sid and hem it by hand. This provides an opening for the wire part of the coat or skiret hanger.

A set of eight or ten dust covers can easily be made in an afternoon, and when once they have been used they will always be included in the dress closet furnishings.

Dimity covers are better for hanging over light dresses, and if thicker and more substantial ones are liked, brown Holland or any good quality and color of linen can be made into squares. Being flat, they wash perfectly, and materials that will stand occasional cleansing are the kind to select for this purpose. When colored embroidery cotton is used it is well to be sure that it is washable. After the garment is slipped on the wooden or wire hanger the dust square is hung over the top and allowed to fall as it will. A thirty-inch square is large enough to let it come well over the coat or skirt.

For a Summer Day.

This is excellent and has the merit of being non-alcoholic: Cook together one pound sugar and a half-pina water until it spins like a thread. Take from the fire and turn over a large cup of strong tea. Add the juice of six lemons and the same number of oranges, with a quart of grape juice, and stand aside over night. When ready to serve add sliced fruits and the water, plain or mineral, with ice in the punch bowl. If desired, cut a half-pound of marshmallows into quarters and allow three to each glass.

OF UNTOLD VALUE.

The Information Contained in This Citizen's Statement Is Priceless.

The hale, the hearty, the strong can afford to toss this paper to one side impatiently when they read the following, but any sufferer in Plainfield who has suffered hours of torture caused by kidney complaint will stand in his own light if he does not follow the valuable advice offered here.

John W. Snedecker, of 244 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "While suffering from kidney troubles, I used to feel in the morning that my sleep had not done me a bit of good, and all during the day I would suffer from a dull backache. Matters ran along in this way for some time, and I began to be bothered more and more with that tired, languid feeling of weakness and depression. My mother advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I did so with very encouraging results, as I am now well and entirely free from backache and that feeling of weakness. I sleep well at night and feel that my rest is beneficial."

OF CASUAL CONCERN.

Fifteen thousand pictures are now on exhibition in the two great salons in Paris. These represent about three acres of canvas. The total length of the pictures without their frames would be nearly ten miles. Reckoning one minute to look at every picture, and without taking any rest by day or night, it would take ten days and ten hours to see every picture in the two salons.

What is claimed to be the tallest chimney in the world is now under construction at the Great Falls, Mont., smelter of the Amalgamated Copper Company. This stack has a foundation 74 feet in diameter, and will rise to a height of 560 feet, with a 54-foot diameter top. Its position is on a bluff overlooking the Missouri River, and connection with the furnaces will be made by a flue 20 feet high, 48 feet wide and 1,800 feet long. The tallest chimney hitherto built is that of the Halsbrucker Hutte, near Freiberg, Germany, 460 feet in height.

Former Congressman Joseph E Thropp appears to be the busiest captain of industry in Bedford county. He is owner of the Everett and Saxton furnaces, which mined 11,900 tons of bituminous coal coal in Huntingdon county in June. It was taken from the operations at Gordon slope and Melrose, both in Carbon township, of which Robert H. Kay, of Saxton, is superintendent. The other coal mines of the country are running on about one-third time, except those of the Rock Hill Coal and Iron Company at Robertsdale and Woodvale, which are running very steadily. This company has just shipped 10,000 tons of coal to France.

A new pay car has recently been put into commission on the Monongahela and Conemaugh division of the Pennsylvania Railroad. It has a fine shower bath, the first to be installed in any car of its kind in the United States. There are six sleeping cots of gleaming brass, and the interior of the car looks like an arsenal, for it has a complete set of the latest shooting arms, calculated to discourage the pilfering ambitions of the nerviest individual. There is a burglar-proof safe, which only time can unlock when set. The banking end of the coach can be converted at will into an observation parlor and an elegantly appointed superintendent's office.

If there's anything approaching an extirpation of Alaska's big game it won't be the fault of Congress. Alaska's Governor is empowered to permit hunting and the shipping of trophies (moose heads, etc.), but the issue of licenses is strictly regarded. Since May 11, this year, "the wanton destruction of wild game animals or wild birds, except eagles, ravens and cormorants, the destruction of nests and eggs of such birds, or the killing of any wild birds other than game birds, except eagles, for the purpose of selling the same or the skins or any part thereof," have been punishable offenses in Alaska. Notice the discrimination against the proud bird of freedom. Had he no friends in Congress this year?

WHEN TO BUY VEGETABLES.

Many persons buy green groceries late Saturday night, thinking they will be fresher for Sunday, but the experienced buyer will make her selection Friday. As Saturday is a busy day with grocers and hucksters, they do not make their purchases on Saturday, but beforehand, and the latest Friday. It is then that one has an opportunity to select the freshest vegetables on the market.

If lettuce is purchased, place it in a wet cheesecloth bag and hang in the ice chest or lay in the cold cellar. It will be as fresh as if just cut when taken from the bag. Cucumbers should be kept cold, though not frozen, and they should be placed in cold water one hour before they are pared. Radishes should be soaked also before they are divided in halves or qaurters and all doubtful ones cut, and, if not pithy, reserved.

Do not remove berries from the boxes to wash them, but let running water flow over them and it will carry off ffall sand or dust. After draining they may be carefully looked over and bad ones taken out. Fruit that is too ripe to serve uncooked should be immediately cooked and cooled.

A Moment's Rest.

If overworked homemakers whose nerves are "worn to frazzle edge" would acquire the habit of sitting or lying absolutely still, relaxed and motionless, for ve or ten minutes twice a day, they would soon see improvement. The mind must be relaxed, worries dropped, thoughts wandering to pleasant things. You will probably try this several times before you get it right, but after a little practise you will find that it yields large returns, far surpassing the sacrifice of te time it takes to practise it.

Medicinal Value of Lavender.

It is a well-known fact that workers among lavender beds seldom take infectious ailments, and those engaged in the perfumary trade are singularly free from them. A good perfume, in the old days, was considered an excellent disinfectant. The doctors then used to carry walking sticks with silver or gold knobs. These opened with a lid disclosing a tiny vinaigrette box, which the physician held to his nose when entering rooms containing patients ill with any infectious disease.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORIES

By CLEVELAND MOFFETT

FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE PINKERTONS

Copyright by G. W. Dillingham Co.

The Rock Island Express

Mr. Pinkerton, being informed by Jones of Schwartz' application, used his influence to have it granted. When the young man started east he did not travel alone. His every movement was watched and reported, nor was he left unguarded for a moment, day or night, during an absence of several weeks, in New York, Philadelphia and other eastern cities.

WATT FIRED THE PISTOL AND SCHWARTZ USED THE POKER.

To one unfamiliar with the resources and organization of a great detective system it is incomprehensible how continuous "shadowing" day after day and week after week, through thousands of miles of journeying, can be accomplished. The matter is made none the simpler when you know that there must be a change of "shadows" every day. However adroit the detective, his continued presence in a locality would soon arouse suspicion. The daily change of "shadows" is easy when the man under watch remains in one place; for then it is only necessary to send a new "shadow" from the central office early each morning to replace the one who "put the man to bed" the night before. But it is very different when the subject is constantly traveling about on boats or railways, and perhaps sleeping in a different town each night. Without the network of agencies, including large and small bureaus, that the Pinkertons have gradually established all over the United States, the "shadowing" of a man in rapid flight would be impossible. As it is, nothing is easier. Schwartz, for instance, spent several days in Buffalo, where his actions were reported hour by hour until he bought his ticket for Philadelphia. As he took the train a fresh "shadow" took it too, securing a section in the same sleeping car with him, and taking his meals at the same time Schwartz took his, either in the dining-car or at stations. No sooner had the train left the station than the Pinkerton representative in Buffalo reported by cipher-dispatch to the bureau in Philadelphia, whither Schwartz was going. The exact form of the dispatch, which well illustrates a system in constant use in the Pinkerton bureaus, was as follows:

"R. J. Linden, 441 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.—Anxious shoes sucker Brown marbles man other dropping eight arrives put grand fifty marbles articles along or derby coat ship very tan seer wearing these have and is ribbon ink dust central Tuesday for dust to rice hat and paper vest yellow ink get must jewelry morning depot on.

In dispatches of this sort important information regarding criminals is constantly flashing over the wires, with no danger of any "leak."

Thus, from one city to another, and through every part of the country, any criminal may be "shadowed" to-day as Schwartz was "shadowed," one set of detectives relieving another every 24 hours, and the man's every word and action be carefully noted down and reported, without his having the faintest suspicion that he is under observation. The task of "shadowing" a person who is traversing city streets is intrusted to men especially skilled in the art (for art it is) of seeing without being seen. This is, indeed, one of the most difficult tasks a detective is called upon to perform, and the few who excel in it are given little else to do. Where a criminal like Schwartz, upon whose final capture much depends, is being followed, two, three, or even four "shadows" are employed simultaneously, one keeping in advance, one in the rear, and two on either side. The advantage of this is that one relieves the other by change of position, thus lessening the chance of discovery, while, of course, it is scarcely possible for several "shadows" to be thrown off the trail at once. An adroit criminal might outwit one "shadow," but he could scarcely outwit four. A "shadow," on coming into a new town with a subject, reveals himself to the "shadow" who is to relieve him by some prearranged signal, like a handkerchief held in the left hand.

The result of the "shadowing" in Schwartz' case was conclusive. No sooner was the brakeman out of Chicago than he began spending money far in excess of his income. He bought fine furniture, expensive clothing, articles of jewelry, presents for his wife, and laid in an elaborate supply of rifles, shotguns, revolvers and all sorts of ammunition, including a quantity of cartridges. The "shadows" found that in almost every case he paid for his purchases with $50 or $100 bills. As far as possible these bills were secured by the detectives from the persons to whom they had been paid, immediately after Schwartz' departure. It will be remembered that the money taken in the robbery consisted of $50 and $100 bills.

In addition to this, it was found, by the investigations of detectives at Philadelphia, that Schwartz was the son of a wealthy retired butcher there, a most respectable man, and that he had a wife and child in Philadelphia, whom he had entirely deserted. This gave an opportunity to take him into custody and still conceal from him that he was suspected of committing a higher crime. The Philadelphia wife and child were taken on to Chicago, and Schwartz was placed under arrest, charged with bigamy.

Mr. Pinkerton went to the jail at once, and, wishing to keep Schwartz' confidence as far as possible, assured him that this arrest was not his work at all, but that of Detectives Smith and Murray, who were, as Schwartz knew, working in the interests of the railroad people and of the Chicago newspaper. Mr. Pinkerton told Schwartz that he still believed, as he had done all along, that Watt was the guilty man, and promised to do whatever he could to befriend Schwartz. The latter did not appear to be very much alarmed, and said that a Philadelphia lawyer was coming on to defend him. The lawyer did come a few days later, when a bond for $2,000 was furnished for Schwartz' reappearance, and he was set at liberty. Matters had gone so far, however, that it was not considered safe to leave Schwartz out of jail, and he was immediately rearrested on the charge of murder.

Whether because of long preparation for this ordeal or because he was a man of strong character, Schwartz received this blow without the slightest show of emotion, and went back into the jail as coolly as he had come out. He merely requested that he might have an interview with his wife as soon as possible.

Mr. Pinkerton had evidence enough against Schwartz to furnish a strong presumption of guilt; but it was all circumstantial, and, besides, it did not involve Newton Watt, whose complicity was more than suspected. From the first Mr. Pinkerton had been carefully conciliatory of the later Mrs. Schwartz. At just the right moment, and by adroit management, he got her under his direction, and by taking a train with her to Morris, and then on the next morning taking another train back to Chicago, he succeeded in preventing her from getting the advice of her husband's lawyer, who was meantime making the same double journey on pursuing trains with the design of cautioning her against speaking to Mr. Pinkerton. She had come to regard Mr. Pinkerton more as a protector than as an enemy, and he, during the hours they were together, used every device to draw from her some damaging admission. He told her that the evidence against her husband, although serious in its character, was not, in his opinion, sufficient to establish his guilt. He told her of the bills found in Schwartz' possession, of the torn piece of the draft taken from the valise, of the marks on his hands and the lies he had told. All this, he said, proved that Schwartz had some connection with the robbery, but not that he had committed the murder, or done more than assist Watt, whom Mr. Pinkerton professed to regard as the chief criminal. The only hope of saving her husband now, he impressed upon her, was for her to make a plain statement of the truth, and trust that he would use this in her husband's interest.

After listening to all that he said, and trying in many ways to evade the main question, Mrs. Schwartz at last admitted to Mr. Pinkerton that her husband had found a package containing $5,000 of the stolen money under one of the seats on Conductor Danforth's train on the night of his return to Chicago. He had kept this money and used it for his own purposes, but had been guilty of no other offense in the matter. Mrs. Schwartz stuck resolutely to this statement, and would admit nothing further.

Believing that he had drawn from her as much as he could, Mr. Pinkerton now accompanied Mrs. Schwartz to the jail, where she was to see her husband. The first words she said, on enetring the room where he was, were: "Harry, I have told Mr. Pinkerton the whole truth. I thought that was the best way, for he is your friend. I told him about your finding the $5,000 under the seat of the car, and that was all you had to do with the business."

For the first time Schwartz' emotions nearly betrayed him. However, he braced himself, and only admitted in a general way that there was some truth in what his wife had said. He refused positively to go into details, seemed very nervous, and almost immediately asked to be left alone with his wife. Mr. Pinkerton had been expecting this, and was prepared for it. He realized the shock that would be caused in Schwartz' mind by his wife's unexpected confession, and counted on this to lead to further admissions. It was, therefore, of the highest importance that credible witnesses should overhear all that transpired in the interview between Schwartz and his wife. With this end in view, the room where the interview was to take place had been arranged so that a number of witnesses could see and hear without their presence being suspected, and the sheriff of the county, a leading merchant, and a leading banker of the town, were waiting there in readiness.

As soon as the door had closed and the husband and wife were left alone, Schwartz exclaimed:

"You fool, you have put a rope around Watt's and my neck!"

"Why, Harry, I had to tell something, he knew so much. You can trust him."

"You ought to know better than to trust anybody."

The man walked back and forth, a prey to the most violent emotions, his wife trying vainly to quiet him. At each affectionate touch he would brush her off roughly, with a curse, and go on pacing back and forth fiercely. Suddenly he burst out:

"What did you do with that coat—the one you cut the mask out of?"

"Oh, that's all right; it's in the woodshed, under the whole woodpile."

They continued to talk for over an hour, referring to the murder and robbery repeatedly, and furnishing evidence enough to establish beyond any question the guilt of both Schwartz and Watt.

Meantime Watt had been arrested in Chicago, also charged with murder, and in several examinations had shown signs of breaking down and confessing, but in each instance had recovered himself and said nothing. The evidence of Schwartz himself, however, in the interview at the jail, taken with the mass of other evidence that had accumulated, was sufficient to secure the conviction of both men, who were condemned at the trial to life-imprisonment in the Joliet penitentiary. They would undoubtedly have been hanged but for the conscientious scruples of one juryman, who did not believe in capital punishment. Watt has since died, but Schwartz, at last accounts, was still in prison.

About a year after the trial Schwartz' Chicago wife died of consumption. On her deathbed she made a full confession. She said that her husband's mind had been inflamed by the constant reading of sensational literature of the dime-novel order; and that under this evil influence he had planned the robbery, believing that it would be easy to intimidate a weak little man like Nichols and escape with the money without harming him. Nichols, however, had fought like a tiger up and down the car, and had finally forced them to kill him. In the fight he had torn off the mask that Mrs. Schwartz had made out of one of her husband's old coats. It was Watt who fired the pistol, while Schwartz used the poker. Schwartz had given Watt $5,000 of the stolen money, and had kept the rest himself. He had carried the money away in an old satchel bought for the purpose. A most unusual place of concealment had been chosen, and one where the money had escaped discovery, although on several occasions, in searching the house, the detectives had literally held it in their hands. Schwartz had taken a quantity of the cartridges he bought for his shotgun, and emptying them, had put in each shell one of the $50 or $100 bills, upon which he had then loaded in the powder and the shot in the usual way, so that the shells presented the ordinary appearance as they lay in the drawer. The detectives had even picked out some of the shot and powder in two or three of the shells; but, finding them so like other cartridges, had never thought of probing clear to the bottom of the shell for a crumpled-up bill.

Thus about $13,000 lay for weeks in these ordinary looking cartridges, and were finally removed in the following way: While Schwartz was in jail a well-known lawyer of Philadelphia came to Mrs. Schwartz one day with an order from her husband to deliver the money over to him. She understood this was to defray the expenses of the trial and to pay the other lawyers. Superintendent Robertson remembers well the dying woman's emotion as she made this solemn declaration, one calculated to compromise seriously a man of some standing and belonging to an honored profession. Her body was wasted with disease, and she knew that her end was near. There was a flush on her face, and her eyes were bright with hatred as she declared that not one dollar of that money was ever returned to her, or ever used in paying the costs of her husband's trial. Nor was one dollar of it ever returned to the railroad company, or to the bank officials, who were the real owners.

The first, and probably the most daring, band of train robbers that ever operated in the United States was the notorious Reno gang, an association of desperate outlaws who, in the years immediately following the war, committed crimes without number in Missouri and Indiana, and for some years terrorized several counties in the region about Seymour in the last-named state. The leaders of this band were four brothers, John Reno, Frank Reno, "Sim" Reno and William Reno, who rivaled one another in a spirit of lawlessness that must have been born in their blood through the union of a hardy Swiss emigrant with a woman sprung from the Pennsylvania Dutch. Of the six children from this marriage only one escaped the restless, law-despising taint that made the others desperate characters, this single white sheep being "Clint" Reno, familiarly known as "Honest" Reno, and much despised by the rest of the family for his peaceful ways. Even Laura Reno, the one daughter, famed throughout the west for her beauty, loved danger and adventure, was an expert horsewoman, an unerring shot, and as quick with her gun as any man. Laura fairly worshiped her desperado brothers, whom she aided in more than one of their criminal undertakings, shielding them from justice when hard pressed, and swearing to avenge them when retribution overtook them after their day of triumph.

During the war the Renos had become notorious as bounty-jumpers; and at its close, with a fine scorn for the ways of commonplace industry, these fierce-hearted, dashing young fellows, all well-built, handsome boys, cast about for further means of excitement and opportunities to make an easy living. Beginning their operations in a small way with housebreaking and store robberies, they soon proved themselves so reckless in their daring, so fertile in expedients, so successful in their coups, that they quickly extended their field until, in the early part of 1866, they had placed a wide region under contribution, setting all forms of law at defiance.

John Reno and Frank Reno, the elder brothers, were at this time the dominating spirits of the band, and they soon associated with them several of the most skillful and notorious counterfeiters and safe burglars in the country, among these being Peter McCartney, James and Robert Rittenhouse, George McKay, John Dean, alias "California Nelse," and William Hopkins. The band soon came to be named with the greatest dread and awe, good citizens fearing to speak a word of censure, lest swift punishment be visited upon them. The Reno influence made itself felt even in local politics, corrupt officials being elected at the instigation of the outlaws, so that their conviction became practically impossible.

The Renos, toward the end of 1866, began a series of train robberies which were carried out with such perfection of organization, such amazing coolness, and such uniform success as to attract national attention. The first of these robberies took place on the Ohio & Mississippi railroad, being accomplished by only four men, Frank and John Reno, assisted by William Sparks and Charles Gerroll. Other train robberies followed in quick succession, the same method being used in each, with the same immunity from capture, so that people in this region would say to one another, quite as a matter of course: "The Reno boys got away with another train yesterday."

But while indulging in its own acts of outlawry, the Reno band strenuously objected to any rivalry or competition on the part of other highwaymen. A train robbery was perpetrated on the Jeffersonville railroad early in 1867. The Renos had no connection with this robbery. It was accomplished by two young men named Micnael Collins and Walker Hammond, the two men escaping with $6,000 taken from a messenger of the Adams Express company. But their horses had carried them only a short distance from the looted train when they found themselves surrounded by the formidable Renos, who had quietly watched the robbery from a place of concealment, and now unceremoniously relieved the robbers of their plunder. Not content with this, and as if to intimidate others from like trespasses on their preserves, the Renos used their influence to have their rivals arrested for the crime by which they had profited so little; and both were subsequently tried, convicted and sentenced to long terms in the Indiana penitentiary. The Renos, meantime, although they were known to have secured and kept the $6,000, were allowed to go unmolested, and continued their depredations.

Up to this time the Reno gang had confined their operations for the most part to Indiana; but now they began to make themselves felt in Missouri, where a number of daring crimes were committed, notably the robbing of the county treasurer's safe at Gallatin, in Daviess county. In this last act John Reno was known to have been personally concerned. The case was placed in the hands of Allan Pinkerton.

JOY FOR EVERY DAY

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D., Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Moody's Church, Chicago.

Let us analyze the joy of the resurrection morn and see if we cannot have it every day. There were seven elements in this joy, a sort of rainbow of promise.

There was the joy of receiving more than they expected. The women came with spices and oil to anoint, perhaps to embalm, the Lord. Instead of a corpse they find a king. Expecting death, they find life. Embalming gives place to joyful worship. They are looking for difficulty in rolling the stone away; when they arrive the difficulty is overcome. The stone is away and an angel upon it. The joy of this disappointed unbelief illustrates God's way of doing. He delights in surprising us; He gives more than we can ask or think.

The Joy of Faith Confirmed.

The open sepulchre was the confirmation of every claim which Jesus Christ had made. He claimed that He and the Father are one. "Before Abraham was, I am," and His resurrection proves it. It is the stamp of Heaven upon His deity. Every doctrine He taught, every miracle He performed, every hope He inspired, is confirmed.

Joy of Light from Heaven.

Not the radiance of the angel's face, though that was glorious; not the halo about the head of the risen Lord, but the light of the exhortation, "Fear not. He is not here. He is risen." As I trace through the Bible God's "fear nots" I find in them light for every experience of life.

The Joy of Victory.

There was physical victory. Look at the body of Christ as it is taken from the cross, clotted with blood; eyes glazed in death; hands limp at the side, needing the strength of loving friends to bear it to the sepulchre. Now see Him as He walks from the tomb in the full vigor of physical manhood. I see in this for the Christian the promise and potency of complete victory over all forces that make for death.

There was political victory. That seal, part of it attached to the rock of the mountain and part attached to the stone, none but an angel dare touch.

There was also moral victory. The forces of evil had prevailed and the sun of righteousness seemed for a while to have gone down in gloom. Demons of darkness may now dance for joy. The King has been captured. Yes, but within the very walls of death He has demolished every fortress. Every day we may have a joy of anticipated physical, national and moral victory.

Joy of Telling Our Joy to Others.

"They did run to bring His disciples word." We pity the man who has a Christ that only lived, acted and died. He may admire Him as a hero, honor Him as a martyr, canonize Him as a saint, but he can never have great joy in telling others about Him. It is only those who believe Christ divine and, therefore, the Saviour from all sin and with all power in Heaven and earth who can experience ecstasy of heart in proclaiming Him unto others.

Joy of Risen Lord's Presence.

Two men are on their way home from the city, where they have buried their hopes. Sad and depressed, they are on their way home, when a stranger falls in with them and begins to explain to them the scriptures as written by Moses concerning the Messiah. Their hearts burn with a peculiar fervor. They are uplifted in spirit. To have the risen Christ walk with us when we are not conscious of His appearance, but at the same time to reveal to us His preciousness and appear in such a way as to make our hearts burn with love and gratitude, is a joy to be coveted and experienced every day.

The Joy of Hope.

Jesus said to the women, "Go tell My disciples that they shall see Me in Galilee." It was simply a promise that they should soon meet Him. And the ascended Christ has said to us: "Just as ye have seen Me go up into Heaven, so shall ye see Me come again in like manner."

The promise of the coming of the Lord has made narrow this "star-sown vague of space," and makes it but a thin veil between us and the objects of our love. It brings us, perhaps, within a few hours of meeting our risen Lord and glorified friends. Then, ah! then, an everlasting resurrection.

Alcohol Consumes.

A patient was arguing with the doctor on the necessity of his taking a stimulant. Said he: "But doctor, I must have some kind of stimulant. I am cold and it warms me." "Precisely," came the doctor's crusty answer. "See here. This stick is cold," taking a stick of wood from the box beside the hearth and tossing it into the fire. "Now it is warm, but is the stick benefited?" The sick man watched the wood first send out little puffs of smoke, and then burst into a flame, and replied: "Of course not. It is burning itself." And so are you, when you are warming yourself with alcohol; you are literally burning up the delicate tissues of your stomach and brain.

BEERS AND LONG WIN IN THE S.S.A.L. DOUBLES

Albert D. Beers and Monroe H. Long, representing the Crescent Avenue church, won the Sunday-school Athletic League championship in tennis by defeating F. O. Dunning and Chauncey Murphey, of the First Presbyterian church, in the final round of the doubles tournament played yesterday afternoon at the Park Club. The scores were 6-0, 6-0, 6-1.

As winners of the match, Beers and Long will each receive a silver medal; Dunning and Murphey will receive bronze medals as members of the runners-up team. The First Presbyterian Sunday-school players win the point cup for their school with a total of 18 points, although they did not win the title in either singles or doubles. Beers won three points for Crescent Avenue by taking the singles title, and he and Long yesterday chalked up three more for their school, making the total 16½ points. The Congregationalists finished with 5 points, Seventh-Day Baptists, 4; First Baptists, 3½.

This is the first season that there has been a league tennis tournament, and there were a large number of entries from the various local Sunday-schools. It is planned to have somt sort of an informal social time when the pewter trophy is awarded to the First Presbyterian Sunday-school and when the medals are presented to the winners and runners-up in the two tournaments. Beers carried off most of the honors and will receive two silver medals, one as winner of the singles title and the other as a member of the winning doubles team. He won all his matches in straight sets, clearly outclassing all competitors.

WANT FARMERS TO PLANT FOR BIRDS.

The State Fish and Game Commission has notified Game Warden George Phifer at Millville that to any farmer who will plant buckwheat and leave the same standing for the birds they will furnish the seed.

The Millville Rod and Gun Association will accordingly solicit among the farmers and induce them to sow the seed in the interest of sport. The commission believes that more game birds die of starvation in a year than are killed in a season's hunting.

Mrs. Joseph Walls, of Essex street, is spending two weeks at Atlantic City.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Norman E. Mack, chairman of the National Democratic committee, at Buffalo yesterday announced these appointments to the committee for the campaign:

TATHAM LOSES JOB.

Deposed As Manager of Asbury Park Auto Show.

The bright course of C. Wood Tatham, who was engaged by Asbury Park to organize its September automobile carnival, has been obscured by clouds in the shape of unpaid board and entertainment bills, and until these and a few other misunderstandings have been cleared away, he will be allowed to have nothing more to do with the management of the automobile carnival projected for next September.

Notice was formally given out yesterday by the business men who have been promoting the affair that he was no longer authorized to collect subscriptions, or to represent them in any way.

The Misses Amy and Elsie Moore, of West Fourth street, left this morning for Carbondale, Pa., where they will spend two weeks with relatives.

RAILROAD WRECK IS COSTLY.

Collision of Freight Trains at Prospect Plains Involves Loss of $50,000.

Jamesburg, Aug. 1.—One of the most disastrous railroads wrecks in the history of the Camden and Amboy division of the Pennsylvania Railroad took place yesterday at Prospect Plains, two miles from this place, and as a result the tracks at the point where the wreck took place was blockaded for eight hours.

No lives were lost and this fact is miraculous, as the train that ran into the one ahead was a fast through train with through orders. The trains in the mixup were both freights and both westbound. Train No. 1225 received orders to take the siding at Prospect Plains to allow train No. 1414, a fast freight, to pass the former. At Jamesburg the trains were only running three minutes apart, and when No. 1225 arrived at Prospect Plains it entered the siding, but did not stop, but continued to "drift" through the siding out on the main track again.

The engine and about ten cars had entered the main track, when along rushed the through train and smashed into the extra. The engineer and fireman of the Waverly train jumped and saved their lives. Eight loaded freight cars were demolished and piled up along the track. The engine of the train that run into the one leaving the siding was a complete wreck, being hurled twenty feet by the impact and thrown on its side into a ditch. Merchandise was scattered along the tracks in a confused mass and special officers were sent to guard the property. The wrecking crews from Jamesburg and Bordentown succeeded in clearing the tracks toward night. The estimated loss is $50,000.

TIMEKEEPER MOBBED.

Italian Laborers in Paterson Had Not Received Wages.

About fifty Italian laborers employed by the J. B. McDonald Construction Company in repairing Essex street, Paterson, went on strike yesterday because their wages were not paid, and attempted to mob the timekeeper, James Tompkins.

The Italians say they have worked for two weeks without getting any money, being put off with promises from time to time. They claim that Wednesday they were promised that their money would surely be forthcoming the next day, but that it was not, and was also withheld Thursday. Yesterday morning none of the bosses put in an appearance, and Tompkins was chased several blocks until he was rescued by a policeman.

The laborers were furious, and announced their intention of tearing up all the work which had been done during the past two weeks. They started in to make good this threat in Essex street, and it was necessary to call out the police reserves to protect the thoroughfare. They next invaded the City Hall, demanding their wages, but the police drove them from the corridors, informing them that the city had nothing whatever to do with the matter.

Thimble Lost 23 Years Found.

A gold thimble which was lost twenty-three years ago by Miss Alice C. Rowland in the old Rufus Story homestead, in First street, Bayonne, was recovered yesterday. Something was the matter with the flow of water in the kitchen, and Miss Francis Kline, who occupied the house, sent for a plumber. He found the thimble in good condition lying on the supply pipe.

MURPHY RETURNS HOME

Declares Taft Will Be Next President and that Jersey Will Be for Him.

HE CALLS STATE COMMITTEE.

Headquarters for the Campaign Will Be Close to the Four Corners in Newark.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy returned yesterday from a Western trip, during which, as New Jersey's member of the National Republican Committee, he had a part in the ceremonies attendant on the formal notification of William H. Taft that he had been nominated for President. At the South Broad street home last night the former Governor, as State chairman, talked on the prospects for the coming campaign and of the battle to be waged hereabouts.

"I have sent out a call this evening for a meeting of the State committee on Friday of next week, August 7," he said. "There is much in the air, but until after the State committee meets there isn't much to be said about the campaign or plans for it."

State headquarters are to be selected at Friday's meeting after organization has been effected. The members of the new State committee, with the exception of thos serving at large, were chosen at the State convention of May 5. In many cases, as in that of Essex county, old members were elected for another term.

While the former Governor has been away, it has been stated authoriatively that he will be the choice of the committee for chairman if he will consent to take the leadership once more in New Jersey. He did not comment on the subject last night, but it is almost certain that he will accept the chairmanship.

Mr. Murphy went West primarily to pay his quarterly visit with his associates on the board of managers to the National Soldiers' Home. The last of these was inspected at Dayton, O., last Sunday, and from there he went to Cincinnati to attend the notification ceremonies.

Declares Taft Will Win.

The State chairman was not prepared to go into Presidential possibilities any further than when he returned from the national convention at Chicago and predicted the success of the Republican ticket. There is nothing in the East or West, he averred, that would lead to the belief that Taft will be beaten by Bryan.

"Mr. Taft will be our next President," he said, "and New Jersey will be for him."

The principal headquarters for the State campaign to back up the national ticket and support the aarty's candidates for Congress, will be located in Newark. It has been decided to select a building somewhere near the Four Corners, in fact the place desired is said to have been practically secured. There is not room enough at county headquarters in the Strauss building.

The State chairman will issue a call shortly after next Friday's meeting for the State convention that is to choose Republican candidates for Presidential electors.

DAVIS MUM ON EXCISE.

Hudson's Little Boss Willing to Let Statement Be Forgotten.

Robert Davis, the Democratic boss of Hudson county, is disinclined to talk excise law now. He's willing to let his recent utterances be forgotten. When asked yesterday if the Democratic organization would have an excise plank in its platform his reply was that the answer would come when the county committee or state convention meets, and he added that so far as he is personally concerned the excise matter does not bother him, as he does not drink.

As to the attitude of his candidate for Sheriff, James J. Kelly, the brewery collector, Mr. Davis said that Kelly would be able to handle the proposition at the proper time. A story curren yesterday is that the Democratic leaders of Essex and Hudson have arranged to come out openly against the Sunday excise law and to nominate candidates for the Legislature who will be pledged to amend the law.

Gets Writ in Blue Law Test Case.

Chief Justice Gummere has granted a writ of certiorari to Charles E. Menagh, an East Orange druggist, who violated the Sunday closing ordinance last Sunday by selling soda water, candy and a cigar to test the law. The writ is returnable on August 19, and acts as a stay. Menagh may continue to seell goods on Sunday.

In the City Court.

In the city court this morning, Charles Barry pleaded guilty to a violation of the hack ordinance. Judge Runyon suspended sentence with a warning.

The Misses May and Gertrude Berkhan, of Watchung avenue, Maud and Myra Emmons, of Prospect place, Emily and Marion Winant, of Carlton avenue, and Marjorie Phillips, of Central avenue, with Mrs. Winant, of Carlton avenue, as chaperon, returned home today after a two weeks' camp life at Belmar.

PERSONAL.

Patrolman Andrew Saffron, of the local police force, is enjoying his annual vacation.

George Chandler and family, of Johnston drive, have gone to Budd's Lake for the month of August.

The family of Edward A. Lyon, of Evergreen avenue, have gone to Maine for the rest of the summer.

Miss Grace Vautermire, of Fairview avenue, left today for Asbury Park, where she will spend two weeks.

Mrs. Charles Zimmer, of Manning avenue, has returned home after spending a week with relatives in Somerville.

Edward O. Clark and family, of West Fourth street, have gone to Pine terrace, South Branch, for a two weeks' outing.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Korff and children, of Watchung avenue, left today for Asbury Park, where they will spend two weeks.

Miss Mary Corrigan, of Westervelt avenue, is spending her summer vacation of two weeks at the home of relatives in Flemington.

Fred Kliensmith, of New York, has returned home after a brief visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Dunn, of Norwood avenue.

Walter Zimmer, of Maning avenue, has returned home from Brooklyn, where he has been visiting at the home of his brother, Charles Zimmer.

The Misses Mary and Grace Woolston, of Fairview avenue, have returned home after a three weeks' stay at the home of relatives in Camden and Beverly.

Ralph Hillman, of Brooklyn, has returned home after spending one week at the home of Walter Knowlton, of West Fifth street. Mr. Knowlton is now his guest.

John and Walter Harper, of Manning avenue, have returned home after a week's stay at the home of grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Harper, of Jersey City.

RIBBON USED LAVISHLY ON ALL GOWNS.

Almost all the well-dressed summer girls are wearing bows of ribbon in their hair, with an end of the ribbon twined in and out among the puffs and curls, says Mary Dean. The effect is charming and generally very becoming, unless a girl is unusually tall. A very practical bow is made of black velvet ribbon combined with silver gauze. Both should be wired and formed into a standing bow, and if the wearer has dark hair, the silver gauze should be twined through the hair. If she is a blonde the black velvet should be used for that purpose.

Many of the newest lingerie gowns have lace collars attached to them. Over this is worn a high stock of pompadour ribbon, high in the back and brought down low in the front, showing the lace collar. This is fastened in front with two long narrow ends, and the ends finished with a long silk tassel in a color that harmonizes with the ribbon. Sometimes a sash is worn matching the stock, but this is not necessary.

Leghorn and panama hats for wear with shirtwaist suits are almost universally trimmed with a huge bow of black moire or satin ribbon—preferably moire, as it is stiffer and holds its shape better. These hats are turned up at one side and on the drooping side is put the large wired bow of black ribbon which any girl with deft fingers can manufacture.

A pongee or linen coat which has shrunk or grown too small for its owner, can be made wearable and very up to date by insetting a vest of some gaily colored ribbon, and putting collar and cuffs on it of the same. It only takes three-quarters of a yard for the vest of a short coat.

THE MARCEL WAVE HAS GONE OUT.

There are more individual styles in hair-dressing at the present time than there have been for many months. Marcelling has practically gone, although it is seen at some evening affairs. With a high arrangement, the back of the hair may be marceled, leaving a soft pompadour in front. The puffs and coils may be arranged in the way which most becomes the face. Sometimes the hair is parted in front and puffed in a wide effect at the sides. The low coiffures are gaining favor because they correspond with the classic lines of the evening gowns that are the height of fashion. One arrangement is a moderately high, soft pompadour, reaching on the sides of the puffs and rolls that are clustered low in the neck. For a profile that is classic, this style should be adopted, but one should be careful not to place the coil too low. This arrangement is more becoming in profile than at front face. The psyche knot is the popular dressing at the present writing, but is best suited for evening wear. The Parisian's idea is to give a long appearance to the head by arranging the psyche knot far out at the back. It is sometimes worn low in the nape of the neck with a very low pompadour. This style is most successfully worn by the tall, slender woman with delicate features.

Take Care to Sit Correctly.

It is while sitting that women most hurt their figures. They do not place themselves so that they sit on the tip of the spine. Let any woman who is reading this sentence now drop her paper and notice if she is sitting on the tip of her spine or four or five inches above it, causing a curve in the vertebrae. It is easy enough to know, because if the end of the spine has been made to do its work she cannot straighten herself any more in the seat, although she may be able to throw back her body more, but if the line of her backbone is as it should be she cannot pull herself up higher on the chair. This is because the weight is already placed at its proper angle.

Not Easily Scared.

To a professor's lecture on morality his students listened with due submission and humility. In the course of his lecture the excellent man said: "My younf friends, the floors of hell are paved with champagne, automobiles and chorus girls." He was horrified to hear one of the students say in a sepulchral tone: "Oh, death, where is thy sting?"—Chicago News.

A "BILL" CAMPAIGN.

"Bill" Bryan and "Bill" Taft. We call each "Bill," and where's the harm?
"Bill" has a hearty, honest, sound, expressing admiration warm.
We've had our "William" candidates, and praised them with our voice and quill,
But now's our chance to pin our hopes unto a candidate named "Bill."

"Bill" Taft and "Bill" Bryan. We call each "Bill," and where's the hurt?
"Bil' has a sturdy, whole-souled ring, and we who use it are not pert.
We've had our "William" Presidents, but revered them then, revere them still.
But now it looks as if we'll have next term a President named "Bill."

TENNIS CRACKS' TOURNEY

Championship Contest in Singles Begin at the Local Country Club.

PLAY REACHES SEMI-FINALS.

Twenty Entries In All—Play-Off For Title Next Saturday—The Detailed Score.

Two Country Club tennis players and two from the Park Club have survived three rounds of the All-Plainfield singles championship begun at the Country Club courts Saturday afternoon, and will play off for the title Saturday afternoon. The Country Club survivors are H. J. Cochran, last year's local champion, and A. D. Beers, who has just won the singles title in the Sunday-school Athletic League; from the Park Club, Monroe H. Long, paired with Beers to form the winning team in the S. S. A. L. doubles, and Will Barlow, Jr. Barlow and Beers are paired in the semi-finals, and the winner of the match between Cochran and Long will meet them in the finals for the title.

There were twenty entries in the championship matches this season, and a good-sized gallery watched the play on the Country Club courts Saturday. Beers' match with H. T. Eaton in the second round was the best tennis of the day, the S. S. A. L. champ winning by the narrowest of margins. Several times Eaton was within one point of the match, and the scores were 5-7, 8-6 and 6-1. Cochran's match with Wylie Brown ran to three hard-fought sets, and it took Long three sets to beat T. M. Day in the third round. The scores:

First round: H. J. Cochran beat Wylie Brown, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3; J. R. Shoemaker beat J. C. Martin, 6-3, 6-8, 6-2; W. A. Bours beat H. C. Rocap, 6-4, 6-3; D. W. Mulford beat C. W. King, 6-1, 6-2.

Second round: A. D. Beers beat H. T. Eaton, 5-7, 8-6, 6-1; H. W. Brower won from O. H. Fleming, by defeault; Will Barlow, Jr., beat H. S. Brown, 6-1, 6-0; M. H. Long beat H. H. Foster, 6-2, 6-4; T. M. Day beat V. B. Miner, 6-2, 6-3; R. S. Gough beat W. T. Glenney, 6-2, 6-1; H. J. Cochran beat J. R. Shoemaker, 6-1, 6-4; D. W. Mulford beat W. A. Bours, 6-1, 6-2.

Third round: Long beat Day, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3; Cochran beat Gough, 6-3, 6-4; Beers beat Mulford, 6-2, 6-1; Barlow beat Brower, 6-0, 6-0.

Delegates to Conference.

The Seventh-Day Baptist church held its quarterly business meeting last evening. Delegates were appointed to attend the General Conference of that denomination to be held at Boulder, Colorado, August 26-31. The pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw, was appointed, and also Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardiner, who were also authorized to add the names of any other members of the Plainfield church sheuld they be present. Dr. Lewis will also represent the interests of the American Sabbath Tract Society, of which he is the corresponding secretary, and Dr. Gardiner, those of the Sabbath Recorder and publishing house.

Republicans Busy in Elizabeth.

Planning an active campaign in national, State, county, city and ward politics in support of Republican candidates, the County League and Republican Club, of Elizabeth, opened the campaign with an enthusiastic meeting in the Dix building last night. Aside from organizing clubs in each ward, the League members are arranging to have well-known speakers to harrangue on the chief issues of the campaign. Some of the clubs have already been started, and the interest is keen among th Republicans of Elizabeth, Roselle Park, Summit and near-by towns.

Barbers Hold a Clam Bake.

The local Journeymen Barbers' Union conducted a clam bake on the Miller farm back of Scotch Plains, yesterday. The boss barbers were invited guests. Ball games, quoits and Blindman's Buff were features until 2:30 in the afternoon when the bake was served. Another affair on the same plan will be held the latter part of the month. Charles Pagliuca was the chairman of the arrangement committee for yesterday.

Notable Ball at Wawbeek.

The social season at the Wawbeek, on Upper Saranac Lake, was opened by a ball given in the parlors of the hotel. A number of dinner parties preceded the ball. Mrs. Chapman Fiske, of New York, gave a dinner to Miss Runkle, Miss Louise D. Booth, Miss Fiske, Edward W. Cady, Jr., William L. Rich, Jr., and Samuel Adams. Mrs. Fiske and Miss Dorothy Fiske are spending the season at Wawbeek.

SENATOR FIRST IN FIELD; PETITION BY ACKERMAN

The first petition for nomination to office filed in this country is that of State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, who announced his candidacy for the primary nomination for the State Senatorship to succeed himself. This fact was admitted by Mr. Ackerman when he sailed for Europe early in July, but it was announced in The Daily Press two weeks previously when Mr. Ackerman's petition was sent around for signatures. It was stated today at the c ounty clerk's office that Senator Ackerman's petition is the only one as yet filed under the new law.

The hundred signatures required by law were subscribed and included names of Republicans from all parts of the county. All of those signing the nomination paper certified that they were Republicans and at the last election voted for a majority of the candidates of that party, and that they intend to vote the Republican ticket at the coming election.

In the acceptance of the nomination Senator Ackerman states that he is qualified to hold the office for which he is nominated for the primaries, and that, if he is selected as the standard bearer at the primaries he will accept the trust.

All candidates for nomination at the primaries of the different parties are required by the new primary law to file nomination papers with the county clerk previous to the holding of the primaries. These nomination papers must be signed by 100 regular members of the party of the one making the nomination. At the primaries candidates are selected from among the number whose nominations have been filed. Attached to the nomination papers must be a signed statement by the nominees that if selected by the primaries they will run for office.

FISK HAS CONFAB WITH ATLANTIC CITY'S MAYOR

Officials and saloon-keepers at Atlantic City are in a flurry because of the unheralded arrival there of Mayors Appleby and Fisk and Peter Backes, of the Excise Commission. Their advent was first made known when they called at the City Hall Saturday and had a conference with Mayor Stoy, though they reached that town Friday night.

License holders who were reveling in the false security of the semi-official report which was sent out from Trenton last week to the effect that the probe of excise conditions in Aubury Park, Atlantic City and a few other places had been postponed indefinitely, were taken completely by surprise upon learning of the presence of the commissioners, and there was a very uneasy shifting among saloon men who are said to have been running rather close to the wind in the observance of the Sunday closing laws.

Though no official statements have been given out, it is intimated that public hearings will be held this week, when Mayor Stoy, Chief of Police Woodruff, cafe proprietors, city pastors and prominent citizens will be called upon to testify as to the observance of the Bishops law. Among the witnesses also will be several bartenders listed by detectives who spent two weeks last month in looking over boardwalk cafes for evidence to present before the commission.

"White Store" Closed Tomorrow.

In line with the liberal policies adopted by the firm of A. E. Force & Co. since coming to Plainfield, there is no event which is looked forward to with more genuine pleasure than the annual outing or picnic which takes place tomorrow and in which all the clerks, at least those who are not on their vacations, take part. The firm closes the store all day; hires the tally-ho coach and tells the clerks to go into the country and enjoy themselves. This is done with a vim, and no doubt they will be heard from tomorrow, when they will be seen going through the city with banners flying. Events of this character are to be commended, as the employes will return to their labors with renewed energy and vigor, eager to advance the interests of the firm whose liberality prompts it to such acts of kindness.

Hurt In Fall From Trolley.

Mrs. Christopher S. Meyers, of East Sixth street, is confined to her home in a serious condition as the result of a trolley accident at East Second and Berckman streets, Friday afternoon. She was about to alight from a car when it started suddenly and threw her to the roadway. She was rendered partially conscious by striking on her head and was removed to her home in a cab. She is now under the care of Dr. Tomlinson.

AMERICANS THEIR PREY

"Loan Game" Being Worked Abroad by Pair Claiming Plainfield as Their Home.

THEY ARE NOT KNOWN HERE.

Two Men Operating in Paris, Brussels and London Tell a Hard Luck Tale and Find Many Victims.

According to a Paris cablegram published in the New York Herald, men giving their names of George A. French and Walter Murdock, and claiming to be residents of Plainfield, have been making Americans abroad the victims of the "loan game." Neither of these men are known her so far as can be learned.

This is the cablegram published in the Herald:

"Paris, Saturday.—The Continent being overrun with foreigners just now, it was inevitable that some of them should be victimized by the ever ready sharpers, for whom the tourist season is shearing time. The Herald's letters to the editor during the last fortnight have shown that two of these crooks are particularly plausible and met particularly easy marks. They give the names of George A. French and Walter Murdock, and claim to hail from Plainfield, N. J. The story they tell is invariable, as it is apparently irresistible. Each letter to the Herald says, in substance, 'The men came up and appealed to me as a fellow countryman to make them a small loan until the arrival of the overdue remittance, etc.' The trick is done, the money is handed over, the men disappear, and the lender in a few days realizes he has been swindled, and has no recourse other than to write to the Herald and expose the swindlers in its columns.

"The ball was set rolling by a communication from an American who had been victimized in Cologne by these Plainfield operators. Others followed, showing that the same old game has been played with the same old success at Intertaken and Brussels. Now a New Yorker, writing from London, says they wheedled a loan out of him on this same plea last year in Paris, and asks the Herold to warn the public generally. This now has been done, but what is the use? The men will merely chonge their names and continue to live luxuriously on the Continent upon the never failing stream of remittances from American innocents abroad."

OUT OF JAIL THREE DAYS, MONCTON FACES JUDGE AGAIN.

Frank Moncton, the homeless boroughite who gets his name on the police court blotter at short intervals as the result of uproarious jags, was fined $15 by Borough Recorder Dolliver today after his arrest by Special Officer Soule Saturday afternoon, when he had another of his boozing bees. He paid the fine.

Last Monday Moncton faced the cadi on a similar charge and was locked up for three days in a borough cell. He was told at the time that a repetition of the offence would bring a more rigid sentence, and "swore off." He got licking up beers over in the borough again Saturday, however, and was corralled for making a disturbance on Somerset street, near Greenbrook road, in the afternoon.

Cycle Club's Run.

The Plainfield Cycle Club held three runs yesterday; eight of the riders went to Lake Hopatcong, four to Flemington and eight to Vailsburg. The Lake Hopatcong party started at about 5 o'clock and got to the lake at shortly after 10 o'clock. After dinner at the Sunnyside, they returned, arriving in this city at 7:30 in the evening. Those who took the Vailsburg trip witnessed the races.

Gets Sixty Days Sentence.

Charged by his wife with continued abuse and shiftlessness, John Mara was sent to jail for sixty days by Judge Runyon this morning. The prisoner had nothing to say in his own behalf except that Mrs. Mara "didn't know what she was talking about."

In the City Court.

Charles McGraw, a local stonelayer, was arraigned in the city court this morning on a charge of helpless intoxication. It was his first offense and Judge Runyon left him go with some good advice to stay sober.

TRAIN VICTIM LOCATED IN A ROUNDABOUT WAY

Patrolman John Kelley was standing at the North avenue station at 10:30 this morning when the engineer of a passing east-bound P. and R. express threw a tightly rolled piece of paper at him from the cab window. The officer picked it up and after smoothing it out read the following message:

"Man lying between tracks 3 and 4 near Greenbrook tanks."

Kelley notified the operator at the station and word was telegraphed to Jersey City. A return message was sent from there to Bound Brook to have the train due here at 10:55 stop and pick the man up. The victim was found as directed and the ambulance was in readiness to receive him at the station but he died before the train reached this city. The body was immediately placed back on a westbound train and sent to Dunellen, it being presumed that death ensued in Middlesex county.

Papers in the man's pockets indicated that he was Andrew Barbell and that he probably lived in Raritan. He was about twenty-five years old. It is not known how he came to be struck but it is presumed he was walking on the tracks and stepped in front of an express.

HEMPSTEAD MAN KILLED AT WESTFIELD STATION

Abram McLellan, whose home was at 388 Front street, Hempstead, L. I., was killed in front of the Westfield station at 2:30 this morning by getting caught between the fence and an express train, east-bound. The suction drew him beneath the cars and his body was badly mangled. The accident was witnessed by railroad attaches and the remains were picked up as soon as the train passed. They were brought to Cole's undertaking rooms in this city.

McLellan was a man about fifty years old and had evidently been to Westfield in esarch of employment. He was seen on the station platform and walked over to the fence just before the express dashed down. It is presumed that he thought he had room enough to let it pass by crowding against the pailings, not knowing it was a fast train.

His name was found on the fly leaf of a book of rules of the Bronx local, No. 45, Plain and Ornamental Plasterers Industry. The pockets also contained $1.02 in money, a silver watch that had been smashed to pieces, a gold horse shoe stickpin and a razor. His clothing was of good material.

VISITING MINISTERS IN LOCAL PULPITS

August vacation days have taken a large majority of the local pastors out of town for a few weeks, and there were many strange faces in the various pulpits at yesterday's services. None of the Baptist churches had their regular pastors and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, at Warren chapel, was the only Presbyterian minister who occupied his own pulpit. He started on his vacation today. Episcopal and Methodist church services were also in charge of supplies in the majority of cases.

Rev. Dr. Howard Grose, of New York, preached morning and evening at the First Baptist church; Rev. Gideon M. Shott, of Lyons Farms, was in charge of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. L. J. Westfall, of Wilmington, Del., preached at Faith chapel. Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson preached as usual at Trinity Reformed church, but out-of-town preachers were in evidence in the Presbyterian churches; Rev. Dr. Allen R. Bartholomew, secretary of the board of foreign missions, preached at the First Presbyterian church; Rev. Dr. Henry A. Stimson, of New York, preached at the Crescent Avenue church, and Rev. Edward Love was in charge of the two services at Hope chapel.

Rev. Dr. George C. Wilding, of Perth Amboy, officiated at the First M. E. church morning and evening in the absence of Dr. McCrea, and Rev. C. S. Kemble and Rev. Ora J. Shoop preached special sermons at the Monroe Avenue and Grace M. E. churches. Dr. James M. Whiton, The Outlook, preached at the Congregational church. All Souls' Unitarian church, of which Rev. A. C. Nickerson is pastor, is closed until September 13.

REV. MR. KOECHLI DEAD

Former Pastor of German Reformed Church Passes Away at Somerville.

A NATIVE OF SWITZERLAND.

Aged Sixty-Eight When Bright's Disease Proves Fatal—Wife and Three Children Survive Him.

Rev. Frederick Koechli, a former pastor of the German Reformed church on Craig place and widely known in the city and borough, died Saturday afternoon at his home in Somerville after an extended illness from Bright's disease. The funeral was held at teh late residence this afternoon and was conducted by Rev. Dr. Schlegel, of New York, and Rev. William H. DeHart, of Raritan, the former being a college mate of the deceased pastor in his native country. Burial was in the new cemetery at Somerville.

Mr. Koechli was born in Switzerland sixty-eight years ago and came to this country in 1883. He located at once in Plainfield as pastor of the German Reformed church. In 1888 he organized the Fourth German Reformed church at Somerville, but for six years continued to officiate in Plainfield as well, preaching here mornings and evenings on Sunday and in Somerville in the afternoon. In 1894 he removed to Somerville, giving up the local charge.

From the day the change was made he devoted his full time and talents to the Somerville church and he succeeded in putting it on a high plane, both financially and spiritually. It is doubtful if any pastor ore deeply held the love and devotion of his flock.

Mr. Koechli leaves a wife, two sons and a daughter. The latter are Alfred, of New York; Philip, of Jersey City, and Miss Nellie Koechli, of Somerville. In addition, he is survived by several grandchildren.

CANADIAN FIRM BUYS REALTY AT BOUND BROOK.

Armstrong & Cook, of Toronto, Canada, who are the largest real estate operators in the Dominion of Canada and who have built towns and cities from Cuba to British Columbia, see great realty opportunities in Bound Brook, where they have just purchased three hundred acres for subdivision. They intend to erect on the tract from twenty to thirty houses, costing from $5,000 to $10,000 each; pave the streets and put in water and sewers, so that they can offer the prospective homeseeker something attractive.

These men became interested in Bound Brook especially on account of the train service, which, they say, is excellent.

THE CLEANATOR.

Cleaning and sweeping by the vacuum or pneumatic process is universally recognized as the only true hygienic system, and its general adoption has been retarded only by the high cost of the required apparatus. The Blackall & Baldwin Company, of 39 Cortlandt street, New York, now offers for sale at a very moderate cost a device which will accomplish the same results as the high-priced equipments, and will give a demonstration of their device, the Cleanator, at the offices of the Public Service Corporation, 129 East Front street, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday this week.

We are confident that an inspection will convince the most skeptical and fully justify the claims of the manufacturers. ***

Grace M. E. Nine Champions.

Making four safe hits out of four times at bat, Rev. Ora J. Shoop helped the Grace M. E. church nine to victory over the Monroe Avenue M. E. church players at the Clinton avenue grounds, Saturday afternoon. The score was 12-6 and the Grace church boys are now champions in the series between the two church teams. Saturday's contest was the deciding one, each team having one victory from two previous contests.

An active Dog Catcher.

Although the stray canines in the city were pretty well gathered up during July, Dog-Catcher Keiderling picked up eleven on his rounds Saturday. This morning he captured six more and the prospects are that homeless dogs will be as scarce as hen's teeth before the heated spell is over. Since he assumed the office, Kiderling has impounded five times as many animals as any of his predecessors.

Bicycle Thief Again.

The police received a report yesterday that a girl's Crescent bicycle had been stolen from the front yard at the residence of A. M. Parker, Franklin place. The machine was taken some time Saturday night.

CHASE SNEAK THIEF AND RECOVER BOOTY

Chasing a giant sneak thief for three miles in a milk wagon, John and Peter Burnett, of Washington Valley, recoverd $15 and a coat and vest stolen from the latter Saturday, "cornered" their man in a slough hole near George Beeching's mill on the Valley road to Stirling and recovering the money as the man floundered in the mud. While Peter Burnett was looking up a constable after the money had been recovered, the thief dashed out of the mud and made his escape.

Peter Burnett, who is employed by the National Ice Company, was at the company's barn Saturday afternoon working and left his coat and vest hanging on the door. In the coat was $15. His brother, John, driving his milk wagon, stopped to see him shortly after he got to work, and was followed into the ice house by a tall stranger. While the two were talking, the big man made a get-away with the coat and vest, and as soon as the loss was discovered the brothers climbed into the milk wagon and started in pursuit. They drove to the end of the Somerset trolley line without finding any traces of the thief and then went along the road to Stirling. At Beeching's saw mill they saw the man crouching behind some logs, and, leaving the wagon, gave chase on foot. The thief started to run across lots, but fell into a slough hole containing about two feet of mud and water. Floundering there, he was relieved of the stolen clothes, which he was carrying, but made his escape when Peter Burnett went for a constable.

But a meagre description can be secured of the man, who is described as more than six feet tall and rather slim. He was roughly dressed. Residents of the district say he has been hanging around the ice houses for several days, and he has been sleeping in various barns and Friday night in Winans' blacksmith shop.

ENJOYABLE TIME AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Another highly successful midsummer holiday was held at the Country Club, Saturday, when sporting and social events attracted many Plainfielders and their friends to the club house. Besides the All-Plainfield championship singles tournament, there was a handicap medal play golf match, eighteen holes, as the principal golf event, and the links were crowded.

There were a great many at midday luncheon at the club house and the dinner in the evening was one of the best yet served by Miss Scott. The dining room was well filled. About fifty couples were on the floor for the dancing in the evening, and these week-end dances are proving so successful that they will be continued all summer.

Arthur Murphy won the honors on the links in the afternoon, and was awarded two golf balls for his card of 70, the low score of the day, in the handicap medal play. The match was of eighteen holes. W. D. Riggs, with a 76, was the next in line for honors. The cards:

Arthur Murphy, 80, 10—70; W. D. Riggs, 88, 12—76; W. T. Merrill, 102, 25—77; W. L. Glenney, 105, 25.—80; E. C. Patterson, 111, 25—86.

WIDOW'S HOME ROBBED WHILE SHE IS AT CHURCH.

While Mrs. Susan Cosgrove, of New Market, was attending church yesterday morning, someone broke into her home on the back road leading to Bound Brook and ransacked every room. They made away with a gold watch, a gold ring and $10 in money. Entrance to the place was effected by breaking a window light in the kitchen.

Mrs. Cosgrove discovered the loss as soon as she returned home and summoned Constable Robert L. Pierce. The latter made an investigation and concluded the theft was the work of hoboes who had dropped away from the railroad for just such a job. Mrs. Cosgrove is a widow and because of her son being away had no one to leave about the premises during the church hour.

Purchase Park Avenue Residence.

Drs. C. W. and B. F. Leonard, the dentists, have purchased the residence at 518 Park avenue, belonging to the John C. Smith estate and will remodel it for their own use. They will move their offices to the place some time next spring.

General Secretary Herbert E. Parker, of the Y. M. C. A., left today for Silver Bay, where he will spend two weeks in study. Mrs. Parker will spend the time with relatives at Binghamton, N. Y.

PARTY ENDS IN A RUMPUS

Garovitch's Guests Kicked at an Assessment for Beer and Trouble Followed.

BATTLE DRAWS A BIG CROWD.

Squad of Bluecoats Swoops Down and Gets Two Prisoners and What's Left of the Keg.

One of those Polak birthday parties that frequently break out on the day of rest and furnish material for the police court and hospital, provided a bunch of excitement for a section of the West End early last evening. The scene of action was in one of the detached wards of the old hospital, located as a residence on South Second street near Muhlenberg place, and facetiously known in the neighborhood as "Castle Garden," because of its being the first stopping place for a certain foreign element on their arrival in Plainfield. Nine Russian Poles were the combatants but when a reserve force of police reached the place in response to a telephone call they captured but two of the men and what was left of a keg of beer. The keg had nothing to do with the fight itself but the contents were partly responsible for the lead-off.

The two prisoners described themselves as Peter Garovitch, aged 26, and Tony Bongenski, aged 23. In court this morning, it was learned that Garovitch, who is a boarder at "Castle Garden," had the keg of beer unloaded at the place to celebrate his natal day. He invited a lot of countrymen around to drink his health and talk over old days in Warsaw and Bongenski was one of those who responded. He understood that everything was to be absolutely free-for-nothing but after getting outside of three or four glasses of booze the host came around and said everybody had to pay a twenty-five cent assessment to meet expenses. Bongenski could see his way clear to hand up fifteen but twenty-five—no sir-ee, not him. His refusal started an argument, somebody made a pass at him and then the battle was on.

As is always the case at a Polak christening or birthday party, nobody knew who struck the first blow. Bongenski said everybody jumped his way and he swung a beer glass at the first head that came near him. It happened to belong to Garovitch and the crash that followed the collission gave him a peach of a black eye and cut a big gash in his cheek. The whole nine merrymakers immediately mixed up in an awful tangle and when they found that Bongenski was able to hold his own, they biffed and banged each other.

The battle was punctured with victorious yells and shouts of chagrin and in a few minutes the street outside was packed with a curious throng, women and children predominating. Somebody telephoned the police in order to head off a murder and the patrol wagon started out from headquarters on a dead run, carrying Cops Messler, Payne, McDonald and Nolan to the scene. When they swung into South Second street it was almost impossible to get through because of the mob and the delay gave the belligerents a chance to escape over back fences. Garovitch and Bongenski were a little slow in getting started and were nabbed but the others all got away. Cop Messler did some sleuthing around and his weather eye located the beer keg which he decided to take along as evidence. The crowd gave him a rousing cheer when he emerged with it on his shoulder.

Bongenski related his side of the story in a straightforward manner but Garovitch made several assertions that didn't sound plausible. Because he had purchased the beer in the first place and had attempted to hit Bongenski when the assessment was disputed, Judge Runyon fined him $8 or twenty days. He paid up. Bongenski escaped with suspended sentence and a warning to make sure what the game is before accepting any more birthday party invitations.

Heavy Fines For Vagrants.

Dunellen justice lit heavily on two vagrants arrested on the main street late Saturday night by Special Officer Slyney. Recorder David S. Campbell gave them a hearing yesterday morning in the borough hall. One of the men, who said his name was William Taylor, was found skulking about back yards and was sentenced to thirty days in the New Brunswick jail. The other fellow said he was Charles Linton. He had four chickens tucked in his shirt, with their necks wrung. Sizing him up for a chicken thief, the Recorder sentenced him to sixty days' imprisonment. Both men are strangers in Dunellen and were taken to New Brunswick today by Chief Marshal Bambach.

SAMUEL E. MOFFETT.

Noted Editor Succumbs in Battle With the Waves.

Samuel E. Moffett, one of the editors of Collier's Weekly and a writer on political and sociological subjects, died at Seabright Saturday just as he was dragged from the surf by his brother-in-law, A. D. W. Tallman.

Mr. Moffett entered the water and swam out about fifty feet from the shore. When he started to swim back he was met by the heavy waves and undertow. Mr. Tallman, who was on the shore, saw him sink suddenly, and, plunging into the surf, reached him as he was going down the second time and brought him unconscious to the land. A physician who was summoned said that death was due to cerebral apoplexy or hemorrhage brought on by the fierce struggle against the waves.

Mr. Moffett was born in St. Louis November 5, 1860, his mother being a sister of Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain), and pursued special sudfes at the University of California after a high school education. He later received the degrees of master of arts and doctor of philosophy from Columbia University. In 1887 he married Mary Emily Nantz, of San Jose, Cal., and had lived in Mt. Vernon, N. Y., since his connection with Collier's Weekly began.

Among the Plainfielders registered at "The Warrington," Ocean Grove, for the month of August are Mrs. E. B. Bennett and daughters, Misses Jane and Susan, of West Sixth street, and Mrs. S. Wadams and granddaughter, Miss Helen Wadams, of Grove street.

JOHN CASALE HELD ON A GRAVE CHARGE

John Casale, of 19 Mt. Prospect avenue, Newark, is held it Paterson without bail awaiting a formal charge to be made by the parents of Lillian Sleckner, 14 years old, of 165 Maryland avenue. Casale was arrested Saturday while he was getting ready to board a trolley car for Little Falls with Miss Lillian Ryan, of 78 Cedar street, owing to the alertness of Andrew Ryan, the girl's father, who had read in the papers of the brutal assault upon the Sleckner girl July 18.

Miss Ryan was standing at Market and Main streets at noon, when a man asked her to take a trolley ride with him to Little Falls. The girl told the man that she must go home. He insisted, it is said, upon having the girl take the ride with him, and told her to meet him at 2 o'clock at Main and Ellison streets. The girl had no intention of meeting him, she said, but she told her father of the affair.

Mr. Ryan came to the conclusion that his daughter's annoyer was the man wanted in the Sleckner case. He told the girl to keep the appointment and that he would follow her. On his way to the meeting place Ryan picked up Detective-Sergeant Otto Keppler, who made the arrest when the man was about to board the vehicle.

Casale was taken to police headquarters, where the Sleckner girl, who was sent for, picked him out from a dozen men who were lined up with him as her assailant. Mrs. Sleckner also identified Casale as the man who took her daughter from home under the pretense of engaging her as a nurse. Casale is well known in Paterson, being a brother-in-law of Justice of the Peace Cortese, who was killed by a Black Hand bomb sent from Newark.

Casale, prior to several years ago, was for a long time Italian interpreter in the Essex county courts at Newark and later a prosecutor's detective. He resigned under pressure. Then he built a block of apartment houses, over which he had trouble with the Building Department. He also claimed to own the Congress Hotel on Central avenue, which he renamed the Savoy. From the latter he was ousted after a suit.

Bayonne Moist In Spots.

Bayonne was somewhat more moist yesterday than for several weeks past, and those who knew the ropes were not obliged to travel across the Kill von Kull to slake their thirst. While most of the saloonkeepers exposed the interiors of their places by removing the window screens and raising the shades in accordance with the Bishops' law, many of them transacted business quietly in back rooms or apartments above the saloons. Patrons of the shore houses were able to get beer and cocktails with their meals, but had to be content with drinking from teacups.

Mending Made Easy.

Some convenient aids to mending are shown which are merely steel springs, intended to hold a pile of clothes together. The springs are bound in leather, and "finished" and "unfinished" are printed upon each, respectively, in gold letters. The unfinished clothes may be clamped in one so that the wind will not separate them when the mending is being done on the porch, while the finished mending may be folded together and fastened down by the other clamp. In this way it is easy to keep them together, and one may with delight watch the finished pile increasing little by little.

11 CARS ARE WRECKED BY A BROKEN RAIL

Through breaking of an axle eleven coal cars were wrecked near Amboy Junction at 9 a. m. yesterday. The train was going east at a speed of fifty miles an hour when the car adjoining the locomotive dropped its rear axle going over a switch, loosening a rail, parted from the rest of the train and was pulled by the engine out of harm's way. Ten cars following, large steel gondolas loaded with soft coal, struck the broken rail and piled up in a heap, blocking all four tracks for several hours. The broken rail pierced the bottom of the second car and was forced up through the coal and bent over the car adjoining.

The wreck shut off for many hours all four tracks of the Pennsylvania Road. The huge cars, torn and twisted, lay at all angles. The rails, ties and roadbed was all torn up and switches and tower signal system made useless. More than fifty tons of coal were strewn over the tracks. Steam wreckers and crews from Jersey City and Trenton and track workmen arrived in two hours. Passengers were sent around Rahway via Waverly on the Lehigh Valley, and the Long Branch division of the Central Railroad. Late in the afternoon the workmen constructed tracks around the wreck and the Pennsylvania schedule was restored.

ALLEGED BOY FORGER HELD.

Had Checks Certified By Banks In Which He Worked.

Atlantic City, August 3. Josiah N. Jordan, seventeen years old, a former clerk of the Farmers' Bank of Nansemond, at Suffolk, Va., is held here by the police on the charge of having forged the bank's paper. The specified charge was that of passing a bad check for $20 upon an Atlantic City bank. Inquiry by the receiving bank by telegraph brought word from the Suffolk bank that the paper was worthless and further added that Jordan had left a number of other bad checks along his trail up from the South.

In the clerk's possession was found a book of checks bearing the certification stamp of the bank. He is alleged to have prepared the checks in anticipation of his dismissal and to have filled them in with the name of the cashier, drawing upon banks in towns which he visited for such amounts as he saw fit. He was given a preliminary hearing at the City Hall and will be held to await the action of the officials of the Suffolk bank.

EBERHARD CONTRADICTORY.

Says He Must Have Been Drunk When He Confessed.

August Eberhard told Sheriff Breswter at Hackensack yesterday that he must have been drunk when he confessed to Prosecutor Koester, and in the next breath he said he couldn't tell why he killed his aunt. He said he did not know his aunt had so much money in her handbag when he stole it.

Thomas H. Huckin, who will aid in the defense of the self-confessed murderer, is much interested in the fact that Freda Eberhard, his sister, was taken to Bellevue Hospital Saturday on suspicion that she is insane. It is the general belief that insanity will be Eberhard's only defense. It was thought the prisoner's parents would call to see him yesterday, but none did so. So far none of his relatives have seen him since the murder, and he has not written to his parents yet.

TO GIVE BLOOD TO CHILD.

Trenton Mother Comes to Aid of Her Afflicted Daughter.

Mrs. Thompson G. Earle, of Trenton, will undergo an operation for the transfusion of blood this week in the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital, Philadelphia, in order to save the life of her young daughter, Josephine.

Miss Earle has been suffering for several months from what is known as lencocythaemia, a disease in which the white corpuscles in the blood increase abnormally and certain glands become affected. The patient is now at the Earle summer home in Atlantic City, and the physicians who have been attending her have decided that the only way to save the girl's life is to transfuse healthy blood into her veins.

TWO HURT BY TRAINS.

One Victim a Gatekeeper; the Other Is Unknown.

John Ritter, 60 years old, of 416 Court street, Elizabeth, a gatekeeper at the Franklin street crossing of the Long Branch Railroad, was struck by a passenger excursion train yesterday morning shortly after midnight and seriously injured about the head and body. His recovery is expected.

A few hours before an unknown man of advanced age was struck at the transfer yards of the Central Railroad and badly injured, being rendered unconscious. He was taken to the Alexian Hospital with wounds on the head and body, and had not regained consciousness last night. There was nothing about him to incidate his identity.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

One of the most astounding novelties of the theatrical season will be seen this year in connection with Lew Dockstader and his company of minstrel entertainers. It is the most magnificent reproduction of the bottom of the sea and is called "Neptune's Realm." It is in this portion of the big show that Mr. Dockstader delves into the secrets of politics and local conditions in the inimitable manner that have brought him fame and fortune. All the minions of the sea are brought into play including Neptune and his daughters, the newest of stage effects being required for this presentation. The animals and strange fish of the sea are also represented, for this purpose having been required a careful study of the latest books or submarine investigation. Mr. Dockstader's submarine boat "Doodle" is without a doubt the funniest craft of its kind ever built. It is thoroughly equipped with all the latest devices, but has a habit of becoming uncontrollable at the slightest notice. By means of this vessel Mr. Dockstader has built his specialty into one of the funniest he has ever had.

Besides the submarine act Mr. Dockstader has many things to do in the show. He appears twice in the first half and is the bright particular star in the biggest number of the show entitled "Boo-Hoo Land" in which one of the largest of the cannibal islands is depicted. The oriental splendor of some of the costumes in this contrasts very strongly with the funny make up of other of the savages, the effect of each being heightened by the other. Lew Dockstader and his company of minstrel entertainers will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night.

Diver Has Close Call.

Arthur C. Holden, the world's champion high diver, narrowly escaped death at the Palisades Amusement Park at Hackensack, Saturday night, when he struck the side of his wooden tank and was rendered unconscious. Two New York physicians helped carry him from the water and applied restoratives. His back was badly bruised, but he was able to repeat his performance last night. The high wind blew him off his course in the 95-foot dive.

Patrolman Nicholas Meyers, of the local police force, has commenced his annual vacation. Part of it will be spent with relatives at Williamsburg.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

General James W. Rusling, Chas. B. Case, Walter Atkinson and Edward F. Fitzgeorge were yesterday elected trustees of the new Greenwood Avenue Methodist church, Trenton, which was formed in a tent on a lot here yesterday. A church edifice is to be built.

Miss L. C. Crosby, of Tuckerton, daughter of Assemblyman B. H. Crosby, has been appointed a commissioner of deeds. Miss Crosby is the second Ocean county woman to receive such an appointment, the first being Miss Martha Horner, of Toms River, deputy county clerk.

By the will of the late William Dayton, Saturday, provision was made for his horses to be cared for until they die of a natural death. He left an estate valued at $100,000. His widow, Mrs. Julia Grey Dayton, is named as the sole executrix and beneficiary.

Out of work and sick, Harry Hill, a former Camden policeman, tried to end his life yesterday afternoon by taking corrosive sublimate. He was found by a member of his family and hurried to Cooper Hospital. His condition is serious. Hill had been ill for several weeks. His inability to procure work preyed upon his mind.

Nearly 10,000 persons were at Pitman Grove last night and the most emotional meetings of the camp were held. Persons not only flocked to the altar at the night services, but many knelt in the straw in the auditomium and professed conversion. Dr. J. Morgan Read, superintendent of the Camden district, preached the morning sermon.

Mrs. Alen Kramer, living at Bordentown, has been badly bitten on the left hand by a dog belonging to Howard Moseley. Mrs. Kramer had gone into the yard of Moseley to hang clothes on a line, when the dog bit her. A short time ago a rabid dog bit several of the dogs here, but it is not known whether this dog was among them.

John J. Morgan, of Trenton, a peddler of sweaters, was attacked and badly beaten Saturday night on Water street, Gloucester, by two men. Richard Callahan and Robert J. Speece were arrested and locked up for a hearing as his assailants. Morgan had six teeth knocked out and his jawbone fractured. City Physician MacLennon dressed his injuries.

Gas slot meter thieves at Gloucester seem to have no fear of the police. Last night they paid another visit and robbed the meters in at least a dozen houses on East Monmouth street and vicinity, and secured about $25 from the slot boxes. The cellar windows were pried open and the locks wrenched from the meters. Thursday night they robbed thirty meters.

The Cape May School of Agriculture, Industrial Art and Science, completed its work for 1908 Saturday, and invited the public to view a large exhibit of work done by the students, which was spread in several rooms for inspection. The final lecture was by Professor Skillman, of the United States Department of Agriculture. Over thirty students are already registered for the session of 1909.

Property owners and visitors have formed a volunteer fire association at Cape May Point, electing Dr. C. Berens president; J. W. Corson, vice-president; W. LeNois, treasurer, and Charles Markley, secretary. The executive committee appointed consists of F. Bowne, H. Busse and A. Wells. The borough council has purchased two chemical engines, and the department will soon be in working order.

MAN AND WOMAN SERIOUSLY BURNED.

Connolly Tried to Pull Blazing Clothing from the Body of Mary Donlin.

Mary Donlin, 36 years old, of 320 Summit avenue, Jersey City, while burning waste paper in a stove in the kitchen of the apartments of Daniel Connolly, same address, was seriously burned about the entire body and head early yesterday. She was taken to the City Hospital in a critical condition.

If her life is spared it will be owing to the bravery of Daniel Connolly, 24 years old, who was also badly burned about his hands and arms in an effort to smother the flames with his bare hands and strip the burning garments from Mrs. Donlin's body. When he appeared upon the scene Mrs. Donlin was rushing about, screaming for help. Connolly is also in the hospital.

BITTEN BY RABID DOG.

Man Hastens to Pasteur Institute for Treatment.

William Haaf, associated with the Gorham Manufacturing Company, living at Maywood, near Hackensack, was bitten by his pet bull terrier last Friday. Thinking the dog was acting strangely, Haaf called in Dr. W. W. Curry, a surgeon of Hackensack, and kept the dog locked in the cellar. Dr. Curry concluded the dog was suffering from rabies.

The terrier died Saturday night, and Dr. Freeland, of Maywood, who took the dog's head to New York, was notified last evening that an examination of the dog's brain revealed the fact that the dog was rabid.

Haaf at once hurried to the Pasteur Institute for treatment. His hand was badly lacerated. The pet also nipped the Haaf baby, but the skin on the face was not broken and no danger is anticipated.

AUTO WRECKED SURREY.

After Accident Motorists Put On Speed and Got Away.

North Branch, August 1.—An automobile, driven at high speed on the Plucekmin road Saturday afternoon, ran into and wrecked a surrey, in which were seated Mrs. Horace Philhower and her daughter and granddaughter, of this place. They had been visiting at Pluckemin and were returning home.

The occupants of the vehicle were thrown out and severely cut and bruised. The wagon was wrecked and the horse hurled over an embankment. The people in the automobile put on more speed and made off, but it is said that the number of their machine has been secured. The rig was from the livery of Theodore Stats, of North Branch. The victims of the smashup are under the care of a physician.

FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

Sour Cream Dressing—A delicious dressing for cold fish may be made of sour cream. Add to it a little lemon juice and season with pepper, salt and sugar. This is a favorite salad dressing for lettuce with the Russians.

To Prevent Books Mildewing—Olive oil rubbed over the library shelves will, it is said, prevent the mildewing of the books.

Dust Furniture First—Many carry the silver from the sideboard and serving table upstairs at night. If before replacing it in the morning, the dusting of the dining room furniture be done, it will save a second handling of the silver.

"Nothing New Under the Sun"—Concerning the fireless cooker, which is now attracting attention all over the country a Topeka woman says that the so-called Norwegian method of cooking was in use in the pioneer days of Kansas as early as 1854, when stoves and other conveniences were scarce. She herself cooked hominy in this fashion thirty years back, only instead of packing the kettle of boiling water and hominy in a box of hay she wrapped it in a blanket or buffalo robe.

Canal Boatman Drowned.

James Moran, 34 years old, a New Yorker, whose address is not definitely known, but who was employed on the canalboat Huntley, lying at the foot of Second street, Jersey City, late Saturday night fell overboard from the boat and was drowned. The body was recovered yesterday morning and was taken to Hughes' morgue.

JERSEY CITY'S TAX IN ARREARS $4,182,229.

Jersey City, August 3.—City Collector Robert Davis has had compiled in his office the amount of unpaid taxes due the city since 1872. He finds that the total of taxes in arrears is $4,182,229.39. He includes in this amount the amount of $603,662.29, which is the total of the taxes adjusted by the Martin act commission in its last report, which the city is contesting. The commission reduced taxes in arrears, some of them since the early seventies, from over $1,500,000 to the sum specified.

Included in the total of arrearages is about $300,000 that is carried on the books, although, in the opinion of the collector, it never can be collected. It represents taxes on South Cove property, title to which was in litigation for years. The United States Supreme Court finally decided in favor of this city against the Central Railroad of New Jersey and others. The taxes are for the period the property was tied up in the courts. The Board of Finance may order it charged off. One result of the compilation made by Mr. Davis is the exposure of the falsity of the annual figures of each comptroller, showing the amount of taxes due and carried as an asset.

The amount was annually compiled from the comptroller's books, but taxes in arrears that were adjusted by the Martin Act Commission and reductions made by the State Board of Equalization were not charged off. The original amounts were carried along from year to year. Thus the last annual report, for the year ending December 1, 1907, shows that the sum of $6,757,131.53 is due for taxes in arrears. Today Collector Davis began mailing to taxpayers in arrears a notice that he would proceed to sell their property for 1905 and all prior taxes under the tax law of 1903 and the Martin Act. The advance notice is to save them the cost of advertising and collecting.

LID ON IN ELIZABETH.

Elizabeth was drier yesterday than for many moons, as a result of the continued agitation since the revelations made at the hearing here by the State Excise Commission. Last Sunday the lid was put down part way.

The order had gone out that "the men higher up" wanted the law observed, and with three or four isolated exceptions the city was dry as Sahara. William Hisinaook, 66 Court street, and Valentine Muserspie, 136 Inslee place, tried to relieve thirsts, the police say, by dispensing bottled beer, and were hauled in. Hisinaook was fined $20, and the other man will be tried today.

ASTRONOMICAL EVENTS.

Sun sets 7:09, rises 4:55; moon sets 10:35 p. m.; moon's age, 7 days.

Plainfield, N. J., August 3, 1908.

From far off Sea Girt, where the newspaper correspondents are in great straights at times for stories, the New York Tribune has a dispatch announcing to the people of this district that Charles Newell Fowler will be renominated by the Republicans for Congress. The basis for this prediction is found in a casual statement alleged to have been made by State Treasurer Voorhees. "Morris county elected Fowler three years ago and I guess we can do it again," "Uncle Dan" is reported as having said. If he did say it, he told the entire truth. But "Uncle Dan," powerful though he be, is not Morris county and neither is he the convention representing the Republicans of the Fifth district which also includes Union and Warren.

It is, indeed, a sad state of affairs when a candidate for office has to go outside of his own county to show any plausible excuse for his running. During the fourteen years he has been Congressman, Mr. Fowler has been a resident of Union county. His county is the stronghold of Republicanism in the district as well as in the State at large. Yet what was the result when he last sought the office? Is it not fresh in the minds of every Republican that Union was swept three years ago by all Republican nominees with a single exception. That conspicuous exception was in Mr. Fowler's case. Worse still, his radical Democratic opponent, coming from Plainfield, an ironbound Republican city, vanquished him in his own city, Elizabeth. As Mr. Voorhees is alleged to have intimated, Morris saved Mr. Fowler from a crushing and most humiliating defeat. And as he further intimates, it will have to do the same heroic service again, in all probability, if he is renominated. But would his nomination be a wise one in a Presidential year when every man on the ticket should be a help to it rather than a decided detriment? Are there not hundreds of equally able men in the district who would be willing to become the party nominee and whose strength with the intelligent voters would insure a most signal victory at the polls on November 3?

Our local charities funds, which reflect great credit on Plainfield people, are rapidly increasing. If you are enjoying your vacation, or are about to, don't forget the poor little ones that are provided for at the Baby Camp and the Fresh Air Home. Send your check to us and we will make prompt acknowledgment and see that the money is spent for charity work in the way you may direct.

The Plainfield Press is running a series of articles on Heaven. It has no correspondent there.—Elizabeth Journal.

We don't need one, brother, for heaven is so near Plainfield that we cover it direct.

When Mr. Colby explains the source of his wealth, no doubt Mr. Raymond will tell where he gets the money to enable him to have the impudence to run against the reformer for the Senatorship in Essex.

William Cloke, editor of the New York Herald's Jersey political page refers to Peter Backes as "the chief inquisitor" of the State Excise Commission. Pray, where does C. J. Fisk come in?

"Jim" Martine says that he won't run for Congress, but it occurs to us that the self-same "Jim" has made that statement on previous occasions.

REV. G. M. SHOTT TALKS AT NETHERWOOD CAMP.

Taking for his subject, "Spiders and Their Webs," Rev. Gideon M. Shott, of Lyons Farms, gave a powerful talk at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp yesterday afternoon. He said that the spider in the web is like the temptations and snares which beset one in the journey through life.

George E. Hall, vice-president of the camp, led the meeting and David Hand offered prayer. Special music included a cornet solo, "The Homeland," by Mr. Guest; two duets, "My Father Knows" and "Dear to the Heart of the Shepherd," by Miss Florence G. Hawkins and Miss Cora Brokaw, and a soprano solo, "Sweet Peace," by Mary Miller. There was an unusually large attendance, and Mr. Hall spoke briefly of the work and needs of the camp, where there are now more than 200 New York children.

Entertained the Camp Children.

Shadow pictures, music and refreshments gave lots of pleasure to the New York children at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp Saturday afternoon, when a delegation of members of the Wilhelmina Runyon class of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school visited the camp. Three series of shadow pictures were given in the auditorium and refreshments were furnished the children and mothers. The Misses Marjorie and Alice Brown, Elinore Stutsman, Autumn DeLany, Sarah Boyd and Edith Lyons, members of the class, assisted in the entertainment.

Pythians Going to Boston.

Past Chancellor Morgan Turton, of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., left this morning for Boston, where he will attend the biennial convention of the Knights of Pythias as local delegate. He will spend a week in various parts of Massachusetts before returning. V. W. Nash, Jr., a member of the same lodge, left for Boston last night.

Mrs. Charles A. Brown.

Mrs. Marion Antoinette Brown, wife of Charles A. Brown, died suddenly yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Greene, of 609 West Seventh street. The funeral will be from her daughter's home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock and the interment will be at Hoosick, N. Y.

Dunavan a Druggist.

Alfred W. Dunavan, of Randolph's pharmacy, has been notified by Secretary Henry A. Jorden, of the State Board of Pharmacy, that he has passed his pharmacentical examinations. He took the tests last month, and will receive his diploma as graduate in pharmacy September 1.

Endeavorers Hold a Picnic.

Fifteen members of the Hope chapel Christian Endeavor Society held a picnic in the Notch back of Scotch Plains, Saturday afternoon. The affair was arranged by the Misses Elsie Rimmer and Edna Eckert and Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Clark chaperoned the party.

County Committee Meeting.

The Democratic County Committee will meet at Elizabeth tomorrow night to discuss candidates and also the new primary law. It is expected that an effort will be made to get J. E. Martine to become a candidate for the congressional nomination.

Our August Furniture Sale

is now in full swing. Nearly ten years ago we inaugurated these great semi-annual money saving events and each year they have become more popular. The offerings this year are better than ever before. Many manufacturers were hard pressed for ready cash during the recent financial depression and the result was that we were able to pick up many a lot of furniture away below the regular prices, so that thru-out the pricings will be wonderfully low, making it decidedly to your advantage to buy now. A small deposit will secure any of the bargains and we will store without charge whatever is bought during the sale and deliver whenever you say so.

Our Household Club Plan

makes it extremely easy for everybody, especially young folks just starting to keep house, to furnish their home complete without the big initial expenditure which is usually necessitated. Joining the "Household Club" is just like opening a charge account and there is the same privacy surrounding the transaction and the same courtesy extended. There is not a single embarrassing feature and nothing savoring of the average installment house methods. We simply make it easy for you to secure what you want at our regular low cash prices and pay for it on very easy terms.

100 LIVES LOST.

Cranbrooke, B. C., Aug. 3.—Nine cities and towns are probably tolly wiped out, 10,000 inhabitants have escaped with little but their lives, over a hundred lives are lost, and private and railroad property to the sum of between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 is destroyed as the result, up to the present, of the most disastrous forest fire that Canada has had of recent years.

Blaze In Guion Property.

The fire department was called out at 2:15 this afternoon for a blaze in the house known as the Guion property at 817 Carlton avenue. The flames originated on the second floor and by the time the apparatus arrived had made their way to the attic. The fire was still burning at 2:45 o'clock. The orgin is not known at present.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The local team met its second defeat of the season and its first shut out at Somerville in the game with the West Ends Saturday afternoon, the score being 4-0. Manager Freutz was obliged to make material change on account of himself and Flannery being out of the game on account of illness and for Alberts playing at Rahway. Weiner put up a good game in the box but received poor support at critical stages of the game.

Rev. Mr. Matthews, of Chattonooga, Tenn., occupied the pulpit at the Baptist church yesterday and will occupy the pulpit for the next two Sundays. Mr. Matthews is a forcible speaker and his sermons were enjoyed by oll who heard him.

Saturday seemed to be an off day for the teams from this section who played up the line. The locals met defeat at Somerville and their old adversaries, the Clinton Avenue team, were snowed under at High Bridge.

The Highland A. C. team and St. Mary's, both of Plainfield, played on the local diamond Saturday afternoon, the Highlands winning by the score 6-4.

Mrs. John Z. Haefield led the monthly consecration meeting of the B. Y. P. U. held last night in the parlors of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Muir, of Newark, spent Sunday with Mrs. Muir's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Meyer.

The weekly meeting of the Epworth League was held last night in the Methodist church.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Dunellen F. C. nine, using an All-Dunellen team, were defeated on the local diamond Saturday afternoon by a score of 11-3 by the St. Joseph team, of Bound Brook. Miller was in the box for the Dunellenites, and the visitors bunched their hits in two innings for runs, while the home team could get but three runs. More interest was taken in the game, because no out-siders were in the Dunellen line-up.

James Dolan, Jr., has returned home after spending the week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thornton at the Hotel Nelson.

The August meeting of the borough Board of Education will be held at the school tomorrow night.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry left today to spend the month at Adams, N. Y., where he will poin his wife.

Miss Mabel Cole has gone to Ocean Grove for two weeks. She is registered at the Arctic.

Routine business will take the time of the borough fathers at the monthly meeting tonight.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

There will be a peach and ice cream festival at Oak Tree on the chapel grounds for the benefit of the chapel tomorrow night.

William Gitzpatrick, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goff, during all July, has returned to his home in Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Winship, of New York, made a week end visit with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thorne.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Pyatt are entertaining friends from New York city.

PLAINFIELD A. C. WINS AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

The Plainfield A. C. nine added another victory to the season's string at South Plainfield, Saturday afternoon, overwhelming the South Plainfield A. C. by a score of 13-1. The local nine batted heavily, making thirteen hits. Hanson's stick work was a feature, for he made a home run, two two-baggers and a single out of five times at bat. Mullen played a star game behind the bat.

Slocum, who pitched for the Plainfields, fanned fifteen of the home team and gave but one base on balls. Sofield tanned ten and passed five. The lineup and score:

THE FORUM.

Defends His Son.

Editor, The Daily Press:

My attention has been called to a statement contained in your columns, a few days ago, in reference to my son, Mr. Waldemar H. Groszmann, the secretary of this school. This statement is so misleading as to the facts of the case, that it requires a correction. And as I am also quoted in your statement, and as my son acted as my representative and under directions from Mrs. Groszmann and myself, I desire to make a counter-statement, leaving further action in the matter to him if he should choose to take any.

A very small matter has been enlarged o undue proportions, and my son's action has been misrepresented in an entirely undeserved manner, by sensational headlines and other statements which are not in accordance with the facts. The real facts, briefly reviewed, are these:

The servant in question had acted in such a way that an immediate removal became mandatory. There is no reason why I should state anything further as to our reasons for terminating her services at once. Suffice it to say that we must be very careful to eliminate from our premises as quickly as possible such persons as are apt to create a disturbance that would excite the nervous children under our care. Such occurrences, deplorable as they are, are not uncommon even in ordinary households; but while people living in a community may simply send for the policeman around the corner to remove the disturber of the peace, we must rely upon our own resources up here to enforce the trespass law with which we are thoroughly familiar.

The woman was given an hour to get her things out. Instead of attending to her dressing and packing, she stalked half-dressed through the halls of the building, scolding and carrying on, exciting the other servants and the children. I am witness to that myself. As she was obstreperous, violent, and unwilling to go, my son led her down the stairs at the end of the house, using just enough force, by taking her by the arm, to make her go. Her things were then packed by one of the other servants, and handed out to her. But she had already rushed away, her state of mind apparently being far from rational.

When my son, upon the unwarranted complaint of the woman, was summoned before Justice of the Peace Mundy, he did not consider it necessary to bring his own witnesses, the whole matter being so utterly insignificant. The witnesses for the plaintiff, three other servants in our employ, in on wise sustained her claim; on the contrary, their statements corroborated my son's side of the case. One of them, in her quaint way of putting it, said that he had led the woman down stairs "in a ladylike manner."

In other words, the testimony was entirely against the plaintiff, and there was, as my son's legal representative, Mr. George W. V. Moy, expressed it, absolutely no case against the defendant. With what right, then, the testimony of the plaintiff's own witnesses could have been characterized as biased, and with what justification Mr. Mundy could have undertaken to say that there was "a strong case against this man." I may leave to unprejudiced minds to judge. If such is the privilege of a judge, right and justice are in a sad way. And it is deplorable an unwarranted judicial statement should be the occasion for sensational newspaper notoriety. It ought to be added that Mr. Mundy's words were misquoted, even though he tried to make some remarks derogatory to the defendant. This I have from the persons who were present at the hearing.

If such miscarriage of justice, as far as the publication of occurrences of this kind goes, should happen again it would sadly handicap anyone in protecting the sanctity and privacy of his home and grounds. But I know that the trespass laws of this State give us the right to act in self-protection in the manner my son acted in this case, under my authority, as owner of the place and director of this school; and I will assure you that we shall continue to protect these gounds from trespassers.

MAXIMILIAN P. E. GROSZMANN.

The Elm Leaf Beetle.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Every one, no doubt, has noticed the pitiful condition of the elm trees in Plainfield from the destruction of their foliage by the elm leaf beetle. There is, however, a remedy. In front of my house at Ninth street and Third place are two large elms, the leaves on which are in almost perfect condition, as any one may see. The trees were sprayed early in the summer with a solution of arsenate of lead by the Munson-Whitaker Company, of Boston, tree specialists who have done much work in Plainfield.

A more marked example of the benefit of such spraying may be seen at Mr. Waring's, next to the High School, where a large elm which was sprayed retains its leaves in good condition, while in the High School yard, almost touching Mr. Waring's, is an elm, that was not sprayed, whose foliage is ruined by the beetle.

The Shade-Tree Commission should supply itself with a larger equipment for spraying to enable it to treat all the elms in the streets early in the season, and also to be able to offer to spray, at cost, any elm trees which are private property.

I am told that the spraying should be done very early in the summer. If done thoroughly for several seasons in succession it would probably go far towards a permanent cure of the blight.

I hope the Common Council will learn from many interested citizens that a vigorous backing up of the Shade-Tree Commission with funds will meet with approval.

GEORGE H. GODDARD.

MATCH PLAY FOR THE CHALLENGE TROPHIES

Match play for the challenge trophies brought out some good golf at the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon, when W. R. Faber, holder of challenge trophy, No. 3, defeated E. E. Gano, the challenger, 1 up in twenty holes. The two were even up at the end of the eighten hole match, with cards of 75. In the play off, the two broke even on the next hole, Faber winning out on the twentieth hole by one stroke. A good-sized gallery followed the play.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert and W. V. Byard split the points for the President's cup with net cards of 87. Each receive 2½ points for the trophy. Dr. A. W. Anderson got the other point in the week's play for this trophy with an 88. Dr. H. K. Carroll took first honors in the weekly competition for the Park Golf Club cup with a gross score of 97; W. V. Byard was second with a 98, and E. E. Gano's 99 gave him the point for third. These cards were posted in the trophy play:

W. V. Byard, 98-11, 87; Alexander Gilbert, 105-18, 87; Dr. A. W. Anderson, 101-13, 88; Miss Lydie E. Loizeaux, 102, 13-89; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 97-5, 92; W. R. Faber, 102-7, 95; E. E. Gano, 99-4, 95; C. B. Morse, 107-12, 95; R. V. Carpenter, 112-17, 95; W. E. Lowe, 112-17, 95.

Challenge matches will be played at the links Saturday when C. B. Morse, challenger, will play Walter McNaughton, holder, for the Hydewood Park challenge cup, and W. R. Faber, challenger, will play Miss Lydie E. Loizeaux, holder, for challenge trophy, No. 2.

WATERS HEAVY WITH PERFUME.

Remarkable Lake to Be Found in the Caspian District.

"Grasse, clinging to its Alp, high above the Mediterranean, is supposed to give the stranger a headache on account of its perfume at this season," said a perfumer. "Grasse makes the world's perfumes. You see mountains of flowers there, as, in a milling country, you see mountains of wheat. The odor is powerful, but as far as headaches—no!

"But in the Caspian district there is a lake so strongly perfumed that if the stranger boats on it or swims in it he really gets a headache. This lake's banks are of white salt crystals, its waters are mauve in color, and from it an odor of violets is exhaled.

"It is Lake Mankishlak. I visited it to see if I couldn't bottle it up and put it on the perfume market. No go.

"You see, it is the presence of the seaweed Polydcystia violacea that gives the lake its hue and smell. When you bottle the waters the seaweed atoms, after a few days, die and rot. Then the odor changes from violet to—pah!

"But if you are ever in the Caspian, visit the Mankishlak peninsula and take a look at the lake. It is in its way as curious as the asphalt lakes of South America."

HORSE'S HOOF LIKE TOE NAIL.

Grows on Average Third of an Inch Every Month.

Few persons realize that a horse's hoof is really the same thing as the toe nails of human beings or of animals having toes. The horn of a hoof grows just as a toe nail does.

The hoof grows more rapidly in unshod horses than in those wearing shoes. And it grows faster in horses which are well groomed and well fed. But on the average the horn grows about a third of an inch a month.

Hind hoofs grow faster than fore hoofs. The toe of the hoof being the longest part, it takes longer for the horn to grow down there than at the heel. For instance, the toe will grow entirely down in from 11 to 13 months, while the heel will grow down in from three to five months.

As the new horn grows out any cracks or defects in the old gradually work down to where they can be cut off, just as with human finger nails, you can watch the progress of a bruise from the roof to the tip.

Sold at "Candle Auction."

"Candle auction" is an ancient custom which still survives in Somersetshire, Eng. A valuable piece of meadow land in the village of Tatworth was sold recently by auction while the candle burned. The ceremony consists of the burning of an inch of candle, the last bidder before the candle's final flicker becoming the tenant for the ensuing year. Previous to the auction freeholders assembled for a supper of bread and cheese, beer and pickled herrings, the funds for this being provided from the "colting" of the new tenant. Fines are also imposed for speaking, nose blowing, laughing out loud and moving, other than bidding, while the candle is burning.

What Becomes of the Golf Balls?

In the afternoons when the dishes are washed up Ciss goes and sits down by the golf links. There's a place where many of the gentlemen send their balls over. Ciss takes a basket of apples with her and when a ball comes near her she puts it in her basket under the apples. Then when the gentlemen come and look for it they can't find it and they think it must have gone down stream.

Ciss sells the balls to her young man that lives in the village. He gives her twopence apiece for them and he sells them himself to the makers for sixpence.—Grand Magazine.

Alphabet in Bible Verse.

In the twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra can be found every letter of the English alphabet. It runs thus: "And I, even I, Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of God of Heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily."

But, still more wonderful, in the eighth verse of the third chapter of Zephaniah is contained every letter, including finals of the Hebrew language.

How a Cat Caught Two Rats.

I once had a cat who did a rather remarkable ratting feat. He stalked two young rats on the eaves of a low flat stable roof, and caught one in the usual way. The other jumped on to an elderberry tree just below.

Bob, however, not satisfied with the one, grasped it firmly in his mouth, and then jumped headlong for the other. Either he was very lucky or extraordinarily agile, for he fell to the ground with one rat still in his mouth and the other in his paws, and promptly killed them both.—Scotsman.

Crowded Out.

"I put myself into my playing," remarked the ardent musician.

"That," replied Miss Cayenne, "may explain why it is sometimes difficult to recognize the composer."

Cupid's Hearty Appetite.

"You know," said the soulful youth, "music is the food of love—"

"Nonsense!" replied the practical fellow. "My love prefers lobster salad, terrapin and other expensive fodder."

CIVIC SOLICITUDE.

But just as the citizen was about to have the man who had sandbagged him arrested, he was opportunely waited on by a committee of the Commercial club.

"We have the welfare of our beautiful city much at heart," they observed.

"I am glad to hear that!" replied the citizen, cordially. "So have I."

The committee cleared their throats.

"Of course the price of real estate is about the main element in the welfare of a city," they went on.

"Of course," the citizen assented, being something of a booster himself.

Here the committee, looking at him very hard, came to the point.

"We have the honor to inform you," quoth they, "that real estate made up into sandbags yields more profit and by that commands a higher price, than real estate in any other form."

This naturally ended the matter. The citizen saw the point at once, and was profuse in his thanks at being set right, while the committee went on their way rejoicing in the consciousness of a good thing done.—Ramsey Benson, in Puck.

ON THE BRINY DEEP.

Mrs. Debrown—Sorry I've been away so long, dear. I've been interested reading about a prince who threw up his kingdom to—

Debrown (faintly)—Was he on board a ship?

The Fireman's Daughter.

For love of her a youth did burn,
Till finally it blazed out.
She poured cold water on his flame
And her father put him out.
—Baltimore American.

So Good of Him.

"Well," said Mrs. Kindhart, who had answered the ring of the front door bell, "I suppose I can give you something, but you'll have to go 'round to the kitchen."

"All right, lady," replied Hungry Hawkes, "I ain't too proud ter be accommodatin'. House cleanin', I suppose, an' yer dinin' room ain't fit fur use, eh?"—Philadelphia Press.

The Flippant Youth.

"You know it all now, my son," said the old man, "but when you have reached my age you will find you know comparatively nothing."

"I guess that's right, dad," replied the flippant youth. "I've often heard that one forgets much in his declining years."—Chicago Daily News.

Absence of Mind.

Browning — So your engagement with the rich widow is broken off, eh? What was the trouble?

Greening—Oh, one of my famous bad breaks, as usual. In an unguarded moment I asked her if I was the only man she ever loved.—Chicago Daily News.

In the Padded Cells.

"Who is that young man there repeating to himself: 'Eighty-nine, ninety, ninety-one' all the time?"

"He was saving a thousand coupons for a meerschaum pipe, and the company went bankrupt on his nine hundred and ninety-first."—Judge.

In Her Name.

"Can you tell me who lives here?" inquired the postman of the new tenant.

"Well," sighed Mr. Henry Peck—for it was none other—"if it comes to that, I guess you must mean my wife."—Judge.

It Would Crowd Him.

"Simpkins refuses to have his flat papered," reported the agent of the building.

"What's the matter now?" inquired the owner.

"He claims they haven't room enough as it is."—Judge.

Imprudepce.

Fond Mother—To be quite frank, doctor, the poor girl has been eating her heart out—

Brusque Old Physician—Ha! When will young people learn to eat prudently? (He leaves four kinds of medicine.)—Puck.

Not an Expert Opinion.

"Father," asked little Rollo, "what is prosperity?"

"Prosperity, my son, as far as I can make it out, is something certain eminent financiers announce as evidence that they approve of the administration."—Washington Star.

Archaeology and Architecture.

"The mound builders reared enormous structures for which it is difficult to see any use."

"Perhaps," commented the man from Harrisburg, "there were grafters in those days."—Washington Star.

Facts in the Case.

Singleton—Can a man live as cheaply after marriage as he can before?

Wedderly—No; but he feels cheaper.—Chicago Daily News.

PACKING THE TRUNK WHEN TRAVELING.

No matter how fond a girl is of traveling, she generally considers it a great nuisance to pack and unpack her trunk, and probably nothing would prevent it being something of a trouble. But the bother can be considerably lessened by having as complete a "trunk outfit" as possible and (a most important point) having in one's home a special box or drawer where all these things are kept when not in use.

A complete list of what one always wants to take away is also a great help. Then when it is time to pack the trunk and all these things are taken out and made ready everything goes easily and quickly.

First, of course, comes the case for toilet articles, with little pockets for brush, comb, toothbrush, sponge, hairpins, etc. The pockets for toothbrush and sponge must be lined with rubber, or, if one does not want to use rubber in this case, the toothbrush can have a little rubber-lined case of its own and the sponge a bag that draws up with a string.

The manicure set may have its own special case or pockets made for it in a larger case. A little chamois-lined bag for powder and a small powder puff also go with this part of the outfit.

One of the greatest conveniences in packing a trunk is to have cases made like envelopes for shoes and corets. For the corsets they should be made of dimity. For shoes dimity can be used, but something a little heaver is better. Each case should hold one shoe or a pair of slippers. The envelope flap, buttoning over, keeps them closed and gives the least trouble.

A long narrow case of the dimity for each light parasol that is to be packed keeps the parasols clean and also reminds one that they are to be packed. These are best open at the end, but the other cases may be open either at the end or side, as one may prefer.

A traveling medicine case is very useful. Not that a girl is likely to carry much in the way of medicine, but the bottles are generally very safe for carrying any kind of liquid alcohol for curling the hair, perfume, witch hazel to use for possible bruises, and one bottle may be used for tooth powder and another for toilet powder.—Philadelphia Press.

ADDITIONS TO THE KITCHEN SCRAPBOOK.

Home-made Mucilage—If you make your own mucilage (one heaping teaspoonful of gum arabic to an ordinary mucilage bottle gives it pure at a cheaper rate than that bought ready made,) you can dispense with court plasters, liquid or otherwise, except where an antiseptic is necessary, says Woman's Home Companion. Ordinary cuts can be coated with this quite as effectively as with the patent preparation. Two coats thoroughly dried will stand the application of water better than anything but the adhesive plaster doctors use—an inconvenient, expensive luxury.

Preparing Hot Cloths—If it is necessary to apply hot cloths to a sick person, and very often it is, there is a good method of having them hotter than they could be wrung by hand if they are laid in a wooden bucket of water and quickly passed through a small wringer. A child's toy wringer can be fastened to the bucket for the purpose. The cloth can be lifted with a fork and rapidly run through the wringer. In cases of severe chills the wet, hot cloths bring relief much more quickly than heat from hot water bags or bottles, and are more soothing.

"Individual Shortcakes"—This is indeed the season for shortcakes, for besides the strawberries there are numerous other fruits to be used. One housekeeper always serves this dessert in little cakes. Making a biscuit dough, she rolls it out a trifle thinner than when used as a breadstuff. She cuts the dough as for biscuit and bakes two together, buttering the under one. When baked she separates them, spreads the fruit between and puts a generous amount on top, serving them as individual shortcakes.

Flaked Soap.—Flaked soap is expensive to buy. But you can flake your own by scraping down ordinary soap with a suet scraper. These scrapers are also useful for flaking dripping when in winter it gets too hard to be easily rubbed into flour when making pastry or cakes.

Chests for the Bride.

Every fall bride will want a box to hold the articles of her trousseau as they are gathered together. Beautiful boxes of cedar may be purchased for little, and are made in a very convenient way. Instead of the lid lifting up, as did the box of great-grandma so long ago, the front may be dropped down, revealing two drawers to hold the things. The box locks securely and the effect is very neat. Dark cedar boxes are ornamented with the bride's initials in German letters of solid brass placed on the false lid.

No Use.

"Are you feeling very ill?" asked the doctor. "Let me see your tongue, please?"

"What's the use, doctor?" replied the patient, "no tongue can tell how bad I feel."—Roseleaf.

By CLEVELAND MOFFETT

FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE PINKERTONS

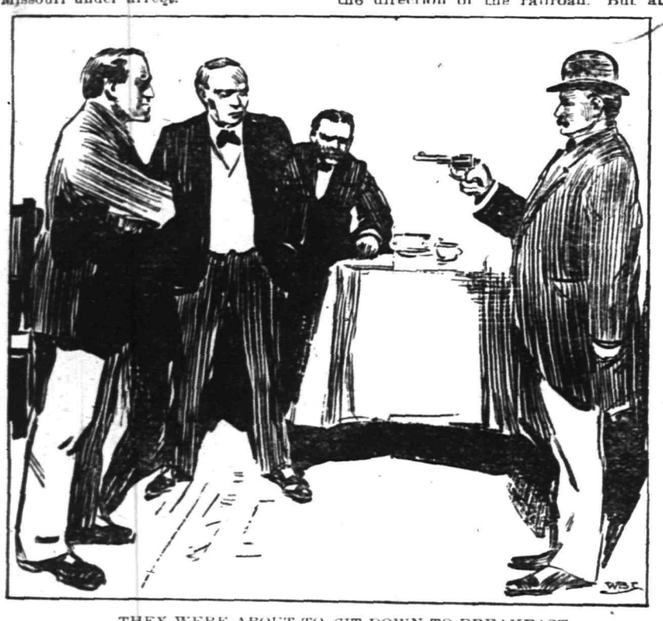
The Destruction of the Renos

Taking up the investigation with his accustomed energy, Mr. Pinkerton traced John Reno back to Seymour, Ind., where the gang was so strongly entrenched in the midst of corrupt officials and an intimidated populace that any plan of open arrest was out of the question. Recognizing this, Allan Pinkerton had recourse to the cunning of his craft. He began by stationing in Seymour a trustworthy assistant, who was instructed, on a given day and at a given hour, to decoy John Reno to the railroad station on any pretense that might suggest itself. Then he arranged to have half a dozen Missourians, the biggest and most powerful fellows he could find, led by the sheriff of Daviess county, board an express train on the Ohio & Mississippi railroad at Cincinnati, and ride through to Seymour, arriving there at the time agreed upon with his assistant. Along with them was to be a constable bearing all the papers necessary to execute a requisition.

When the train reached Seymour there was the usual crowd lounging about the station, and in it were John Reno and Mr. Pinkerton's lieutenant, who had entirely succeeded in his task. While Reno was staring at the passengers as they left the train he was suddenly surrounded and seized by a dozen strong arms; and before his friends could rally to his aid, or realize what was happening, he was clapped in irons, carried aboard the train, and soon was rolling away to Missouri under arrest.



THEY WERE ABOUT TO SIT DOWN TO BREAKFAST.

Reno's friends stoutly contested the case in the Missouri courts, arguing that the prisoner had been kidnaped, and that the law had therefore been violated by his captors. The courts decided against them on this point, however, and John Reno with several less important members of the gang, was tried and convicted. He was sentenced to 25 years of hard labor in the Missouri penitentiary.

This was the first break in the ranks of the band, the first instance in which they had suffered for their crimes. But the bold spirit of the organization was still unbroken. Three brothers still remained to replace the one who was gone; and so far from learning caution, the band launched forthwith into still more daring and frequent offenses. Trains were "held up" right and left; robberies were committed, and early in 1868 the gang made a famous raid across the country through Indiana and Illinois, robbing safes in county treasurers' offices in a number of places. In several instances some of the members were arrested; but they always managed to have the prosecution quashed, or in some way to escape conviction. In the spring of 1868 their operations became so outrageous and the situation so serious, that Allan Pinkerton was again called upon to do something in the cause of public safety.

In March of this year the safe of the county treasurer at Magnolia, Harrison county, Ia., was robbed of about $14,000, and Allan Pinkerton detailed his son, William A. Pinkerton, and two assistants to run down the burglars. Arrived at the scene of the robbery, the detectives found that the thieves had made their escape on a hand-car and had gone in the direction of Council Bluffs. At this time in Council Bluffs there was a low saloon, kept by a man who had formerly lived in Seymour, and who was known as a bad character. It was decided to keep a sharp watch on this resort, Mr. Pinkerton reasoning that since Seymour was the friendly refuge of the Renos, it was altogether likely that the outlaws would have a friend, and perhaps an abettor, in the saloonkeeper, who had once lived there. After two days' watching the detectives observed a large man of dark complexion enter the saloon and engage in close conversation with the proprietor, having with him, evidently, some mysterious business.

Investigation disclosed this man to be Michael Rogers, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Council Bluffs, and the owner of an extensive property in the adjoining counties. Puzzled, but still persuaded that he had found a clew, Mr. Pinkerton put a "shadow" on Rogers, and hurried back to Magnolia, where he learned that on the day preceding the robbery Rogers had been seen in Magnolia, where he had paid his taxes, and in doing so had loitered for some time in the treasurer's office. This also looked suspicious. But, on the other hand, search as he might, the detective could find nothing against Rogers' character, everyone testifying to his entire respectability.

Still unconvinced, Mr. Pinkerton returned to Council Bluffs, where he was informed by the man who had been "shadowing" Rogers that several strange men had been seen to enter Rogers' house, and had not been seen to come out again. The watch was continued more closely than ever, and after four days of patient waiting, Rogers, accompanied by three strangers, was seen to leave the house cautiously and take a west-bound train on the Pacific railroad. One of these men, a brawny, athletic fellow nearly six feet tall, and about 28 years of age, Mr. Pinkerton shrewdly suspected was Frank Reno, although he could not be certain, never having seen Frank Reno. Feeling sure that if his suspicions were correct, the men would ultimately return to Rogers' house, Mr. Pinkerton did not follow them on the train, but contented himself with keeping the strictest watch for their return. The very next morning the same four men were discovered coming back to the house from the direction of the railroad. But at that hour no train was due, which was a little curious; and another curious point was that they were all covered with mud, and bore marks of having been engaged in some severe, rough labor. The hour was early, the dwellers in Council Bluffs were not yet astir. A little later the city was thrown into a fever of excitement by the news that the safe of the county treasurer at Glenwood, in Mills county, about 30 miles distant, had been robbed the previous night. No trace had yet been got of the thieves, but everything indicated that they were the same men who had robbed the safe at Magnolia. One remarkable point of similarity in the two cases was the means employed by the robbers in escaping, a hand-car having been used also by the Glenwood thieves; and they, too, were believed to have fled in the direction of Council Bluffs. Investigation soon made this absolutely certain, for the missing hand-car was found lying beside the railroad a short distance from the Council Bluffs station.

Putting these new disclosures beside his previous suspicions and discoveries, Mr. Pinkerton was further strengthened in his distrust of the man Rogers, and although the local authorities to whom he revealed his suspicions laughed at him, declaring that Rogers was one of the most respectable citizens of the state, he resolved to attempt an arrest. Proceeding to Rogers' house with all the force he could command, he placed a guard at front and rear, and then, with a few attendants, made his way inside. The first person he met was Mr. Rogers himself, who affected to be very indignant at the intrusion.

"Who have you in this house?" asked Mr. Pinkerton.

"Nobody but my family," answered Mr. Rogers.

"We'll see about that," answered Mr. Pinkerton, and then, turning to his men, he ordered them to search the premises.

They did so, and soon came upon the three strangers, who were taken so completely by surprise that they made no effort at resistance. They were about to sit down to breakfast, which was spread for them in the kitchen. A comparison with photographs and descriptions left no doubt that one of the three was Frank Reno. A second—a man of dark complexion, tall and well built—proved to be Albert Perkins, a well-known member of the Reno gang. The third was none other than the notorious Miles Ogle, the youngest member of the band, who afterward came to be known as the most expert counterfeiter in the United States. Once when captured there was found in his possession some of the best counterfeit plates ever made.

While they were securing the four men the detectives noticed that smoke was curling out of the kitchen stove accompanied by a sudden blaze. Mr. Pinkerton pulled off a lid, and found on the coals several packages of bank notes, already on fire. Fortunately, the notes had been so tightly wrapped together that only a few of them were destroyed before the packages were got out. Those that remained were afterward identified as the money that had been stolen from the Glenwood safe. There was thus no question that these were the robbers so long sought for. A further search of the house brought to light two sets of burglars' tools, which served as cumulative evidence.

The men were carried to Glenwood by the next train. They were met by a great and excited crowd, and for a time were in danger of lynching. Better counsel prevailed, however, and they were placed in the jail to await trial.

With the men in secure, safe custody, there was no doubt of their ultimate conviction, and everyone was breathing easier at the thought that at last the Reno gang was robbed of its terrors. Then suddenly—no one will ever know how it happened—the prisoners made their escape. Great was the surprise and chagrin of the sheriff of Mills county, when, on the morning of April 1, 1868, he entered the jail, only to find their cells empty. A big hole sawed through the wall told by what way they had made their exit. They left behind the mocking salutation: "April Fool," scrawled in chalk over the floors and walls of the jail.

A large reward was offered for the capture of the robbers, but nothing was heard of them until two months later, when an express car on the Ohio & Mississippi railroad was boarded at Marshfield, Ind., by a gang of masked men, and robbed of $98,000. The messenger made a brave resistance, but could not cope with the robbers, who lifted him bodily and hurled him out of the car, down a steep embankment, while the train was running at high speed.

All the facts in the case pointed to the Reno brothers as the authors of this outrage, for by frequent repetition their methods of robbery had became familiar. Allan Pinkerton, furthermore, obtained precise evidenc that it was the work of the Renos from secret agents whom he had stationed at Seymour to watch the doings of the gang. Two of these agents engaged apparently in business at Seymour, one setting up as a saloonkeeper in a rough part of the town, another taking railroad employment, which kept him constantly near the station. A third made a wide acquaintance by passing for a gambler and general good fellow. So successful were they that Allan Pinkerton was soon in possession of facts proving not only that the Marshfield robbery had been committed by the Renos, but that another train robbery which followed was executed by John Moore, Charles Gerroll, William Sparks, and three others, all members of the Reno organization. Moore, Gerroll and Sparks were arrested shortly after, and placed on a train to be taken from Seymour to Brownstone, the county seat. But they never reached their destination. As the train stopped at a small station some miles from Brownstone, a band of masked men, well armed, rushed on board, overpowered the officers, hurried the three outlaws away to a neighboring farm yard, and there strung them up to a beech tree, while an old German, who owned the farm, looked on approvingly.

This was the first act of retributive justice done by the secret vigilance committee of southern Indiana, an organization as extraordinary as the situation it was created to deal with. The entire population of that part of Indiana seemed to have risen in self-defense to crush out lawlessness. A second act followed several days later, when three other men who had been concerned in the latest train robbery, having been captured by the county officials, were taken from their hands and condemned to the same fate as their companions. Each one, as he was about to be swung off, was asked by the maskers if he had anything to say. The first two shook their heads sullenly, and died without speaking. The third, standing on a barrel with the rope round his neck, looked over the crowd with contemptuous bravado, and, addressing them as a lot of "moss-back Hoosiers," said he was glad he was not of their class, and was proud to die as a good republican. The barrel was kicked away, the rope stiffened with his weight, and there ended the career of the sixth member of the band.

Hard times followed for the surviving Renos. Realizing that their power was broken, they fled in various directions. The three brothers, Frank, William and "Sim," though still at large, were not left long to enjoy their liberty. A large price was placed on their heads, and betrayal came quickly. William and "Sim" were arrested soon after in Indianapolis, and turned over to the local authorities, who, in order to avoid the vigilance committee, took the prisoners to New Albany, in an adjoining county, where they were placed in jail.

The vigilance committee growing stronger and more determined every day, now scoured the whole country for other members of the band or for persons believed to be in sympathy with it. They literally went on the "war path" through this whole region of Indiana, and it went ill with any poor wretch who incurred their suspicion. Like the "Whitecaps" of a later day, they sent warnings to all who came on their black-list, and administered by night, sometimes by day, such promiscuous floggings and other forms of punishment that the tough and criminal element of the region was entirely cowed, and feared to raise a hand in defense of the Renos, as it had previously done. Up to the time the vigilance committee was formed not a member of the Reno gang had been convicted in that locality, largely because the people were afraid to testify against them. They knew that if they should testify, their stock would be killed, their barns burned, and they themselves waylaid and beaten. This was the reason offered for the formation of the vigilance committee of southern Indiana. Whether a justification or not, the committee must certainly be credited with having rid the state of a monstrous evil.

In the excitement of other events the Pinkertons had not forgotten the men who had escaped from the Glenwood jail. They finally traced Miles Ogle and Albert Perkins to Indianapolis; and there Ogle was captured, but Perkins escaped. Frank Reno was discovered a little later at Windsor Canada, where he was living with Charles Anderson, a professional burglar, safe-blower and "short-card" gambler, who had fled to Canada to escape prosecution. Reno, operating with Anderson, made a practice of registering as "Frank Going," if the enterprise in which he was engaged was prospering, and as "Frank Coming" if it was not prospering. He and Anderson were now arrested on a charge of robbery and of assault with intent to kill, in the case of the express messenger hurled from his car at Marshfield, Ind. Under this form their offense became extraditable; and after a long trial before the stipendiary or government magistrate, Gilbert McMicken, at Windsor, the men were ordered for extradition. Aided by the ablest lawyers, they carried their case, however, to the highest court in Canada. But the decision of the lower court was affirmed; and in October, 1868, the men were surrendered into the hands of Allan Pinkerton, who was delegated by the United States government to receive them. It was due to the patience and persistence of Mr. Alfred Gaither, the western manager of the Adams Express company, and his then assistant, Mr. L. C. Weir, later president of the company, and to the general policy of the company to permit no compromise with thieves, that, regardless of cost and time, the prosecution was continued until it issued thus successfully.

Michael Rogers was also discovered to be in Windsor at this time, and he was known to have had a hand in the Marshfield robbery; but he escaped arrest, and remained securely in Windsor for a year or two. Later, though, he reached the penitentiary, being brought to grief by a burglary done at Tolono, Ill. On coming out, he joined the notorious McCartney gang of counterfeiters, and had many narrow escapes. The last known of him, an old man, he was living quietly on a farm in Texas.

Made at last secure of Reno and Anderson, Allan Pinkerton chartered a tug to carry them to Cleveland, and thus avoid the friends who, as he had reason to know, were waiting across the river in Detroit to effect a rescue. When the tug had gone about 20 miles, it was run down by a large steamer and sunk, the passengers, including the prisoners, being saved from drowning with the greatest difficulty. The prisoners were carried on to Cleveland by another boat, and from there were hurried on by rail to New Albany, where they were placed in jail along with "Sim" and William Reno.

The final passage in the history of the Reno gang occurred about a month later, in the latter part of November, 1868, when one day a passenger car was dropped off at Seymour, Ind., some distance from the station. There was nothing remarkable in this, nor did the car attract any attention. That night a train passing through Seymour took up the car and drew it away. A few people about the station when the car was taken up remembered afterward that this car was filled with strange-looking men, who wore Scotch caps and black cloth masks, and seemed to be under the command of a tall, dark-haired man addressed by every one as "No. 1." Although there were at least 50 of these men, it is a remarkable fact, developed in a subsequent investigation, that the conductor of the train could remember nothing about the incident, declaring that he did not enter the car, and knew nothing of its being attached to his train. It is certain that the company of masked men did everything in their power to avoid attention, scarcely speaking to one another during the ride and making all their movements as noiseless as possible.

The train reached New Albany at two o'clock in the morning. The car was detached, and was presently emptied of its 50 men as silently and mysteriously as it had been filled. A few hurried commands were given by "No. 1," and then the company marched in quiet order to the jail. Arrived there, they summoned the jailer to open the doors, but were met with a firm refusal and the shining barrel of a revolver. There followed an exchange of shots, in which the sheriff received a ball in the arm, and two local police officers were captured. Without loss of time the jail doors were battered down; the company entered, and taking the three Reno brothers and their friend, Charles Anderson, from their cells, placed nooses that they had ready around the men's necks, and hung them to the rafters in the corridors of the jail. Then, having locked the doors of the jail, leaving the prisoners secure, they made their way silently back to the New Albany station, reaching there in time to catch the train that drew out at 3:30 a. m. The same special car in which they had come was coupled to this train, and dropped off at the switch when Seymour was reached. This was just before daybreak on a dreary November morning.

Who these 50 men were was never discovered, although, because of the fact that Reno and Anderson had been extradited from Great Britain, the general government made an investigation. It was rumored, however, and generally understood, that the company included some of the most prominent people in Seymour, among others a number of railroad and express employes. It was found that at the time of the lynching all the telegraph wires leading from New Albany had been cut, so that it was noon of the following day before the country learned of it.

The newspapers described the leader of the party as a man of unusual stature, who wore a handsome diamond ring on the little finger of his right hand. Later some significance was attached to the fact that a well-known railroad official who answered this description as to stature and who always wore a handsome diamond ring previous to the lynching, ceased to wear his ring for several years afterward.

After the execution of her brothers, it was rumored that Laura Reno had taken an oath to devote the rest of her life to avenging them; and for a moment there were threats and mutterings of reprisals from allies or surviving members of the gang. But these latter were not heard again after a certain morning, the third day after the execution, when the people of Seymour, on leaving their homes, were startled to see on the walls and in other public places large posters proclaiming that if any property was injured or destroyed, or any persons molested or assaulted, or if there was any further talk in regard to recent happenings, some 25 persons, therein frankly named, who were known to be sympathizers with the Renos or to be more or less intimately connected with them, had better beware. And as for the sister's deadly oath, she did no act in proof of the violent intentions imputed to her, but instead, subsequently became the wife of a respectable man and settled down to a useful life, though a much more commonplace one than she had previously known. John Reno, after serving 15 years in the Missouri penitentiary, was released, and went on the old farm. "Clint" Reno, or "Honest" Reno, always stayed at the old homestead, and has never been willing to speak of his brothers or of what happened to them. Seymour, purged of the evil influences that corrupted it, has grown into a thriving and beautiful little city, and is to-day one of the model towns of Indiana

CLINTON AVE. DEFEATED

Costly Errors Made by Plainfield Team Accounts for High Bridge's Victory.

"BRIT" MARTIN DOES WELL.

Local Team's Second Baseman Makes a Triple, Double and Single While at Bat Four Times.

Unsteadiness in the field lost the game for Clinton Avenue at High Bridge Saturday afternoon, for the Plainfielders made five costly errors, and although they made eleven hits, scored their only runs in the sixth. The score was 13-2, the High Bridge scoring in every inning but the first and last.

Kraft had the better of the pitchers' argument, fanning eleven Plainfielders and passing but two. Randolph got eight strike-outs, but was unsteady at times, giving five bases on balls. "Brit" Martin's playing was a feature of the game. He scored a triple, a double and a single out of four times at bat and took four chances in the field without an error. Morgan, of the High Bridge nine, got 1,000 in batting, driving out a two-bagger and two singles, drawing a pass and getting hit. The score:

SOMERVILLE SHUTS OUT SCOTCH PLAINS' TEAM

The Scotch Plains team went to Somerville Saturday afternoon and stacked up against the strong West End nine of that town. In by-gone days Scotch Plains always considered Somerville easy, and it has many a West End scalp dangling in its trophy room. This time, however, things were different. The best the canny Scott could do was to draw nine consecutive goose eggs, while the talented gentleman up the road made four very large runs. Both teams drew on Plainfield for help, and Somerville must have had the first pick or had better luck filling in the draw, as she had all the best of the transaction. The great-and-only Montross—the "Smiling Jimmy" of many a hard-four diamond battle—was slab artist for the West Ends, and he made the Scotch Plains contingent look like the proverbial 30 cents. He gave neither a base on balls nor hit a batter, and allowed only two safe hits during the whole game. As the West Ends played an errorless game in the field, only 29 batsmen faced him in the entire nine innings. That's what his friends called "going some." Weiner was also effective for Scotch Plains, but his support was simply rank.

Y.M.C.A. IN FIRST PLACE

Local Nine Gains Lead in State League by Shutting Out Newark.

SEVEN TO TWO, THE SCORE.

Peacock Pitched Great Game and Plainfielders Gave Good Support—Pollard's Running Catch.

A happy combination of hits and loose fielding on the part of the visitors enabled the Y. M. C. A. nine to roll up seven runs on the Newark association team at Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon and set up nine goose-eggs for the leaders of the league. Results: Plainfield now noses Newark closely for first place in the State league, each team having seven wins and two defeats.

The local nine bunched runs in the first and sixth. Hitchner, the Newark pitcher, was touched for three singles in the opening session and Will Schoonmaker and Miller crossed the plate, the former on a wild pitch. Hitchner threw the ball away again in the sixth, after the Schoonmakers had scored and Jacot and Loizeaux scored on this second wild pitch. A pass, some clever baserunning and a hit scored Lotzeaux in the eighth.

"Jack" Peacock, who dealt the bends for the locals, proved "an enigma." The Newarkers found him for nine safe hits, but they were all so scattered that no visitor completed the bag circuit. Peacock fanned five, and did not give a base on balls. Hitchner fanned five during the seven innings he officiated, and gave as many passes. Manual, who succeeded him, gave one base on balls.

A feature of the game was Pollard's one-handed catch of Jacot's long drive in the seventh. The ball stuck in ihs glove after he made a thirty yard dash to ge to it, and he doubled to second, retiring Conway.

ST. MARY'S LOSES TO THE HIGHLAND A. C.

The Highland A. C. trimmed the St. Mary's nine at Scotch Plains Saturday afternoon by a score of 6-4. It was an up-hill game, for St. Mary's had a lead of 3-1 in the fifth, when the Highlands hammered in three and took the lead. Conshay did feature work in the box for the Highlands, fanning fourteen. He gave four passes. The St. Mary's players made ten errors, while but a single misplay was scored against the Highlands. Hanna, of St. Mary's, fanned eight and passed one. The lineups and score:

NEW MARKET FIELD CLUB DEFEATS PLAINFIELD IOLAS.

The New Market Field Club nine defeated the Iola A. C. at New Market Saturday afternoon by a score of 11-7. The Iolas started off with four runs in the first session, but the fourth and fifth were disastrous for the Plainfielders, as the New Market boys solved Russell's delivery and amassed nine runs, a safe lead. Colored Giants Won.

Out-classed by the Colored Giants, the Jr. O. U. A. M. met defeat on Hope Common, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 18-1. The Giants had a pitcher who, it is said, used to pitch for the Philadelphia Colored Giants, and he was a puzzle to the Juniors.

SUNSHINE SALE

The Sunshine of a new Prosperity is already shooting its warm rays of happiness over this Great Country of Ours. By Fall it will have girdled the world and every one of us will have forgotten these long lean months when life was a struggle for any man whether rich or poor. More wheels are turning, more men are "getting back on the job" every day. It means bigger and better buying this winter. That's why we are sacrificing on these summer goods today—so that we may have the room and the money to buy the winter goods you will be hungry for just as soon as the season opens. It's an opportune time to buy when the "other fellow" wants to sell and we certainly want to sell. Prices a third and more off regular prices show the due necessity that we are laboring under. It's simply a question of whether you will sit idly by and let the other fellow reap the benefits of these little prices.

TO WELCOME MAJ. MARTIN

Elizabeth Council Appoints Committee to Arrange for Demonstration.

DUE HOME ON SATURDAY.

The Nation to Welcome Victorious American Rifle Team—Ceremonies In New York City On Arrival of Steamer.

Proud of his achievements on the Olympic range, in England, where with the rest of the American rifle team he scored a signal triumph over the teams representing all other nations, Elizabeth is awaiting to formally welcome home Major William B. Martin, formerly captain of Co. K, of Plainfield. A big demonstration will be held at the county seat in his honor some time next week and it is not unlikely that Plainfield will play an important part in it.

The Elizabeth Common Council last night passed a long resolution laudatory of Major Martin and appointed a committee to make arrangements for a monster reception when he returns. An ample appropriation has been made and it is expected that the event will mark a red letter day in Elizabeth history. The committee consists of Brig. Gen. D. F. Collins, chairman; Charles H. Moore, John P. Whelan, Conrad Hall, Frederick J. Richter, Augustus W. Schwartz, H. H. Isham, Charles F. Black, John J. Kerbrick and Carl F. Muelle:.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—Next Saturday America will welcome home her victorious rifle team from the Olympic games. With the limited funds at the disposal of the committee on reception, it has been impossible to prepare and handle the demonstration which should be accorded the victors over teams from all shooting countries, but this is more than set-off by the courtesies which will be extended by the government. Representatives of the federal government in the persons of military and naval officers, of the State and city of New York, of the various militia organizations interested, and of the national board for the promotion or rifle practice and the National Rifle Association of America, together with a number of distinguished civilians interested in rifle practice, will extend to the members of the team the congratulations which they so thoroughly deserve.

The treasury department has placed at the disposal of the reception committee the revenue cutter Mohawk, the largest in the service. On the morning of August 8 the reception committee and invited guests will embark and proceed to quarantine where the team will be taken from the New York. On the way up the bay speeches by distinguished officers and civilians and a luncheon will be served. As soon as the baggage can be cleared the team, with a number of others, will leave for Camp Perry, Ohio, to attend the annual rifle matches. A large party will go from Washington to New York to attend the ceremonies and many of them will proceed to Camp Perry with the team. General Fred D. Grant, commanding the department of the east, with his staff, will be on board the Mohawk, with other representatives of the army and navy, and a military band will add to the enjoyment of the occasion.

The Olympic rifle team is headed by General James A. Drain, one of the most prominent figures in rifle practice and national guard work. Although a comparatively young man, he is president of the National Rifle Association and a member of the national board for the promotion of rifle practice, chief of ordinance of the State of Washington, member of the new militia board and editor of Arms and the Man, the shooting publication. The adjutant is Captain Frank E. Evans, U. S. marine corps, retired, now secretary to Senator Briggs, of Trenton. At the head of the team is Sergeant W. F. Leuschner, of the 7th New York, of Buffalo. He tied with Major Martin, of New Jersey, but had the highest score at the 1,000-yard range. Sergeant Leuschner is an old-time shot and has attended the national matches for years as a member of a team or as an individual. Major William B. Martin, of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., is one of the best shots in that State. His most notable achievement was the winning of the Wimbledon cup in 1901 with 18 points handicap for shooting a magazine rifle. Major C. B. Winder, divisional inspector of small arms' practice, of Ohio, is a Spanish war veteran and a noted shot. He was on the Palma team of 1903 and made the highest score. He was a member of the Palma team of 1907 and of the Ohio State team from 1901 to 1907. He won the Leech cup in 1903, the gold medal in the national individual rifle match in 1905 and the silver medal in the na-

APPROPRIATE $500 TO REVISE BLDG. ORDINANCE

Following a discussion in which numerous little pleasantries were exchanged, the Common Council last night appropriated $500 to meet the expense of having the building ordinances of the city revised. The plan, as explained by Mr. Buxton who introduced the resolution, is to have an expert go over every clause and after embodying the new ones adopted by other cities to cover the up-to-date methods of construction submit the entire frame-up to the Council for adoption.

Mr. Gloak took the opportunity to ask when the subject was broached who was going to do the work. Mr. Buxton informed him that was a matter the committee would decide. Mr. Gloak retorted that he thought perhaps most of it would go for a stenographer, a remark that brought a quick response that no matter who got the money none of it would come the committee's way.

While the matter was under discussion, Mr. Gloak again took the floor and opined that the $500 might be saved by taking the building ordinances recently arranged by other cities and changing them to conform with Plainfield's needs.

"We're leaders, not copyists," was all the reply Mr. Buxton vouchsafed and the canny Gloak subsided. The resolution was finally passed without a dissenting vote.

The Council also passed a resolution calling for an expenditure of $900 to install auxiliary fire alarms and call boxes in the city schools. The plan is one recommended by Chief Doane and was explained in detail in the columns of The Daily Press some months ago.

FIRE HORSE TUMBLES DOWN HOTEL STAIRWAY

A team of horses belonging to Central Hook-and-ladder Company No. 1, of Somerville, mistook the horn of a passing automobile for a fire alarm gong, while standing in a lane in the rear of Main street, yesterday morning. The horses were hitched to a truck without a driver. They started down the lane at a good clip and turned down into Main street, missing a number of vehicles and pedestrians by a narrow margin.

The team raced up Main street and attempted to turn into Division street, where the Central Hook-and-ladder house is situated, but failed to turn the corner short enough and dashed head on into the Ten Eyck Hotel. At the corner of the hotel is a narrow stone stairway leading to the basement of the hotel protected by an iron railing. The team knocked down the fence and one of the horses suddenly disappeared down the stairway. The other horse seeing that its mate was in trouble braced itself and stood still until assistance arrived.

The horse in the stairway was in a bad fix. It lay wedged in the stairway with its legs doubled up under it and the broken iron fence on top of it.

The basement door of the hotel was opened and the horse was pulled through into the wine cellar, where it regained its feet. The wine cellar door was too low to get the horse out again unless it could be induced to walk through on its knees and ascend a steep flight of stairs.

The big gray horse was finally taken from one room to another in the basement of the hotel until it reached the barber shop in the rear of the building. The stairway leading to the barber shop from the street was broad, but the door was low. The gray is an intelligent animal, who after a few trials understood what was wanted of him. He crouched down and worked his way through the doorway and then climbed up the stairs to the street. The animal was badly cut about the legs, but it is believed that he will be continued in service.

Will Sue for Lamp Explosion.

Suit for $500 damages is to be brought in the district court by Francis Anderson, of Sherman avenue, against the Acetylene Lamp Co., of New York, for injuries and damage resulting from the explosion of a lamp owned by him at his home about two months ago. Anderson claims that the damage is due him because the lamp is guaranteed not to explode. At the time of the accident, he was badly burned about the hands. Francis J. Blatz is his attorney, and the case will come up September 3.

Mr. Smith Better.

A report circulated today that Republican Chairman Frank H. Smith, who has been ill for some time, is worse, is unfounded. Inquiry at his home revealed the fact that he is attending to his duties at Elizabeth as county registrar of deeds and that he is somewhat improved in health.

FAVOR JOINT DISPOSAL

Councilmen Sanction Borough's Request to Use the City Sewer Beds.

CONTRACT MAY COME LATER.

Resolution Passed After a Discussion In Which Three Members Announce Their Opposition.

"It is the opinion of the Common Council that the borough of North Plainfield should be allowed to use the Plainfield sewer beds as an outlet for its proposed system and that the streets and sewers committee be empowered to prepare plans for submission to this body."

Such, in substance, was a resolution passed by the Common Council, last night, in answer to North Plainfield's application for the privilege of connecting its contemplated sewer system with the city disposal beds, paying for the same at a rate agreeable to both sides. It was carried after a long discussion in which several of the councilmen expressed themselves as being in opposition to the plan, Messrs. Montgomery, Suydam and Frank Randolph voting against it.

The resolution was introduced at the close of one of the customary "ten minute" recesses, which in reality was nearly an hour. Mr. Montgomery stated as soon as it was read that he would sanction the joint disposal if the outlet was made somewhere out of the city, his inference being a trunk sewer as suggested by Mayor Fisk in a recent message. Frank Randolph followed with the opinion that North Plainfield should build its own disposal works and Mr. Suydam expressed himself as agreeing with both of them.

"I don't think that the city has a right to take in the borough," he said, "as it would have a tendency to depreciate Plainfield values. I represent a constituency in the Fourth ward and I know the people there are not in favor of this plan."

The impression prevailed among some of the councilmen that the passing of the resolution would bind the city to take in the borough no matter what sort of a contract was brought forward. Mr. Gloak explained that it would not be binding and Mr. Mygatt said:

"The resolution as drawn does not mention any contract; it merely conveys the statement that it is the sentiment of the Council that it would be to the best interests of the city to allow the borough to use the Plainfield beds."

Mr. Montgomery came forward with the explanation that a committee is now at work on the trunk outlet plan and that if the resolution went through, there would be nothing for this committee to do. It is the idea of Mayor Fisk, he said, to have Fanwood, Scotch Plains, Dunellen, Lincoln and Bound Brook join with the Plainfields in getting to tidewater and if the Plainfield beds were to be occupied jointly it would shut off the possibility of this plan. He suggested that the resolution be amended so as to include "other municipalities" in order to permit the trunk project to be carried on. The amendment was lost by a vote of 8 to 3. The original motion was put immediately afterward and carried.

MULE TEAM RAMS INTO CAB; PASSENGER AND DRIVER HURT.

Starting off on a gallop as soon as the driver left them standing in front of a Somerset street apartment, a pair of mules attached to a New York Transfer Co. delivery wagon ran afoul of a cab belonging to John Lynch at Manning avenue yesterday afternoon, doing considerable damage before they could be quieted. The pole of the wagon ran in under the cab, upsetting it, wrecking one wheel and tearing off one of the rubber tires. A passenger in the cab, who refused to give his name, was thrown heavily, but escaped with cuts from window glass and slight bruises. William Banks, colored, who was driving the cab, was pitched out headlong by the force of the collision and his left leg was badly sttrained. The cab horse was uninjured, but the mules were bruised by the collision.

The driver of the transfer wagon, seeing the team start, seized them immediately after the collision and prevented further damage. He and Banks got in a heated argument as to whom was to blame for the accident and Chief Weiss, of the borough police, had to assert his authority to prevent them from coming to blows. The damage to the cab will amount to about $15.

BLDG. INSPECTOR TO ACT

City Fathers Advised That They Have no Power to Consider P.S.C. Petition.

IT'S UP TO CHIEF T. O. DOANE.

In the Meanwhile the P. S. C. Goes Merrily On Building Its Huge Holder Without Any Authority.

The petition made by the Public Service Corporation to erect a huge gas tank alongside the present one in the East Fourth street yards was again brought up in the Common Council, last night. It was presented by Chairman Hibbard, of the fire and buildings committee, who offered a resolution that it be referred back to Building Inspector Doane for disposition. The motion was carried after several of the members had offered objections, the vote standing 7 to 4.

In bringing the matter before the Council, Mr. Hibbard submitted an opinion prepared for him by Acting Corporation Counsel Nelson Runyon. In this he stated that after a careful perusal of the city ordinances he failed to discover anything in them that gave the councilmen power to grant permission for the erection of the tank. It was a matter, he wrote, that came within the building inspector's prerogatives. Mr. Hibbard, accordingly, offered the resolution ed to referring the matter back to the inspector for his disposal.

Before the vote was taken, Mr. Suydam declared that he was opposed to referring the matter back o Inspector Doane.

"If we have no jurisdiction in this tank matter," he said, "then there is nothing in the ordinances that allows us to dispose of the concrete building petitions that are continually brought here."

He was backed up in his opinion by three other members but the resolution went through after an offered amendment had fallen by the wayside.

As the matter stands now, Building Inspector Doane can refuse to grant the permit if he sees fit. In the meantime, the Public Service people have gone ahead with the work and the tank is in process of erection. Chief Doane was interviewed this morning and stated that he would make no disposition until he had received official notification from the Council that the proposition was "up to him."

Mr. Gloak brought up at last night's meeting, the petitions of Morris Brothers and Allen Laing to build gasolene tanks of 1,000 gallons capacity under the sidewalks in front of their garages. He offered a resolution that they be referred to the fire and buildings committee and this was done. The matter has been in the hands of the street committee and Mr. Gloak announced that this body is not in favor of granting the requests.

LOCK-JAW CAUSES DEATH OF SEVEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL

Seized with tetanic convulsions last night as the result of a laceration of her left foot caused by stepping on a nail at her home last Thursday, Philinen Eatz, the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Eatz, of 367 Cottage place, died early this morning of lock-jaw. Dr. A. H. Dundon, who was summoned last night to treat the child for convulsions, at once diagnosed them as of tetanic origin and administered anti-toxin, but the treatment came too late.

Thursday of last week, as the little girl was playing about the yard at her home, she stepped on a piece of board containing a rusty nail, and her left foot was lacerated. The nail pierced the foot between the toes, cutting through her shoe and stocking. The flesh between the toes was torn and the sole of the foot slightly lacerated, but the child appeared to be in no especial pain and the wound was bandaged by her mother and did not prevent her from being about as usual until yesterday.

When their daughter was seized with convulsions yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Eatz became alarmed and summoned Dr. Dundon. They did not connect the injury to the child's foot with the ailment, but as soon as the physician saw the girl, he examined her for tetanic wounds. The cut on her foot was found to be considerably swollen. Anti toxin was at once administered, and the physician kept careful watch of his patient all night. Death came at about 2 o'clock this morning. The funeral is to be tomorrow morning, when the service will be at 8 o'clock from the house and at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

MARTINE SPURNS OFFICE

"Farmer-Orator" to Tell Democratic Committee Tonight That He Will Not Run.

HOLD MEETING AT ELIZABETH.

Plainfielder Says He Would Decline Both Senatorship and Congressional Nominations.

Having received private advices from Elizabeth that an effort will be made at the meeting of the Union County Democratic Committee, at that place tonight, to get him to stand as a candidate for the Congressional nomination in this district, James E. Martine expressed himself today in vigorous fasnion. He declared in no uncertain language that "once and for all" he is through with running for office, and that should he be nominated against his wishes, he would most certainly decline.

"I know that after I refused three years ago, they nominated me and I finally consented to run, but I am on to that now and should it be tried over again, I will say 'no' most emphatically. It is a poor policy for to be a 'one-man party'—it looks as though there was no other man to be put in the field. There are dozens and dozens of men who could make as good a run in the Fifth district as I, and the people are getting tired of voting for me all the time, at least those who have done so loyally year in and year out.

"As for Senator Johnston Cornish, of Warren, being selected, I think he would make a splendid candidate. But I know from his own lips that he will not consent to run. Eugene Burke, of Morristown, as I have said before, would make a most excellent candidate and a most excellent congressman. Then again, there are loads of others whom I realize would be a credit to the party and to the district. Let me tell you now and for all time, I will not be a candidate for congress nor for any other office, no matter how much I have cherished the hope in the past that I could represent my fellow citizens in congress."

As Mr. Martine concluded, he handed The Daily Press correspondent a note he had just received from Mrs. Martine, who is at Bailey's Island, Maine, at his camp there. "I see I have a rival," wrote the farmer-orator's wife, "and her name is Poly Tics." Mr. Martine had promised that he would spend August at his camp but at the last moment wrote his wife that friends in various parts of the State had urged him to make some speeches for them and he could not muster up courage to say "no." "I'll get no vacation this year, you see," commented Mr. Martine to the correspondent, "but, oh, darn it, what's the difference; Bryan will get none for four years."

Among the invitations accepted by the "Farmer-orator" during the last few days is one to speak at a Democratic meeting to be held at the court house at Mt. Holly on Saturday, August 22.

Mr. Martine stated today that neither would he accept a nomination for State Senator and that should he be named, he would promptly file his declination.

Sassy Thomas Fined $5.

Thomas Fahey, an ironworker brought in town to help erect the Public Service gas tank, came back from the borough last night with a noisy jag aboard. When Patrolman Payne cautioned him to keep still he advised the officer to go to a place where an ice cream dealer would make millions in a day. Fahey was promptly run in and this morning paid a $5 fine to gain his freedom.

T. A. B. Shirt Waist Dance.

The members of St. Mary's T. A. B. society will hold a shirt waist dance in their hall on Thursday night, August 13. The committee in charge comprises Clarence Walden, Thomas F. Carty, Miles Wilson, M. D. O'Keefe, Harry Paasch, James D. O'Keefe, John Kyle, Edward T. Lynch, Joseph McCue, Dan McAfee and William Owens.

Bankruptcy Hearing Set.

Referee Parker has announced Monday, August 10, as the date for a hearing on certain settlements and claims of the trustees against creditors of Apgar Bros., of Dunellen. William Newcorn, Alvah Gray and Mulford Scudder are the trustees in bankruptcy, and Francis J. Blatz is their attorney. The hearing will be at Perth Amboy.

State officers and delegations from Elizabeth, New Brunswick and Gallia will be present at the twelfth anniversary celebration of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, D. of A., to be held Saturday night.

TWO NEWARKERS HERE ON WALK TO PHILADELPHIA

Thomas Clark and William Park, two young Newarkers, who belong to the Newark Y. M. C. A., arrived at the local association building at 11:30 o'clock today on a walking tour to Philadelphia. The two started from Newark at 6 o'clock this morning and came to this city by way of Elizabeth. After a rest at the association building, the pair will start for New Brunswick late this afternoon, and plan to spend the night there. Tomorrow they will push on to the Sleepy City, going by way of Princeton, Trenton and Burlington.

The two have created quite a little comment thus far on their "hike" because of the good clip at which they move along the road. Clark said today that they expect to do between twenty and twenty-five miles a day. Slung over their shoulders, the walkers carry blankets and rubber ponchos, and they will sleep out of doors. White canvas bags carry "incidental grub" for "between-meal snacks" and the Newark Y. M. C. A. emblem is emblazoned on Clark's flannel shirt. This shirt, and the garment worn in the same place by his companion, may keep the two comfortable when the cool night breezes spring up, but both declare them too heavy for mid-day travel, so that light-weight garments are to be purchased in New Brunswick.

The "hikers" carry a letter from the general secretary of the Newark association, which serves to introduce them at the associations in the towns through which they will pass. They will secure the signatures of the various secretaries on the letter.

FAMILY TWICE VISITED BY FIRE WITHIN A YEAR

The fire that partially destroyed William H. Wootton's home on Carlton avenue, yesterday afternoon, marked the second time that the family has suffered similarly within a year. On October 19 last, they were living at East Seventh street and Franklin place and were burned out through a member of the household accidentally throwing a match into a lace curtain after lighting the gas. The upper part of the house was partially destroyed and a loss of $2,000 was occasioned.

Mr. Wootton moved to Carlton avenue after the fire and had been living there since. Yesterday afternoon, a servant sought to get clear of moths in a store room on the third floor and placed a burning sulphur candle in it to do the work. She closed the room up tight and went away, the candle sputtered and sent bits of flame on the floor and a brisk blaze was in progress when a neighbor noticed smoke pouring from an upper window. An alarm was first telephoned to fire headquarters and Chief Doane had box 27 pulled as soon as he arrived and found the entire upper part of the structure ablaze. Two hydrant streams and the chemical engine were used in putting out the flames. The loss is placed at $1,000. The house is a three story brick structure with a tin roof and gave the firemen a hot fight.

Chief Doane made the statement today that sulphur candles are used carelessly more often than any other way and the wonder is that more fires have not been occasioned from them. He asserted that they should be surrounded by a pan of water when in use or else a sprinkling of ashes.

Husband Was a Boarder.

Mrs. William Osborne, colored, of Arlington avenue, appeared in the city court, this morning, as complainant against her husband, who she charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The testimony revealed a peculiar state of affairs in the Osborne household to the effect that the defendant and complainant had ceased to live as man and wife eleven years ago and that three weeks since Mrs. Osborne took her husband in name back as a boarder. The argument last night was brought about by her demands for room rent. Judge Runyon gave them some good advice and suspended sentence on the prisoner.

Scotch Plains Italian Held.

As a result of a complaint by Mary Martino, Dominick Bonavolighi, her neighbor in the Hunter avenue Italian colony at Scotch Plains, was held under $100 bail to await the action of the grand jury at his hearing before Justice of the Peace Clark at Scotch Plains last night. Testimony revealed the fact that Bonavolighi had struck the woman several times in a quarrel Sunday afternoon.

NEGRO ESCAPES LYNCHING

DRAG HIM TO THE LOCKUP.

Henry Schenck, the Colored Aggressor, to Be Given Hearing On Charge of Atrocious Assault.

Having barely escaped lynching at the hands of an infuriated mob of residents of Scotch Plains last night after he had made an atrocious attack on a white man, Henry Schenck, a negro, will face Justice Clark tonight on a charge of atrocious assault. His victim, James Hunter, is not in a serious condition although it was first supposed that he had been killed. Threats are openly made that should the negro ever make his appearance in the village after he serves the impending sentence he will be subject to violence.

Schenck made himself obnoxious at the Central Hotel in the village late last night and was told by the proprietor, Fred Heiderick, to get out of the place. Refusing to comply and becoming abusive, Heiderick forcefully ejected the negro. When once outside the place, Schenck hurled boisterous and vile language at the proprietor and on being ordered to stop by John Reick, a passerby, started in to curse the latter. Telling him that he would have him arrested, Reick started for Justice Clark's office for a warrant, but had gotten but a few feet away when the negro drew from his hip pocket an iron bolt a foot long weighing three pounds. With an oath he hurled it at Reick, but his aim was poor and it struck Hunter, whose back was turned. As the victim fell to the ground, Schenck took to his heels but a crowd of thirty men who had gathered by the time gave chase and in a jiffy made him their prisoner. Fists and feet were used by nearly every man in the mob on the negro who fought like a demon.

"Get a rope; lynch him!" went up the cry and a cheer resounded as Township Committeeman Henry C. Myer appeared on the scene and appealed to the mob to let the law take its course. "Justice will be done," he shouted, but the crowd believing that murder had been done to a white man, was in no mood for such a course. Finally Myer's argument prevailed, and the negro, refusing to walk, was dragged and carried in turn to the village lockup.

In the meantime, the hotel man had summoned a physician and it was found that Hunter had been struck on the right shoulder, but was not badly injured.

A year ago, Schenck was released by the Union County Court with a suspended sentence when found guilty of atrocious assault.

ENGINEERS' REPORT ON SEWER BED INVESTIGATIONS.

The Common Council received last night, through Chairman Gloak, of the Streets and Sewers committee, a complete report of the investigations being carried on at the city sewage disposal works by Herring & Fuller, the New York engineering firm. A representative of the concern has been placed in charge of the plant at its own expense in order to gain a complete and thorough knowledge of its workings from a chemical, bacteriological and monetary standpoint. In this way, the firm can derive a fund of valuable information for use in building disposal beds in other cities and at the same time can advise Plainfield how to obtain the best results at the least possible expense.

The report submitted by Mr. Gloak was a comprehensive statement and showed that the investigation will prove of great benefit to Plainfield. The official has only been at work about a month but in that time has gleaned many important facts relative to the practical side of sewage disposal by septic tanks and is already in a position to suggest improvements. Some of these were touched upon and will be followed up by the Council at a later date. Herring & Fuller have been consulting engineers for the city for some time.

Boroughite Buys "Garry Owen."

Arthur Stevens, of Manning avenue, yesterday purchased from Fiss, Doerr and Carroll, of New York, the celebrated trotting horse "Garry Owen." The animal has a record of 2:10 and won the Granger stakes at the Syracuse fair in 1906. Mr. Stevens also purchased a handsome racing outfit from the same dealers and "Garry Owen" will probably be seen in some of the Fair Acres meets.

RECKLESS CHAUFFEUR OVERTURNS A SURREY.

Red Bank, Aug. 4.—A collision occurred late Sunday afternoon near Navesink between an auto owned by William Orth, of New York, and a surrey in which were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Murfitt, of Middletown township, and their son Albert, aged five years. Frederick Acker, Mr. Orth's chauffeur, tried to pass the wagon, and the front part of the auto struck a rear wheel. The place where the collision occurred is the top of an embankment. The wagon was smashed and the occupants were tossed in every direction.

Mr. Murfitt toppled down the bank. Mrs. Murfitt was pinned under the surrey and nearly every stitch of clothing was torn from her body. The child fell back under the automobile and he was badly cut and bruised on the face and body.

The auto was stopped just in time to prevent the child being run over. Alfred H. Magee, of Atlantic Highlands, stopped with his auto and took the family to Dr. John H. Van Maters, where their injuries were dressed.

Mr. Murfitt declares he will sue Orth for damages.

Mt. Tabor Lots to Be Taxed.

Mt. Tabor, Aug. 4.—The cottagers here have been notified that their lots will be assessed this year, although they are owned in fee simple by the campmeeting association and are leased to the cottage owners. N. B. Kilmer has advised against the payment of the tax, if levied, until "equality and justice is secured." There was no assessment in thirty-seven years, but the Supreme Court has decided that the one of $25,000, levied in 1906, must stand. The case is now pending before the Court of Errors and Appeals.

Rahway Valley Railroad Changes.

The Rahway Valley Railroad Company yesterday morning started a large force of men at work in filling along the Rahway Valley's present tracks on the north side of Park avenue, Summit, preparatory to constructing the two spurs which are to be connected with the Lackawanna freight yards in that city. Under the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Lackawanna is required to install two switches for the connection with its line by September 1.

Scratching a pimple on her nose caused blood poisoning to develop for Agnes Lynn, twenty years old, of 630 North Twenty-fourth street, Camden, who visited the Cooper Hospital yesterday for treatment.

STUNG BY WOOD BEES.

Man, Blinded, Falls, but Is Rescued by Fellow Workmen.

Walnut Grove, Aug. 4.—While chopping wood on the slope of Bowling Green mountain, Horace Phillips, 27 years old, of Millwood, stepped into a nest of wood bees or "yellow jackets," and before help arrived was stung so badly that his face is swollen to twice its natural size. He tried to run but the infuriated insects blinded him and he fell. Fellow workmen heard his cries and beat back the insects with their coats. Phillips had only recently recovered from a long spell of sickness and will be laid up for some time to come.

WANT TO KEEP PASTOR STIFLER

In an effort to retain Rev. James M. Stifler as pastor, the entire congregation of the First Baptist church at Roselle signed a resolution at the close of Sunday morning's service. The resolution authorizes the officers of the church to confer with him and request the withdrawal of his resignation.

Mr. Stifler decided to sever his pastoral relations because of ill health. A recent attack of typhoid fever left him so weak that on July 26 he resigned. The action was a great surprise to the congregation and at a meeting of the officers during the week it was decided to make some different adjustment of the problem. Mr. Stifler may be given a leave of absence. He has been pastor of the church for nine years.

OPPOSE EXTENSION OF KENSINGTON AVENUE

The proposition of the Common Council, as expressed in a resolution last month, to extend Kensington avenue from its present terminus at Prospect avenue to a point near Park avenue and Randolph road, met with vigorous opposition at last night's meeting.

Several communications were read, all of which were from people interested in one way or another, and who gave reasons why the plan should not be carried out. One of the protests came from the Central Realty Company, which has been developing a part of the Martine tract through which the new thoroughfare would run. The communication was signed by President C. J. Van Dyke, who stated that the concern would lend itself to the plan only under certain conditions with reference to the cost.

H. J. Storrs and other residents of Kensington avenue, presented a petition against the extension and advanced the argument that the lengthening of the thoroughfare would have a tendency to lessen its exclusiveness for residential purposes and depreciate property values. They asked that the Council specify a date in September when a public hearing could be held. Howard H. Williams presented a separate petition much in the same strain.

The matter was referred to the committee on streets and sewers for consideration.

For P. O. Site.

Another offer has been made to the Government as a site for its proposed Federal building here, the owner of the vacant lot at Watchung avenue and Fourth street having filed a bid at Washington.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS IN SESSION IN BOSTON

The twenty-fifth convention of the Supreme Lodge and the biennial encampment of the Uniform Rank of the Knights of Pythias, with the annual convention of the Pythian Sisters, were formally opened in Boston, Mass., yesterday with an attendance estimated at from 75,000 to 85,000 delegates and members. The Pythians will hold business sessions and parades and enjoy trips about the city for six days, closing next Sunday with a religious mass meeting, presided over by the grand prelate of Massachusetts, Rev. Allan A. Stockdale, at the Union Congregational church.

The most interesting feature of the gathering proved to be the encampment of the uniform rank, which formally dedicated Camp Joseph H. Lyon, at Franklin field, yesterday. Over 2,000 tents accommodate the 7,000 knights on this, Boston's most expansive playground, and here the chief features of the first day's program were held.

Early in the afternoon the convention delegates gathered in King Soloman temple to witness the exemplification of work by King Solomon temple of the Pythian Sisters of Boston.

Immediately after the work the camp at Franklin field was dedicated. Representative D. Sidney Woodworth, president of the ways and means committee, formally turned the camp over to Charles A. Barnes, of Jacksonville, Ill., the supreme chancellor, who accepted the camp, and in turn passed it over to Arthur J. Stobbart, of St. Paul, Minn., major general commanding the uniform rank. The flag of the camp was then raised over the tented city and the encampment was formally under military orders. Addresses of welcome by Governor Guild and Mayor Hibbard and responses by General Stobbard followed.

Today the supreme lodge formally began work in the convention hall at Hotel Somerset. Companies of the uniform rank were arriving until late Sunday night, one company arriving from Texas, another from Wisconsin, and others from Washington, Colorado and California. The company from Ohio brought along a pack of prairie dogs, which created great amusement in camp. Over 5,000 of the 7,000 uniformed knights were in camp at midnight, and other companies from nearer home were arriving during the morning hours.

BABY CAMP FUND AMOUNTS TO $114.50

With a five dollar bill for the baby camp on the mountain conducted by the City Union of the King's Daughters, this note was received the other day:

"If the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel could be consulted, the superintendent is confident that they would be glad to help some of their less fortunate little friends to enjoy a days' outing at the camp and so we are sending $5 from the Jr. C. E. of Warren chapel. Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey, superintendent."

From Allison Crary Van Buren, on Saturday, was received a $5 bill for the same charity.

Another handsome donation has been made to the Baby Camp fund in the shape of a check for $14. This contribution is "In Memory of Mrs. C. C. B." This brings the total up to $114.50.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to reply to the statement of Maximilian P. E. Groszmann, under date of August third.

The facts in full as brought out at the hearing are these: Miss Julia Scullin, an employe of the Groszmann School, made a complaint before me charging Waldemar Groszmann with assault and battery and a warrant was issued for his arrest and placed in the hands of the constable and he was notified to appear before me on July 24. He appeared and through his counsel entered a plea of "Not Guilty."

Miss Julia Scullin, the complaining witness, was sworn and stated that she had been in the employ of the Groszmann School for the past five or six months, and that on July the 24th inst. one of the children made a taunting remark to her. She remonstrated with him, when Waldemar Groszmann appeared on the scene and told her to pack her trunk, and belongings and go. And that he would give her twenty minutes in which to get out. She went to her room and Mr. Waldemar Groszmann, following her in there, and after a few words Mr. Waldemar Groszmann grabbed her by the arm and pulled and jerked her out of the building and down the porch, not even giving her a chance to put on her skirt which she claimed she had over her arm, and not even allowing her time to fasten her waist. She stated that she had been employed through the housekeeper and that when the housekeeper left she was informed that she should hereafter take instructions from Mrs. Groszmann, herself. When asked by counsel if Mr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann was present, she said "No." There was no evidence brought forth at the hearing to show that Miss Scullin was obstreperous or violent and unwilling to leave the premises. The witnesses subpoeaned by Miss Scullin were put on the stand to testify and one of them admitted that Mr. Waldemar Groszmann did take Miss Scullin by the arm and that when they got to the porch Miss Scullin grabbed hold of the porch. The testimony of Miss Scullin was, that she grabbed the post to prevent her falling from the same while Mr. Groszmann was pulling and jerking her.

I also notice in the statement that Mr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann states that he was a witness to the fact of Miss Scullin walking through the halls of the building scolding and carrying on and exciting the servants and the children. I beg to state that when Mr. Groszmann's son, Waldemar Groszmann, took the stand, he swore positively that his father was not there, and when asked under cross examination by Miss Scullin's [illegible] he stated that he was in the cottage in the rear of the school. Now which one is telling the truth in this matter? Waldemar Groszmann, under oath says his father was not there and Mr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann states he was. If Mr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann was a witness at the time of this trouble, then why not in justice to his son, did he not appear and give evidence to substantiate what he said. Miss Scullin was not a trespasser upon the property of Maximilian P. E. Groszmann, but was there under rightful authority. I am acquainted with the laws regarding trespass and beg to contradict Mr. Groszmann's statement that Miss Scullin was a "trespasser."

After the evidence was submitted and the attorneys rested their case I stated to Mr. Waldemer Groszmann that I believed there was a strong case against him, and that I should hold him to await the action of the Grand Jury, but I thought he had heavy enough punishment in the publicity of the hearing and the disgrace of appearing in the courtroom. I then dismissed the case.

Editor, The Daily Press:

While making a long wait for a Netherwood car at the new trolley depot at Fourth street and Watchung avenue, I observed a P. S. C. conductor's action that I believe merits condemnation. As main line car No. 1429, Newark bound, stopped at the depot, this conductor, who is short, placed a bicycle on the fender and hopped aboard taking a place beside the motorman. As the car pulled out the conductor smiled to himself at what he considered a very bright idea.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Dr. Thomas H. Platt, Jr., went with Station Agent John Eick to get the fatally injured man near the Greenbrook tanks yesterday morning, and gave first aid treatment before the arrival of the train which took him to Plainfield. There was an ugly gash in the back of the stranger's head, and his skull had been fractured. Death came as the man was being taken to Muhlenberg Hospital on the train. A scrap of paper in his pocket identified him as John Barbell.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the New Market Baptist church, an ice cream and peach festival will be held next Tuesday evening on the lawn of Herbert L. Coal Train Wreck Blocks Erie.

Four gondola coal cars were wrecked, and travel on the Orange branch of the Erie was held up for two hours Saturday. Italian laborers released the brakes on one of the cars, and they shot down a steep incline of a siding on to the main tracks. All four turned over. A wrecking train from Jersey City, after two hours' work, cleared the tracks.

Tarvia Here Ready to Spread.

The car-load of tarvia, to be used on the macadam of North avenue and Park avenue below Fourth street, arrived at the freight house this morning, and Street Commissioned Gavett has telegraphed the tarvia contractor to come to this city at once and apply the dust-laying preparation. The work will probably be started tomorrow.

CITY FATHERS' ROUTINE

Many Matters of Minor Importance Occupy Time of the Common Council.

REPORTS ARE ALSO PRESENTED.

Petition to Have Woodland Avenue Flagged—To Raise $22,000 for the Contingent Fund.

Routine business transacted at last night's Council meeting included the disposition of a large number of petitions. Charles L. Stanley, the florist, presented one asking permission to move four greenhouses from the Ginna property on Watchung avenue to his premises at 1126 South avenue. He gave the route through which the buildings would pass and stated that the work would be done by Mobus Brothers, using trucks for the purpose. The matter was referred to the Fire and Buildings committee with power.

W. A. Lord, S. Schuyler and other residents in the Netherwood section asked that action be taken to compel property owners on Woodland and Belvidere avenues and Ravine road who have not yet had flagging put down on their walks to have the work done. Referred to the street committee. Residents of McDowell street between Third and Fourth streets petitioned for a light and George H. Staggard asked that he be allowed to build a five-foot extension on his property at 254 East Front street. Both were referred to committees.

The following reports were summitted by city officials: Tax collector, a total of $2,718.07 received during July; treasurer, a balance of $56,633.23 on hand; building inspector, thirty-four permits granted during July; street commissioner, twenty-five permits for sewer connections granted during July; clerk of the District Court, receipts for the past month, $110.89; disbursements, $48.19; balance, $62.70.

Under the head of new business, Mr. Buxton introduced a resolution calling for an ordinance to raise $22,000 for the contingency fund, the same being about nine per cent. of the total budget as prepared for the year. He also introduced resolutions calling for the borrowing of the following amounts in anticipation of taxes: Fire fund, $6,000; poor fund, $1,000; for payment of portions of brick pavement work, $3,000; for cost of sanitary sewer additions, $1,000. A resolution presented by Mr. Hibbard called for an appropriation of $200 for repairs to the trucks in the fire department.

A communication was read from W. D. W. Miller in which he took exception to a 1904 tax bill of $15.83 for personal property. He enclosed a statement which showed that he had been assessed $3 for personal property in that year and that same had been paid. The finance committee was instructed to investigate and also to look into a request from Mrs. Emily Godwin, of Belvidere avenue, who asked the return of $50.61 paid on an over-assessment for sanitary sewers. She stated in a communication that her property had been assessed on both Belvidere avenue and Park lane.

ALMOST DROWNS IN A HOBOKEN STREET

Richard Guinan, 9 years old, of 456 Newark street, Hoboken, was saved from drowning in a street yesterday afternoon. With several companions, he was playing near their homes, when he was pushed into an excavation made by the Hoboken Water Board to repair a leak.

The lad made a brave fight in the muddy pool, and, becoming exhausted, threw up his hands. Edward Ives, an employee of the telephone company, of 205 West 118th street, New York, happened to pass at this moment, and seeing the hands protruding, dropped his bundles, grasped the boy's wrists, and drew him to safety. Ives notified the police and telephoned to the hospital. An ambulance surgeon attended Richard, and he was later taken to his home. His companions say they do not know how the accident happened.

"BLACKSMITH ORATOR" DEAD.

Captain F. H. Kirkbride, 68 years old, died at his home in Medford yesterday afternoon of heart trouble. He leaves one sister, Mrs. Dr. Thomas Dobbins, of Newark. Captain Kirkbride was secretary of the Survivors' Association of the Twenty-third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers. He was a director of the Medford National Bank, prominent in politics and secret societies, and was a former surrogate of Burlington county.

He twiced placed in nomination the name of General Burd Grubb for Governor of New Jersey, and won the title of the "Blacksmith Orator." With General Grubb and United States Marshal Thomas J. Allcott, Captain Kirkbride made up the commission appointed by former Governor Stokes to erect a monument on the battlefield at Salem Church, Va.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

After thirty years of married life a divorce has been recommended by Special Chancery Master Gummere for Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Connor, of Trenton. Mrs. Connor was the complainant in the suit, charging her husband with unfaithfulness to his marriage vows.

The Jordan L. Mott Company, of Trenton, one of the largest plumbers' supplies concerns in the East, has just received four of the largest orders in its history, which will keep the Trenton plant busy for months. The Thomas Maddocks' Sons Company, potters, also will be benefited by the orders.

William Moller, fourteen years old, son of Captain Max Moller, superintendent of the Bremen Line steamship piers in Hoboken, was bitten on the knee and hand yesterday while trying to drive from the pier a vicious bulldog. Dr. Kudlich ordered his removal to the Pasteur Institute The dog was killed.

The Gloucester police force was on duty all day Sunday to prevent violations of the exeise laws in the boathouse district. The police also kept strict watch Sunday night for Camden bottlers, who, it is said, have been delivering beer here without orders. There were no arrsts and the day was an unusually quiet one.

Wilson E. Billups, forty years old, was arrested in Atlantic City yesterday on a warrant from Media, Pa., charging him with bigamy. The arrest was made by headquarters detectives, who found the visitor entertaining friends in a beachfront cafe He was taken to the city hall, and will be held for requisition from Pennsylvania.

With only a few dollars in their pockets, George Peirce, twenty-two years old, of 611 Cherry street, and Walter Sherwood, twenty years old, of 606 Cherry street, Camden, left today for a walk to San Francisco, where they expect to work their passage to England, after which they will tour the Continental countries, all on foot.

During the last two weeks many persons in Gloucester received postal cards of an endless chain order asking for dime contributions, and it is claimed that there is a scheme back of it whereby some one is making much money and people are being buncoed. At the services in St. Mary's church Sunday the members were warned against such schemes.

Mrs. Catherine Moore, who occupies apartments on the second floor of the house 378 Fraser place, Jersey City, leaned too far out of the front window yesterday and fell to the sidewalk. She was unconscious when removed to the City Hospital, but revived, and an examination revealed that no bones had been broken and that she would probably recover.

After working for years at his trade of bricklayer, Francis J. Vandam, of 823 Southard street, Trenton, has just been informed that he need work no more, having been left a legacy that will make him independent for the remainder of his life. The windfall comes from a relative in Germany, and the bequest will be received by Vandam in quarterly payments during his life.

The west boundary of Oakford Lake, at New Egypt, will be illuminated by electric lights every night. This will render boating on the lake as enjoyable at night as during the day. A proposition is under consideration by the citizens and business men to have the lights placed the entire length of both banks of the lake, and the matter will be taken up by them as soon as the lake carnival, to be held August 18, is over.

Tent meetings held by the Clayton mission on the baseball lot are increasing in interest, and several professions of conversion are reported. The workers always have a good audience, which they sometimes obtain by starting a street meeting in front of the postoffice and then forming a line of march which leads to the tent. Rev. Joseph Bowen, of Darby, Pa., son of John G. Bowen, founder of the mission, now has charge.

BIG FIRE AT WINSTED, CONN.

Odd Fellows' Building and Several Others Destroyed.

Winsted, Conn., Aug. 4.—Alleged incendiaries early yesterday started a fire in the armory, the largest hall in Northwestern Connecticut, which destroyed property valued at $80,000 and endangered lives of a score of people who were taken from the third-story windows in the Odd Fellows' building, a five-story brick structure situated directly in front of the wooden armory on Main street, by firemen. Not a single person was seriously injured, although many had narrow escapes from falling walls.

Three thousand rounds of ammunition belonging to Company M, First Regiment, went off without hurting anyone. The flames completely destroyed the armory and Odd Fellows' building, the Manchester building and the former residence of ex-State Senator S. A. Herman. Other buildings were badly damaged.

TROOPS TO PROTECT NEGRO.

Kentucky's Governor to Prevent, If Possible, Another Lynching.

Frankfort, Ky., August 4.—Governor Willson held a conference with Circuit Judge W. P. Sandridge at Russelville yesterday over the long-distance telephone, and Judge Sandridge assured Governor Willson that Rufus Browder, the young negro held in the Louisville jail awaiting trial for the murder of James Cunningham, would be indicted today, and that he would be given a speedy and proper trial.

Browder will not be taken to Russelville for several days, but Governor Willson will send a strong guard of troops with him, giving ample protection from violence. Four negro sympathizers of Browder were hanged Friday night, and public sentiment is strong against the prisoner.

FOUR CHILDREN ADRIFT.

Caught in Spillway Current, but Saved in Nick of Time.

Chestnut Hill, Aug. 4—Four small children, ranging from five to six years untied the painter of a small boat in Clark's Pond and went adrift. Having no means of propelling the boat they drifted around till finally they got caught in the current leading to the spillway, where the boat stuck on a projecting spile for a few minutes.

The screams attracted the attention of Henry Leahy, of Jersey City, who sprang into the pond and by hard work got the boat out of the current into a safe place, where he landed the children. Had the boat gone over the children would have been killed, as the water falls some fourteen or more feet down the spillway.

DROWNED NEAR CHAUTAUQUA.

Young Man Dies with Girl He Tries to Rescue.

Jamestown, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Miss Elsie Green, aged 19, of Savannah, Ga., and Porter Parish, 21 years, of Memphis, Tenn., were drowned in Chautauqua Lake Saturday night a short distance from Chautauqua. The couple, with their families, were staying for the summer at Chautauqua. They went boating in the evening, and the Chadakoin, one of the small passenger steamers, ran them down in the darkness.

The captain of the steamer says the rowboat was not actually struck and did not capsize, but the girl was frightened and jumped into the water. The young man plunged in to rescue her, and both sank immediately.

WATER FAMINE IN NUTLEY.

Break in Supply Pipe Delayed Many Breakfasts.

A water famine occurred yesterday morning in Nutley through a break in the water main on the intersection of Chestnut street and Whitford avenue. Residents were unable to take a bath or to cook breakfast, owing to the lack of water, especially in the higher sections of the town.

Masters and maids carried water from the railroad station, which is located on lower ground, before they could indulge in their usual cup of coffee.

The water department was informed of the break, and temporary repairs were made so that a supply of water was given at a low pressure.

Julius H. Pratt 87 Years Old.

Julius H. Pratt, who built the Greenwood Lake & New York Railroad at a cost of $4,000,000, and subsequently lost his fortune in that enterprise, celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday at his home, in Union street, Monclair, Saturday night, surrounded by twenty-eight children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Mr. Pratt has resided in Montclair over fifty years. He proposed and established a gravity system of water supply for the city of Newark and vicinity in 1888.

Falls Two Stories; Unhurt.

Mrs. Catherine Moore, of 378 Frazer place, Jersey city, yesterday fell from a second-story window of her home to the flagstones below and was picked up unconscious. She was rushed to the City Hospital, where the doctors found she had not been injured. Her husband took her home.

Repairing World's Highest Stack.

Workmen are engaged in removing thirty feet from the Oxford Copper Company's chimney at Bayonne, the tallest in the country. New brick will replace that removed. The stack is 366 feet high, and the men at work on top of it are raised to their lofty perch by a swing inside the chimney.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 6.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the House of Assembly concurring), That the following amendments to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and to the House of Assembly, the said amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

First—Strike out Paragraph 1 of Section I, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. Strike out paragraph 3 of section I, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

3. Elections for members of the Senate and General Assembly shall be held every two years on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, and every second year thereafter; and the two Houses shall meet separately on the second Tuesday in January in each year, at which time of meeting the legislative year shall commence.

2. Strike out paragraph 1 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The Senate shall be composed of one Senator from each county in the State, elected by the legal voters of the counties respectively, for four years.

3. Strike out paragraph 2 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

2. As soon as the Senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution they shall be divided by the Senate as equally as may be into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only; provided, that the Senators having the longest period of time still to serve at the time of making said division shall be entitled to the longer terms.

4. Strike out paragraph 1 of section III, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The General Assembly shall be composed of members elected by the legal voters of the counties, respectively, every second year, beginning on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be according to the number of their inhabitants. The Legislature shall, in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten, and at its first session after each United States decenial census thereafter, and not oftener, divide and arrange each county of this State into a district or districts for the election therein of a member or members of the General Assembly. Each Assembly district so constituted shall contain, as nearly as practicable, an equal number of inhabitants, and shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory in a compact form, but no county, or part thereof, shall be joined with any other county, or part thereof, in any such district; provided, that each county shall, at all times, be entitled to at least one member, and the whole number of members to be chosen shall never exceed sixty.

The Court of Last Resort, by whatever name known, is hereby invested with exclusive original jurisdiction and with full power, under such procedure as it may by rules prescribe, to review any division and arrangement made by the Legislature into Assembly districts of the counties of this State for the purpose of determining whether such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, is in accordance or in conflict with this section, and, if in conflict herewith, to adjudge the same, or such part thereof as may be in conflict herewith, null and void. In case said court shall determine such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, to be null and void the Legislature shall proceed to make a new arrangement and division, entire or partial, as the action of the court may require.

5. Strike out paragraph 3 of Article V and insert in place thereof the following:

3. The Governor shall hold his office for four years, to commence at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January next ensuing the election for Governor by the people, and to end at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January four years thereafter; and he shall be incapable of holding that office for four years next after his term of service shall have expired; and no appointment or nomination to office shall be made by the Governor during the last week of his said term.

6. Strike out paragraph 6 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

6. Clerks and surrogates of counties shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly. They shall hold their offices for six years.

7. Strike out paragraph 7 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Sheriffs and coroners shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly, and shall hold their offices for four years, after which four years must elapse before they can be again capable of serving. Sheriffs shall annually renew their bonds.

8. Add to section 2 of Article VII, three paragraphs to be known as paragraphs 12, 13 and 14.

12. All elections for Governor, members of the Senate and General Assembly, sheriffs, coroners, county clerks and surrogates of counties and all other officers now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of the whole State, or of any county thereof, shall be held every second year, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten.

13. All elections for justices of the peace and all and any municipal officers, as distinguished from State and county officers as hereinbefore provided, now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of any city, borough, town, township, village or subdivision thereof, or any municipality of this State, except counties, shall be held every second year on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

14. Except as herein provided with relation to the office of Senators, all officers filling any elective office at the time these amendments take effect shall continue in the exercise of the duties thereof according to their respective commissions or terms of office, and until their successors may be elected and qualified under the provisions of these amendments, and all officers whose terms of office would expire after these amendments take effect and prior to the election and qualification of their successors in office, at the election for the respective offices first held under the provisions of these amendments, shall continue in office until their successors can be elected and qualified, at the election for such office or offices to be held next after these amendments take effect, according to the provisions hereof.

The Legislature shall pass all necessary laws to arrange the terms of office of all statutory elective officers so that said terms may be in harmony with these amendments, and to carry into effect the provisions hereof.

These amendments, if adopted, shall take effect and go into operation on the first day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 4.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved, (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the Constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and to the House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months previous to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

First—Strike out Paragraph 10 of Section VII of Article IV, and change the numbers of the following paragraphs to correspond:

Second—Change Paragraph 10 of Section V so to to read as follows:

10. The Governor or person administering the government, and four citizens of the State appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall constitute the Board of Pardons. The members of said Board, or any three of them, of whom the Governor or person administering the government shall be one, may remit fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves, commutations, pardons and paroles, after conviction in all cases except impeachment. The four members specially appointed shall hold office for five years, and receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during the term of their appointment.

Third—Change Section 1 of Article VI so as to read as follows

SECTION I.

The judicial power shall be vested in a Court for the trial of impeachments, a Supreme Court, County Courts and such other Courts, inferior to the Supreme Court, as may be established by law, which inferior Courts the Legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require.

Fourth—Strike out all of Section II, IV, V, VI and VII, of Article VI, change the number of Section III of Article VI to Section II, and insert the following sections in Article VI:

SECTION III.

Any judge of any of the Courts of the State may be removed for disability continuing for one year, or for refusal to perform the duties of his office, by a vote of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate and of two-thirds of all the members of the House of Assembly voting separately, after a hearing before both Houses in joint session.

SECTION IV.

1. The Supreme Court shall be organized in three divisions, namely: the Appeals Division, the Law Division, and the Chancery Division. It shall consist of a Presiding Justice of the Appeals Division who shall be styled the Chief Justice, a Presiding Justice of the Law Division who shall be styled the President Justice, and a Presiding Justice of the Chancery Division, who shall be styled the Chancellor, and eighteen Associate Justices, which number may be increased by law.

2. The Appeals Division shall consist of the Chief Justice, and six other Justices of the Supreme Court to be assigned by the Governor. A Justice of the Supreme Court assigned by the Governor to the Appeals Division shall serve in said Division until the end of his term.

The remaining Justices shall be assigned by the Supreme Court to the Law or Chancery Division, as the business of the Court may require.

3. Whenever the number of causes before the Appeals Division shall be so great that the Division cannot promptly hear and determine them, the Governor shall, when authorized by statute, temporarily assign five of the Justices of the other Divisions to sit in the Appeals Division, which shall thereupon sit in two Divisions for the hearing and decision of causes pending at the time of such assignment.

4. Four Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum on the final hearing of any cause in the Appeals Division, but the Supreme Court may provide by rule for the making of interlocutory orders by a lesser number of justices, or by one justice; such orders to be subject to revision by the Appeals Division.

On the hearing of a cause in the Appeals Division, no Justice who has given a judicial opinion in the cause in favor of or against the judgment, order or decree under review shall sit at the hearing to review such judgment, order or decree, but the reasons for such opinion shall be assigned to the Court in writing.

5. A majority of all the members of the Supreme Court, to be presided over by the Chief Justice, shall constitute a quorum for the assignment of justices, and for the appointment of officers, and the enactment of rules.

6. The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters, not exceeding three, to report the decisions of the Court, and shall by rule define his or their duties and powers. The reporters shall hold office for five years, subject, however, to removal at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION V.

1. The Appeals Division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court on writ of error, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court on appeal, and by the Ordinary on appeal, and such further appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred upon it by law, together with such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review, saving, however, the right of trial by jury.

2. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court and the Justices thereof not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Circuit Courts and the Judges thereof, and such further original jurisdiction not of an equitable nature, and such further appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, as may be conferred by statute, shall be exercised by the Law Division of the Supreme Court and by the several justices thereof, in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court.

3. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court and the Ordinary, not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Chancery and the Chancellor, and such further original equity jurisdiction as may be conferred by statute, and such further original jurisdiction as is now conferrable on the Prerogative Court shall be exercised by the Chancery Division and by the Chancellor and the several justices of said Division in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court, but the Justices of that Division shall be under such control and supervision by the Chancellor as shall be provided by the Supreme Court.

4. Terms of the Supreme Court presided over by a single Justice of the Law Division for the trial of issues joined in or brought to the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be held in the several counties at times fixed by the Supreme Court. Until so fixed, such trial terms shall be held at the places and times now fixed by law for the holding of the Courts of Common Pleas in the several counties.

5. The Supreme Court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issue from the Law Division to the Chancery Division, or from the Chancery Division to the Law Division of the Supreme Court, and from the County Court to the Law Division or the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the Court or Division where it may be pending.

6. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the alteration, by law of any statutory power or jurisdiction conferred upon any Court or Judge since the adoption of the Constitution in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and nothing herein contained shall prevent the Legislature from conferring upon any inferior Court which may hereafter be established such power or jurisdiction as was exercised by or which may now be conferred upon the inferior Courts mentioned in Section I of Article VI. of the Constitution of 1844.

SECTION VI.

The County Courts shall have and exercise, in all cases within the county such original common law jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court, and such other jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts inferior to the Supreme Court and the Prerogative Court as may be provided by law. The final judgments of the County Courts may be brought for review before the Supreme Court in the Appeals Division. Until otherwise provided, the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Courts of Quarter Sessions, or by the Judges thereof, shall be exercised by the County Courts pursuant to rules prescribed by the Supreme Court. The justices of the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be ex officio Judges of the County Courts. All other jurisdiction or authority now vested in any Court, Judge, or magistrate with jurisdiction inferior to the Courts in this section mentioned, and not superseded by this article, shall continue to be exercised by such Court, Judge or magistrate until the Legislature shall otherwise provide.

SECTION VII.

This amendment to the Contitution shall not cause the abatement of any suit or proceeding pending when it takes effect. The Supreme Court shall make such general and special rules and orders as may be necessary for the transfer of all suits and proceedings to the appropriate Division or Court created by this amendment. Matters pending when this amendment takes effect shall be decided by the judge or judges to whom they were submitted, and the order, judgment or decree made or advised by said judge shall be entered as that of the Division or Court to which the suit or proceeding shall have been transferred.

Fifth—Strike out Paragraphs 1, 2, 5 and 8 of Section II of Article VII, and substitute the following paragraphs in place of Paragraphs 1 and 2, and change the numbers of the paragraphs following 5 to correspond

1. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the President Justice of the Law Division, the Chancellor and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the Senate. They shall not be less than thirty-five years of age and shall have been practicing attorneys in the State for at least ten years. They shall hold office for the term of seven years; shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their term of office, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State, or of the United States, and shall not engage in the practice of law during their term of office. The Chancellor and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Vice Chancellors and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, in office when this amendment takes effect, shall be Justices of the Supreme Court until the expiration of their respective terms.

The Circuit Court Judges in office when this amendment takes effect shall be continued in office with the powers of the Justices of the Supreme Court at the Circuit until the expiration of their respective terms. They may hold the County Courts, subject to assignment by the Law Division of the Supreme Court.

2. The Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint one Judge of the County Court in each county, and such additional County Judge or Judges in any county as may be authorized by law. The County Judges may hold court in any county subject to the control of the Supreme Court. The County Judges shall not be less than thirty years of age, and shall have been practicing attorneys in this State for at least five years. They shall hold office for the term of five years; shall at stated times receive for their services such compensation, which shall not be diminished during their term of office, as the Legislature in its discretion shall fix for each county, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State or of the United States, and shall not engage in practice of the law in the courts of the county where they hold court during their term of office. The judges of the Common Pleas, in office when this amendment takes effect shall be the judges of the County Courts until the expiration of their present terms.

3. This amendment shall take effect on the first Monday in February, in the year next following its adoption by the people.

4. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution and this amendment thereof.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

Be It Resolved (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the ayes and nayes taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State.

Amend by striking out paragraph seven, section four, article four, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Members of the Senate shall receive, annually, the sum of one thousand dollars, and members of the General Assembly shall receive, annually, the sum of ten hundred dollars during the time for which they shall have been elected and while they shall hold their office, and no other allowance or emolument, directly or indirectly, for any purpose whatever. The President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the General Assembly shall, in virtue of their offices, receive an additional compensation, equal to one-third of their allowance as members.

The American Exchange Bank Robbery

Late in the afternoon of Friday, May 4, 1888, two messengers left the American Exchange national bank, at the northeast corner of Cedar street and Broadway, New York city, and started down the busy thoroughfare for the office of the Adams Express company, a few blocks distant. They carried between them, each holding one of the handles, a valise made of canvas and leather, in which had just been placed, in the presence of the paying teller, a package containing $41,000 in greenbacks, to be transmitted to the United States treasury in Washington for redemption.

Although the messengers—Edward S. Crawford and old "Dominie" Earle—were among the bank's most trusted employes, their honesty being considered above suspicion, they were nevertheless followed at a short distance by Bank Detective McDougal, an old-time police detective, whose snow-white beard and ancient style of dress have long made him a personage of note on Broadway. Detective McDougal followed the messengers, not because he had any fear that they were planning a robbery, but because it is an imperative rule of all great banking institutions that the transfer of large sums of money, even for very short distances, shall be watched over with the most scrupulous care. Each messenger is supposed to act as a check on his fellow, while the detective walking in the rear is a check on both. In such cases all three men are armed, and would use their weapons without hesitation should an attack be made upon them.

The messengers walked on through the hurrying crowd, keeping on the east sidewalk as far as Wall street, where they turned across, and continued their way on the west sidewalk as far as the Adams Express company's building, which stands at No. 59 Broadway. Having seen them safely inside the building, the detective turned back to the bank, where his services were required in other matters.

Passing down the large room strewn with boxes and packages ready for shipment, the two messengers turned to the right, and ascended the winding stairs that in those days led to the money department, on the second floor. No one paid much attention to them, as at this busy hour bank messengers were arriving and departing every few minutes. Still, some of the clerks remembered afterward, or thought they did, that the old man, Earle, ascended the stairs more slowly than his more active companion, who went ahead, carrying the valise alone. Both messengers, however, were present at the receiving window of the money department when the package was taken from the valise and handed to the clerk, who gave a receipt for it in the usual form: "Received from the American Exchange bank one package marked as containing $41,000, for transfer to Washington;" or, at least, so far as has ever been proved, both messengers were present when the package was handed in.

The two messengers, having performed their duty, went away, Earle hurrying to the ferry to catch a train out into New Jersey, where he lived, and Crawford returning to the bank with the empty valise. The valuable package had meantime been ranged behind the heavily wired grating along with dozens of others, some of them containing much larger sums. The clerks in the money department of the Adams Express company become so accustomed to handling gold, silver and bank notes, fortunes done up in bags, boxes or bundles, that they think little more of this precious merchandise than they might of so much coal or brick. A quick glance, a touch of the hand, satisfies them that the seals, the wrappings, the labels, the general appearance, of the packages are correct; and having entered them duly on the way-bills and turned them over to the express messenger who is to forward them to their destination, they think no more about them.

In this instance the $41,000 package, after a brief delay, was locked in one of the small portable safes, a score of which are always lying about in readiness, and was lowered to the basement, where it was loaded on one of the company's wagons. The wagon was then driven to Jersey City, guarded by the messenger in charge, his assistant, and the driver, all three men being armed, and was safely placed aboard the night express for Washington. It is the company's rule that the messenger who starts with a through safe travels with it to its destination, though he has to make a journey of a thousand miles. Sometimes the destination of money under transfer is so remote that the service of several express companies is required; and in that case the messenger of the Adams company accompanies the money only to the point where it is delivered to the messenger of the next company, and so on.

The next morning, when the package from the American Exchange bank was delivered in Washington, the experienced treasury clerk who received it perceived at once, from the condition of the package, that something was wrong. Employes of the treasury department seem to gain a new sense, and to be able to distinguish bank notes from ordinary paper merely by the "feel," even when done up in bundles. Looking at the label mark of $41,000, the clerk shook his head and called the United States treasurer, James W. Hyatt, who also saw something suspicious in the package. Mr. Blanchard, the Washington agent of the Adams Express company, was summoned, and in his presence the package was opened. It was found to contain nothing more valuable than slips of brown straw paper, the coarse variety used by butchers in wrapping up meat, neatly cut to the size of bank notes. The $41,000 were missing.

It was evident that at some point between the bank and the treasury a bogus package had been substituted for the genuine one. The question was: Where and by whom had the substitution been made?

The robbery was discovered at the treasury in Washington on Saturday morning. The news was telegraphed to New York immediately, and on Saturday afternoon anxious councils were held by the officials of the American Exchange bank and the Adams Express company. Inspector Byrnes was notified; the Pinkerton agency was notified; and urgent dispatches were sent to Mr. John Hoey, president of the express company, and to Robert Pinkerton, who were both out of town, that their presence was required immediately in New York. Meanwhile everyone who had had any connection with the stolen package—the paying teller of the bank, other bank clerks, the messengers, Detective McDougal, the receiving clerks of the Adams Express company and the express messenger—was closely examined. Where and how the $41,000 had been stolen was important to learn not only in itself, but also to fix responsibility for the sum lost as between the bank and the express company.

Three theories were at once suggested: The bogus package might have been substituted for the genuine one either at the bank, between the bank and the express office or between the express office and the treasury. The first assumption threw suspicion on some of the bank employes, the second upon the two bank messengers, the third upon some one in the service of the express company. Both the bank and the express company stoutly maintained the integrity of its own employes.

An examination of the bogus package disclosed some points of significance. Ordinarily, when bank notes are done up for shipment by an experienced clerk, the bills are pressed together as tightly as possible in small bundles, which are secured with elastic bands, and then wrapped snugly in strong paper, until the whole makes a package almost as hard as a board. Around this package the clerk knots strong twine, melts a drop of sealing-wax over each knot, and stamps it with the bank's seal. The finished package thus presents a neat and trim appearance. But in the present instance the package received at the treasury was loosely and slovenly wrapped, and the seals seemed to have been put on either in great haste or by an inexperienced hand. Moreover, the label must have been cut from the stolen package and pasted on the other, for the brown paper of a previous wrapping showed plainly in a margin running around the label. The address on the package read:

"United States Treasurer,
"Washington,
"D. C."

All this was printed, except the figures $41,000," even the dollar sign. The figures were in the writing of Mr. Watson, the paying teller of the bank, whose business it was to oversee the sending of the money. His initials were also marked on the label, with the date of the sending; so that on examining the label Mr. Watson himself was positive that it was genuine.

All this made it tolerably clear that the robbery had not been committed at the bank before the package was intrusted to the two messengers; for no bank clerk would have made up so clumsy a package, and the paying teller himself, had he been a party to the crime, would not have cut the label written by himself from the genuine package and pasted it on the bogus one; he would simply have written out another label, thus lessening the chances of detection. Furthermore, it was shown by testimony that during the short time between the sealing up of the package in the paying teller's department and its delivery to Dominie Earle, who took it first, it was constantly under the observation of half a dozen bank employes; so that the work of cutting off the label and pasting it on the bogus package could scarcely have been accomplished then without detection.

Earle and Crawford, the bank messengers, were submitted to repeated examinations; but their statements threw no light upon the mystery. Both stuck persistently to the same story, which was that neither had loosed his hold on the handle of the valise from the moment they left the bank until they had delivered the package through the window of the express company's money department. Accepting these statements as true, it was impossible that the package had been tampered with in this part of its journey; while the assumption that they were not true implied apparently a collusion between the two messengers, which was highly improbable, since Dominie Earle had been a servant of the bank for 35 years, and had never in that long term failed in his duty or done anything to arouse distrust. Before entering the bank's employ he had been a preacher, and his whole life seemed to have been one of simplicity and honest dealing.

As for Crawford, who was, indeed a new man, it was plain that if the dominie told the truth, and had really kept his hold on the valise handle all the way to the express company's window, his companion, honest or dishonest, would have had no opportunity to cut off the label, paste it on the bogus package and make the substitution.

Finally came the theory that the money package had been stolen while in the care of the express company. In considering this possibility it became necessary to know exactly what had happened to the package from the moment it was taken through the window of the money department up to the time of its delivery at the treasury. The package was first receipted for by the head of the money department, Mr. J. C. Young. Having handed the receipt to the bank messengers, he passed the package to his assistant, Mr. Littlefield, who in turn passed it on to another clerk, Mr. Moody, who way-billed it in due form for Washington, and then placed it in the iron safe which was to carry it on its journey. Two or three hours may have elapsed between the receipt of the package and the shipment of the safe, but during this time the package was constantly in view of five or six clerks in the money department, and, unless they were all in collusion, it could scarcely have been stolen by anyone there. As for the express messenger who accompanied the safe on the wagon to the train, and then on the train to Washington, and then on another wagon to the treasury building, his innocence seemed clearly established, since the safe had been locked and sealed, according to custom, before its delivery to him, and showed no signs of having been tampered with when opened in Washington the following morning by another representative of the express company. The messenger who accompanies a through safe to its destination, indeed, has small chance of getting inside, not only because of the protecting seal, but also because he is never allowed to have the key to the safe or to know its combination. Later, as a still further safeguard, the Adams Express company introduced into its cars an equipment of large burglar-proof and fire-proof safes, especially as a guard against train robbers, who found it comparatively easy to break open the small safes once in use. In the present instance, of course, there was no question of train robbers.

One important fact stood out plain and uncontrovertible: That a responsible clerk in the money department of the Adams Express company had receipted for a package supposed to contain $41,000 intrusted to the company by the bank. This threw the responsibility on the company, at least until it could be shown that the package as delivered contained brown paper, and not bank notes. In accordance with their usual policy of promptness and liberality, the Adams people paid over to the American Exchange bank the sum of $41,000, and said no more about it. But their silence did not mean inactivity. Their instructions to their detectives in this case, as in all similar cases, were to spare neither time nor expense, but to continue the investigation until the thieves had been detected and brought to punishment, or until the last possibility of clearing up the mystery had certainly expired.

If confirmation of the wonderful bargains which await you at VanArsdale's Sunshine Sale was needed it could be had from hundreds of satisfied patrons who have already enjoyed these magnificent price savings. It is seldom that business conditions compel such radical price reductions, but this year weather and financial matters combined against the retailer. Business was a little off--the surplus is greater. And on top of all comes the need to buy heavily for Fall. The present signs of returning prosperity compel us in self-protection to stock up heavily, but we have got to have the money to discount the Fall bills as they become due and the room to put the goods. That is the reason for this price slashing. That's why VanArsdale's stylish and thoroughly dependable Shoes and Oxfords are a third off regular prices. Glance at the items. They tell the whole unfortunate story.

Every Oxford Is From Regular Stock.

Boys' Oxfords, sizes 2½ to 5½. The VanArsdale Steel Shod $2.50 kind. Sunshine Sale Price $1.98.

HEBREWS OBSERVE FAST

Orthodox Jews Will Abstain from All Food and Drink for 24 Hours.

TO HOLD SPECIAL SERVICES.

Fast of Ab Is In Memory of Destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar and the Romans.

In the Synagogue Children of Israel will begin this evening the great fast of the ninth of Ab (Tish'a b'Ab). For twenty-four hours food and drink will be strictly abstained from. Work is unlawful and at the services tomorrow morning the wearing of the prayer mantle (tallit) and phylacteries (tephillin) will be omitted.

This fast is in memory of the twofold destruction of Jerusalem and the overthrow of the Jewish nation, the destruction of the Holy City by Nebuchadnezzer (B. C. 586), and the second destruction by the Romans under Titus in the year 70 of the Christian era. The fast of the ninth of Ab is the termination of the national penitential season that begins with the fast of the tenth of the month Tebet, which commemorates the begining of the siege. There is another memorial in the fast of the seventeenth of Tammaz (July 16), which recalls the day on which the first breach was made in the walls of Jerusalem. During this period all the national misfortunes are recalled. Within the past generation the repressive edicts against the Jews in Russia and the reawakening of persecutions has intensified the nationalist sentiment and the Zionist movement with its longing for the recovery of their ancient homeland as an asylum for the persecuted and has thus given the observance of the fast a greater hold upon the Jewish people.

To Worship By Candlelight.

Tonight the strictest synagogues will be dimly lighted, devout Jews bringing candles and reading by the tapers' meagre light, sitting meanwhile on the floor with shoes removed and reading as the special portions for the fast the book of Lamentations of Jeremiah, which is chanted in plaintive minor keys. The recitation of these mournful kinots (lamentations) is a special feature of the services. The scrolls of the law and the holy ark are often draped in black during this season of national mourning, which differs from Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) in being a season of mourning for national misfortunes, and not, like the Day of Atonement, for individual sins. Strict Jews observe the fast more or less throughout the entire period from the tenth of Tebet until tomorrow night, weddings and all other joyous events being postponed during that season. Next Friday evening, which begins the Sabbath after the great fast, is known as Sabbat Nahmu (Sabbath of Comfort), because of the comforting words read in the synagogue services from Isaiah xl. "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people, saith your God."

SOMERSET'S FREEHOLDERS MEET AT GLADSTONE.

Freeholder Lutkins was the only absentee at the special meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders held at Gladstone yesterday to inspect two bridges over Peapack brook at that place. The board did not consider it necessary to build anew, but appointed Messrs. Poulson, Bunn and Codington a committee to see that the old ones were properly repaired.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Bunn and Demler was appointed to confer with Sidney Snable to adjust the damage done to the latter's horse by breaking through the township bridge near Liberty Corner.

In order to comply with the law the board fixed the appropriations for the year, and then adjourned to meet Saturday morning in Somerville to go over the Millstone and New Amwell roads.

Rector to Return Saturday.

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, is at his old home at Crown Point, Lake Champlain, with his wife. They will return to this city Saturday, and Mr. Warner will have charge of the services at the church Sunday morning. Rev. Morgan Ashley, of Butler, who was to have taken charge of the services at Holy Cross church last Sunday, was unable to do so, but Mr. Warner has arranged to have him preach at the church Sunday, August 24.

Dr. Endicott Returns.

Dr. G. W. Endicott, who went to Germany some weeks ago to hold a consultation over a patient, returned yesterday with his patient. He took her to Atlantic City today and will be back tonight.

TUTTLE CHAIRMAN OF UNION'S DEM. COMMITTEE

William E. Tuttle, of Westfield, was elected last night successor to Brig. Gen. D. F. Collins, of Elizabeth, as chairman of the Union County Democratic Committee, the latter having presented his resignation. The meeting was held at Elizabeth and Charles H. Moore, of that city, was chosen to succeed Mr. Tuttle as vice-chairman.

Resolutions endorsing Bryan and Kern were passed with a hurrah and J. F. V. Dilts, of Plainfield, was roundly congratulated for his efforts in Union on behalf of "The Peerless Leader." The Plainfield members present included Mr. Dilts, P. J. Reville, D. J. Galbraith and Charles Sturtevant.

Another meeting will be held in the near future to make plans for the campaign.

LONG-STANDING GRUDGE CAUSE OF LIVELY SCRAP

Using a pitch-fork and a hay rake as weapons, William Jackson, Fred Carter and Charles and George Holloway, all colored, got mixed up in a lively fracas at Jackson's barn on Rockview avenue yesterday afternoon about some hay. The result was that Jackson had his right thumb broken and his head almost beaten in, Charles Holloway had one arm temporarily put out of business by a "raking blow," and the other two fighters are now blacker than ever about the eyes. At their hearing before Borough Recorder Dolliver today, Jackson and the Holloways were fined $10 apiece. Carter, who proved a valuable witness, was discharged with a warning.

Jackson and Charles Holloway have been "laying" for each other for some time past, and were the real instigators of the scrap. The two used to be partners in the ash carting business and got into Justice Mundy's court some time ago, shortly after the dissolution of the partnership, on account of some hay. One owned the horse and the other the wagon used in their ash carting business and the animal was supported by hay taken as a "rake-off" from jobs they got cutting lawns. The hay was stored in Jackson's barn, but when the partnership was dissolved, the argument about the ownership of the hay caused Jackson to forbid his former partner to ever come on his premises.

The Holloways, who live on South Second street, were recently hired by Fred Carter, who also lives on South Second street, to help him take in his hay from a borough field. The irony of fate brought it to pass that Carter hired Jackson's barn as the store house for his hay.

As soon as Jackson spied Charles Holloway riding on the top of a load of hay to be stored in his barn, "his rage knew no bounds." He cantered out into the yard and got into an argument with Carter about the character of men he employed to help him in harvest time. He also ordered his former partner off the place.

While the argument was progressing, Charles took occasion to playfully drop the pitchfork off the load of hay on Jackson's head. From that time on, the war was no longer a war of words. Jackson got a hay rake, but in endeavoring to slay his former partner by a side swing, sustained a broken thumb, when Charles parried with the pitchfork. A telephone message from a nearby resident brought Chief Weiss, but Jackson thought his wounds required instant attention, and Carter remembered an engagement at the last moment, so the officer simply got the two Holloways. Roundsman Higgins, of the city force, found Jackson at Dr. Lufburrow's, getting his wounds dressed, and later took up Carter.

C. N. ELLIOTT DROWNED

Husband of Former Plainfield Young Woman Meets Death When Canoe Upsets.

WIFE AND SON WERE RESCUED.

Accident Happens While Family Is Making Canoeing Trip in New England—Body Recovered.

Clive N. Elliott, an architect employed by McKim, Mead & White, of New York, and widely known in Plainfield through his marriage to a local young woman, was drowned in the Connecticut river near Turner's Falls, Mass., yesterday afternoon. With his wife and two sons, Russell, aged eleven, and Edwin D., aged nine years, and Mr. and Mrs. George Rea, of Nutley, he was making a canoe trip from White River Junction, Vt., to Hartford, Conn., a distance of 150 miles. Mr. and Mrs. Rea and the elder Elliott boy were in the lead in one canoe and the others were following as they reached the rapids just below Turner's Falls.

The first canoe shot through the water safely but the second one was caught in the current and overturned. Mr. Elliott was an expert swimmer and might have saved himself but became exhausted while assisting his wife and son. Mr. Rea succeeded in beaching his canoe and brought Mrs. Elliott and the boy ashore but the husband sank before he could be reached. The body did not rise to the surface but was recovered later.

Mr. Elliott was an exemplary young man and news of his death came as a great shock to his many friends in the city and borough. He had attained considerable success as an architect and was one of the leading designers in the McKim, Mead & White office, the firm being the one with which the late Stanford White was connected. Mrs. Elliott was formerly Miss Belle Bradshaw, daughter of the late George W. Bradshaw, of Newark, and is a niece to Chief T. O. Doane, Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, John H. Doane and Mrs. Albert L. Force. They made their home in Nutley after they were married in Plainfield but in recent years were frequent visitors in town.

Mr. Elliott was a man of charitable inclinations and though his business demanded a great deal of his time, he devoted many of his spare hours to settlement work in New York. In this he was assisted by Mrs. Elliott and their labors brought a little sunshine to more than a few darkened lives.

The body will be taken to the home in Nutley and the funeral will be held there.

CO. K. TO PARADE IN MAJOR MARTIN'S HONOR

Company K, of which Major W. B. Martin of the victorious American rifle team, was at one time captain, has accepted invitation from the Elizabeth committee to take part in the parade in his honor at Elizabeth Saturday. Companies C and I, of Elizabeth; and Company M, of Somerville, will also be in line.

Governor J. Franklin Fort will be the most prominent of the throngs of military and city officials who will meet the victorious riflemen at Elizabeth, and will speak at the banquet to be held in the major's honor at Russ' hotel. The Governor, with Mayor Ryan of Elizabeth, and members of the reception committee will go down the harbor in a special tug to meet Major Martin when the steamer comes in. The tug will then come up the harbor to Elizabeth, landing at the foot of East Jersey street. At the landing, the military, with delegations from many of the Elizabeth organizations, will be in readiness to start off the parade, which will be headed by the Second Regiment Band. Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of the Second Regiment, Mayor Ryan and other prominent military and city officials will speak at the banquet of honor, when Mayor Ryan will present Major Martin with an engraved copy of the resolution of the city's appreciation of his work, framed at the last Elizabeth Council meeting. Col. Dennis F. Collins is chairman of the committee in charge of the welcome celebration.

Hawkins Had an Early One.

Tom Hawkins, colored, contracted a jag the first thing this morning and was cutting up didoes at Front and Somerset street at 7:30 when Special Officer James Babbitt gathered him in. He was still too far gone at court time to be arraigned and his case was left over for tomorrow morning. Hawkins yelled blue murder from his cell all the time Judge Runyon was on the bench.

NO CONTAGIOUS CASES

Plainfield's Health is Excellent, According to Monthly Report of Local Board.

DAIRIES ARE ALSO INSPECTED.

Milk Supply of Fair Standard As Is Ice Cream—Permits Granted—July Statistics.

Plainfield is free from contagious disease at the present time according to the Board of Health which held its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon. During July there were but five cases of communicable disease and three of these were tuberculosis, one a scarlet fever case and the other chicken pox.

During the month of July 74 dairies were inspected. Thirty-two samples of milk and six of cream were analyzed by Health Officer Thurlow. All the dairies, according to his report, were found to be in a fair condition and the milk was of a good quality, being especially low in bateria for mid-summer.

A special report on the ice cream supply of the city was submitted. Samples of ice cream manufactured in Plainfield were taken and analyzed; also the cream used for making the ice cream. The results of this investigation showed that the quality of the ice cream and the conditions under which it is made, compared very favorably with other cities. Improvement can be made, however, and it is the purpose of the Board to have the bacteria lessened.

Permits were granted by the Board to the following: To sell milk, Geo. W. Butts, Clarkhurst Farm, E. R. Mills, John Murphy. The plumbing bond of William Zepp was ordered filed. The application of Carl Ruppenstein for a permit to collect garbage was refused, on the ground that there was a sufficient number of garbage collectors in the city.

The following returns were made during the month of July: Marriages, 8; births, 41; still-births, 3; deaths, 23.

TRIO OF ROWDIES FINED FOR DISORDERLY CONDUCT

John Fahey, a member of the gang erecting the Public Service gas tank who was fined $5 in the city court, yesterday morning, for drunkenness, was again arraigned before Judge Runyon today. He was accompanied by two other ironworkers, John Duffy and Albert Curley, the trio having been arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct on North avenue, yesterday afternoon.

According to the testimony of Patrolman Kelley, who, with Patrolman McCarthy, rounded up the men, they had been going about town for a half hour or more abusing everybody in sight. On North avenue they began to pick on Henry C. Drake, who was recently discharged from the hospital after partially recovering from a broken leg, and shoved him over a fruit stand. As a result, the limb was again injured and today he is using crutches instead of a cane. The rowdies dodged into a nearby pool room after that and they were there when the police arrived.

Fahey and Duffy denied the charges but Judge Runyon announced that he knew from other sources besides the officer's testimony that they were guilty. Fahey was fined $15 or forty days, Duffy $10 or twenty days and Curley $5 or ten days, the last named having been the least offensive of the three. They were still dispatching messengers to friends at noon time in an effort to get the money.

MRS. SUSAN McBURTH DIES IN HER NINETY-SIXTH YEAR.

Mrs. Susanna McBurth, reputed to be the oldest resident of Hunterdon county, died yesterday at her home in Glen Gardner. She celebrated her ninety-fifth birthday on July 28 and five generations of her family attended. Among them were Mrs. Lucien C. Sheppard, of Somerset place, one of her daughters, and Mrs. Belle Burd, of this city, a granddaughter. Edgar F. Sheppard, of Westervelt avenue, and Luther Sheppard, of Somerset place, are grandsons.

Mrs. McBurth had always lived in Hunterdon county and was married in the house in which she was born. The wedding took place in 1832. Her husband has been dead many years. Mrs. McBurth is survived by six children, Mrs. Mary Chapin, of Glen Gardner; Mrs. Eliza Swayze, of Clinton; James McBurth, of Phillipsburg; Mrs. Harriett Carling, of Bloomsbury; John McBurth, of Jersey City, and Mrs. Emma Sheppard, of Plainfield.

ENDORSE PARTY TICKET

City Republican Committee Approve National Convention's Works.

DISCUSS THE CAMPAIGN ISSUES.

Proud of Candidates and Platform—First Meeting in Its New Quarters.

Resolutions endorsing Taft and Sherman and praising the party platform were passed last night by the Republican City Committee at a meeting held at its new rooms in the City National Bank building. Despite the heat, there were twelve members present and much of the time was occupied in discussing plans for the coming campaign.

The resolutions follow:

Be it resolved, That the Republican Executive Committee of the City of Plainfield hereby heartily endorses the action of the Republican National Convention in naming William H. Taft and James S. Sherman for the offices of President and Vice President respectively. It believes that by reason of his wide experience and judicial training, Mr. Taft is the best possible candidate for the office for which he has been nominated, and that Mr. Sherman through his knowledge of national affairs acquired during his long term of office in Congress and by reason of his ability, is well qualified for the office of Vice President.

This Committee is convinced that the policies determined upon by the Republican National Convention at Chicago and enunciated in its platform are better fitted to create and sustain business confidence and a continuance of prosperous conditions than the indefinite and inconsistent provisions adopted by the National Democratic Convention at Denver.

At this particular time when the people are especially observant of business conditions and critical of political policies the conservative character of the Republican candidates as well as of the Republican platform should commend itself to the voters as opposed to the radical and uncertain characteristics both of the Democratic candidates and of the Democratic platform.

This Committee therefore strongly urges all voters of whatever form of political affiliation to work for and support the Republican candidates.

WHITE STORE EMPLOYEES ENJOY ANNUAL OUTING

Following an annual custom of "The White Store," the entire force of employes spent yesterday on a picnic at Peck's farm, on the Passaic river, near Stirling. The store was closed all day, and A. E. Force, the proprietor, went with the forty-five clerks on their excursion.

The start was made at 8 o'clock, and the delegation made the six mile trip in a large stage. Arriving at the farm, which is situated on the shore of the river, the day was passed informally, boating and various games being the principal attractions. At mid-day a basket luncheon was spread, and following the feast, there were speeches. J. J. Varley, who acted as chairman of the general committee in charge of the affair, spoke in behalf of the working force of the store, thanking Mr. Force for his munificence in closing "The White Store" to make the occasion possible. Mr. Force responded with a short speech, declaring that he planned to continue the custom of past years in having such annual outings. A unanimous vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Peck for the use of his grounds. He and his wife, with their children, were guests of honor at the picnic, and did much to make the day enjoyable for the excursionists. Weather Forecaster John Neagle, who went along, took several photographs of the clerks, both at the grounds and en route.

The return trip was started at about 8 o'clock in the evening, and the party reached home shortly after 10. The luncheon committee comprised the Misses May Hughes, Elizabeth O'Keefe and Minnie Hossinger. Irving Benninger and Lawrence O'Neill formed the entertainment committee.

Funeral of John Elliott.

The funeral of John Elliott, colored, was held this afternoon at Cole's undertaking rooms. The service was conducted by Rev. M. A. Alexander and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

A. W. SCHWARTZ SEEKS ASSEMBLY NOMINATION

Councilman A. W. Schwartz, of the Twelfth ward, Elizabeth, has entered the field as a candidate in opposition to Assemblyman John R. Moxon, also of Elizabeth, who seeks re-election, and as the result a stiff fight will be waged at the primaries.

Schwartz is strongly backed by both factions of the Republican party in the Twelfth ward, Elizabeth, which he represents in Elizabeth Council and has many friends throughout the city. He is the advertising manager for the Elizabeth Evening Times.

Moxon is hot after the nomination and appears to be confident. Schwartz claims many strong friends. When he ran for Council two years ago, the latter polled a big vote.

MOTHER SENT TO JAIL FOR BEATING YOUNG SON

Bridget Doran, a middle-aged woman living on West Third street between New and Liberty, was sent to jail for sixty days by Judge Runyon, this morning, after witnesses had testified that she had terribly abused her nine-year-old son Michael. The prisoner was before the court for the same offense last month and was let off on an $8 fine.

Mrs. Doran was arrested late last night by Roundsman Higgins and Patrolman Vanderweg who were summoned to the house by the neighbors. As on the previous occasion when she was taken in custody for beating the child, she had piled up furniture against the doors of her home to offset interference from anyone entering. Roundsman Higgins crawled through the window then, and both he and Vanderweg got in the same way last night. They found Mrs. Doran in a bedroom, badly intoxicated, and crawling around the floor on her hands and knees in search of the boy. The little fellow was keeping away from her as best he could and to lessen the force of the blows she rained upon him when he was caught, he kept a blanket over his head.

When arraigned in court, the woman denied beating her child anymore than was necessary as punishment, but his presence belied her statement. The officers brought him before the desk and his face showed several big bruises where he had been hit. He told the judge his mother had struck him as he lay in bed but it was impossible to get anything more from him as he was frightened half to death. When sentence was pronounced, Mrs. Doran begged hard for a fine instead of imprisonment but the magistrate turned a deaf ear to her entreaties. One of the neighbors, who was in court, informed the magistrate that he would take care of the boy while she was in jail.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS EXCURSION TOMORROW.

A forecast made by the committee from Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, has it that 1,500 persons will attend the organization's excursion to Asbury Park tomorrow. The Jersey Central will provide two trains of cars to carry the Plainfielders to and from the shore in order to make sure that everybody has a seat. Something like 600 children from St. Mary's parish will be guests of the council on the outing.

A feature essentially new to local excursions is the reserving of a part of the Asbury Park Casino as headquarters for the Plainfielders. The committee made arrangements for the privilege and it will make a splendid place for old and young to enjoy lunch.

The members of the council who completed the plans and who will have charge tomorrow are John Carty, John J. Hines, Peter Duffy, Arthur A. Cannon, Andrew E. Kenney, John J. Kenney and Fred Kling.

Jag Cost Him $3.

Pleading guilty to a charge of helpless intoxication, Andrew Benford was fined $3 in the city court this morning. Cops Nolan and McDonald found him in the doorway of the City National Bank building last night. Judge Runyon informed "Andy" that he was fined $3 in January last for the same offense and warned him that his appearances in court were coming a little too near each other.

Potentate Marshall Home.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Marshall returned today from a trip through the West. While away, Mr. Marshall, as potentate of Salaam temple, attended the annual Imperial Council of the Shriners at St. Paul.

NEGRO ASSAILANT HELD

Henry Schenck Sent to Jail to Await Grand Jury's Action for Alleged Intent to Kill.

BIG CROWD AT HEARING.

Prisoner Unable to Get $500 Bail—Says He Doesn't Remember the Assault.

With the court-room at Scotch Plains filled to its utmost capacity with a murmuring crowd which included the men who threatened to lynch him, Henry Schenck, the negro who felled James Hunter with a coupling pin at the Central Hotel Monday night, was held in $500 bail by Justice Clark last night to await the action of the Grand Jury. The feeling against the man is so strong that he was unable to secure a bondsman, and was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth this morning.

Hunter, the victim of the assault, has a broken collar bone, but as soon as he is able to get around again, will make a charge of atrocious assault against his assailant. The hearing last night was only preliminary, and was held upon the complaint of John Reick, the passerby who had been insulted by the vile language of the man and was on his way to Justice Clark's office to get a warrant when the fight broke out. Reick was evidently the object of the assault, for after he had warned Schenck about his language on the street, the negro pulled the coupling pin from his hip pocket and hurled it at him. His poor aim was responsible for the injury of Hunter, whose back was turned.

The 'Plains police were prepared for some demonstration on the part of those who came to the hearing, but aside from muttered threats, there was no outburst. Schenck told the Justice that he knew nothing of what he had done, and that he did not "come to" and realize what had happened until he found himself in the cell. He said he had been to this city Monday afternoon and had taken a couple of drinks of "City Beautiful" tanglefoot. Upon his return to the 'Plains, he had licked up a few more drinks. "After that," he said, "I had my bad spell." The court told Schenck that the combination of Plainfield and Scotch Plains rum was enough to make any man throw a fit.

About a dozen eye-witnesses to the attack gave testimony which was against the man at the hearing. What little demonstration there was proved entirely against the prisoner, and no one expressed any wish for leniency, the general sentiment being that the 'Plains authorities insist that he get the limit of the law for his attack.

THIRTY CAMP CHILDREN IN PARK AVE. SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

For several Sundays past, thirty of the New York children who are at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp for the summer have been attending the session of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school. Superintendent George E. Hall, of the school, hires a stage each week to carry the children to and from Sunday-school, and will continue to do so until the camp closes on Labor Day.

The attendance of the camp children is an attractive feature of the sessions, for they take active part in the singing of the hymns. Several of the girls have been placed in Miss Cora Brokaw's class, while the majority of the camp delegation is taught by Mrs. John DeLany.

PLAINFIELD AND BOYNTON BEACH AUTO BUS.

Change in Time Table and Rate.

The Thompson's Garage has found it necessary to change the time table and rates in order to properly take care of their patrons. They have added two runs per day. These most enjoyable runs have now become very popular and well patronized. Tickets for reserved seats may now be bought in advance. They will only sell twelve tickets for each run. See new time table on last page of this paper. •••

In the City Court.

James Erwin Spencely, an Englishman who has been employed in town as a driver, was arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning on a charge of drunkenness. He offered to get out of the city and stay away if sentence was suspended and His Honor took him at his word. Spencely was arrested yesterday afternoon by Patrolman O'Keefe.

Secures Writ of Attachment.

James Kane yesterday secured a writ of attachment for $125 against Antone Guida, who has been conducting a fruit store on North avenue. The matter will be heard in the District Court.

GAS ENDS LIFE OF MONTCLAIR WOMAN

Miss Sophia F. Smith, 65 years old, a well-to-do resident of Montclair, was found dead in her home, 50 North Fullerton avenue, last night, under circumstances which at first indicated suicide.

Miss Sophia had been spending a few days with her niece, Mrs. David H. Burd, of Claremont avenue, Verona, and went to Montclair yesterday morning to pack her trunk preparatory to starting today to spend the balance of the summer with her sister, Mrs. Sigler.

When she left the home of her niece yesterday morning it was with the understanding that she should return to Verona in the afternoon. As she did not return, Mrs. Burd telephoned to Mrs. Wallace W. Weeks, who lives at 48 North Fullerton avenue. Mrss Weeks called on a Mrs. Mehan, living nearby, who has charge of the house and has a key, and together they went to the rear door. When the door was opened they were met with such a volume of gas that they had to run out of the house. They, however, could distinguish the unfortunate woman lying on the kitchen floor. They summoned Dr. Alexander C. Wrensch, of Valley road, and Dr. J. H. Young, of Park street. When the physicians arrived they said the woman had been dead several hours.

It was found that two chops had been placed on the broiler of a gas stove in the kitchen, and it is supposed that the aged woman turned on the gas and when stooping to light it had fainted.

Deputy County Physician Muta, of West Orange, was notified, and he ordered Undertaker George E. Beach, of Montclair, to take charge of the body and he would examine it this morning.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Application for an increase in the fee of John H. Clausen, receiver of the Atlantic City Suburban Traction Company, was held under advisement by Vice-Chancellor Leaming in Camden yesterday.

Shivering as violently as though a northeast blizzard was raging, Edward Graham, fifty-eight years old, was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital in Camden yesterday. He was found to be suffering from chills.

Charged with stealing and selling Charles Budd's $45 bicycle at Thoroughfare, which he admits, William Thomas was arrested by Marshal Samuel Cole, of Paulsboro, and committed to Woodbury jail by Justice Cogwill.

Lightning struck a telegraph pole during the severe electrical storm at Sixth and Pine streets, Camden, yesterday, causing an electrical display in the neighborhood. For a time the big pole was ablaze, but the fire was extinguished by a bucket brigade of neighbors.

Samuel Keen, who is now on his eighth trip to the gold fields of Alaska, sends word to friends in Mantua that he arrived at Nome nearly starved. The steamer was thirty-nine days overdue, and the 250 passengers meanwhile faced starvation, as the food aboard gave out.

On his way home last night Frank Rehwage, thirty-eight years old, of No. 918 Sycamore street, Camden, was held up by four men, and when he refused to give them money he was severely beaten about the head, at Eighth street and Atlantic avenue. It required a number of stitches to sew several ugly cuts on the face and head at the Cooper Hospital.

Charged by Rev. John H. Magee, pastor of the Second M. E. church, Millville, with having cursed him and becoming disorderly near the parsonage, James Call was sentenced to ten days in the county jail by Mayor Smith yesterday. A few months ago Call's father died, leaving him a fortune of several thousand dollars. The young man squandered it, and spent the last few cents for a drink last Saturday.

With a hospital as a gift to charity, Dr. L. F. Hatch is hailed as the great philanthropist of Vineland. Yesterday he threw open to the public a hospital costing over $18,000, equipped in the most modern style and surrounded by twelve acres of shaded lawns. The hospital is free to all emergency cases, whether the unfortunates be rich or poor. A board of twenty-five prominent citizens will govern the institution.

After being forced for many years to use water from contaminated wells and springs, the people of New Egypt have at last been delivered from the evils arising from a poor water supply. Nearly $10,000 has been expended in sinking the artesian well to a depth of 242 feet, and in erecting the water tanks and towers which now give the town water that by chemical test has been shown to be unsurpassed by any in the State.

Westfield Foresters will go on a trolley ride by special car to Newark Thursday evening.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Borough voters will be asked to consider the plan of building an addition to the Whittier school at a special meeting to be held in the school-house next Tuesday night. The project of the Board of Education calls for the erection of an addition to the building at a cost not to exceed $3,500, and the taxpayers will further be asked to authorize the school board to borrow about $1,200 to cover the expense of installing extra seats and hiring an extra teacher. The action of the board is made necessary by the crowded condition of the school, and the desire of having many of the younger pupils attend the Whittier School, instead of having to cross the railroad to go to the Lincoln School.

The hot weather yesterday brought many boating parties to New Market pond, and Admiral Rogers' boats were in great demand. An unpleasant feature for the boating parties was the presence of some boy swimmers, whose bathing suits violated the Anthony Comstock ordinance.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Gudykunst, of Allenwood, Pa., have returned home after a short sojourn with Mrs. Gudykunst's brother, A. N. Van Alstyne.

Routine business was transacted at the August meeting of the township committee held last night at the Hotel Nelson.

OUR HEAVY FIRE LOSS.

Far Greater Per Capita Per Annum Than in European Countries Reported.

New York, Aug. 5.—No country in the world loses so much property through fire as does the United States, according to a circular issued yesterday by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which is working for better fire department equipment, proper building laws and more efficient water supply.

In this country in 1907 the property loss by fire is reported as $199,389,300, while for the last five years the total is $1,257,716,955, or an annual average of more than $251,000,000. There are 4.05 fires to each 1,000 population in American cities, against .86 in Europe. The average fire loss per capita in the United States for the last five years was $3.02, against .33 for six European countries, including France, Germany and Austria.

No country, however rich, says the board, can suffer such enormous losses without seriously imparing its prosperity, and it's up to the insuring public to realize that fact and work for reform.

THE COMING OF THE CHIGNON.

They say the chignon's coming in,
And some are in despair,
While some upraise a joyous din—
But, faith, I do not care.
It matters not to me a pin
How woman does her hair.

No! She may pile it on her crown,
Or eke, at fashion's beck,
As now, may let it dangle down
Behind her shapely neck;
Or dye it black, or gold, or brown—
No tittle do I reck.

Let "fools rush in"—you know the rest.
With such I will not vie,
That's why how woman's hair is dres:
I view with passive eye.
Her coiffure's freaks won't be repressed,
And men are goats who try.

87 MISSES' SUITS
TO GO AT LESS THAN HALF PRICE.

Just because there are only one or two of each style of these suits, and we do not want to fill in the lines again this season, we are eager to make an end of our holdings, and so we have cut the prices to an absurdly low figure to effectively clear every case and rack of the odd styles and sizes.

Eton and Coat Styles with many variations will be found in this offering; made of fine chiffon panama in black and colors, and novelty mixtures, and Jumper Dresses and Shirtwaist Suits of various pretty materials; sizes 14, 16 and 18, bust measure 32 to 36, skirt lengths 36 to 39; suits worth 15.00 to 22.50, to be sold at a price that would barely clear the cost of the skirt alone—a price that has not been approached this season by any house on suits and dresses of equal worth 7.50

MISSES' TUB DRESSES.

Several hundred dresses for Misses and Petite Women—all of them in splendid new models, made up especially for this sale by one of the best makers we trade with, in most attractive Princess and Jumper styles, of dainty striped lawns in a variety of colors and graduated ring dots on light grounds; body trimmed with strips of fine white embroidery, also dresses of fine quality linene, in cadet and medium blue, nicely trimmed with folds of bias plaid gingham of Anderson's make; sizes 14, 16, 18, skirt lengths 37 to 39; dresses that should sell at 4.00 to 5.00, priced at the remarkably low figure of 2.00

THESE AT HALF PRICE AND LESS.

About 500 Dresses in Guimpe, Jumper and High Neck Styles, of fine Colored Chambray, Striped and Checked Percales and Ginghams. Skirts full plaited and extra wide, splendidly finished; dresses that should sell for at least 2.00, to go at only 85c

No mail or 'phone orders filled for these dresses.

Two Big Sales for Men.

First Event---Half Hose.

High Grade Imported Lisle Half Hose—from one of the best makers in France, in exclusive designs and colorings, including sage greens, royal purples, browns and tans, in pretty combination stripe effects such as are usually seen only in the most exclusive furnishing stores; right for wear now and in the fall; not a pair worth less than half a dollar; to be sold, beginning Thursday morning, at just half price ..... .25

Event 2---Union Suits.

Sample Union Suits of Underwear—the ones used by the salesmen on the road to secure orders; strictly perfect garments—the product of one of the largest and best makers of union suits we know of—people who make nothing else but union suits for men; all right in style; splendid in finish; in two lots—

"HANG HIM TO POST" ANGRY WOMEN CRIED

Saved by Constable William McCormick from an angry mob that was clamoring to lynch him, Adam Popiel, 40 years old, a barber, was railroaded to the Burlington county jail last night, after a hearing before Mayor Rue and Magistrate Smith, charged with fatally stabbing his wife, Apolina.

Unconscious from a half-dozen slashes, one of which penetrated her lung and caused a wound from which the physicians say she cannot recover, Mrs. Popiel was taken to the county hospital.

To Frank, the 12-year-old son of the pair, the police owe the capture of the assailant. The lad also saved his mother from being killed outright by her enraged husband. After making an ineffectual attempt to stop his father from stabbing his mother, the boy rushed into the street and gave the alarm that brought neighbors into the house. Then, when his father sought to escape by jumping a back fence at the Popiel home on Earl street, Burlington, and fleeing through a graveyard, he followed and pointed him out to the crowd of men and boys.

Popiel, spattered with blood from his wife's wounds, was dragged to the street. His appearance was the cause of an immediate demonstration, women calling to his captors to hang him to a lamppost. Probably the only thing that saved him from the crowd's wrath was the quick action of Constable McCormick, who fought his way to the centre of the mob, and, with drawn revolver, rescued him.

With the assistance of Patrolman Hayes the threatening crowd was kept at bay until Popiel was lodged in the city jail.

Mrs. Popiel's most serious slash, which penetrated the lung, reached from the neck across the back, a distance of ten inches. Another slash nearly cut out the woman's eyes.

The Popiels figured in the police court two weeks ago, when Magistrate Smith sought to heal their differences by sentencing the man to buy his wife a "merry widow" hat and a new dress, the woman claiming that Popiel had refused to properly clothe her. The new wardrobe smoothed things over for a while.

"Mom wanted to go out for a walk in her new dress and he wouldn't let her," said the boy, Frank, the principal witness. "Then he grabbed her by the hair and started to cut her with the knife. I found the knife in the graveyard, where he threw it when he tried to get away."

PRIVATE DRUMMED OUT OF SEA GIRT CAMP.

Frank Miller, a private in Company H of the Fourth New Jersey regiment, which is in camp at Sea Girt, along with Battery E, Third United States artillery, was dishonorably discharged from the company yesterday and drummed out of camp under guard.

This was after he had been stripped of his uniform, and, as he had brought no civilian clothes with him, had been provided with a pair of old overalls.

On the train on the way to the camp last Saturday Miller was very lively. Captain Perlberg, of Company H, remonstrated with him, and Miller struck the captain in the eye, blackening it. Then he pulled the bell cord and set the brakes, bringing the train to a stop. He was put under guard, and on the company's arrival in camp, was put in the guardhouse.

Yesterday he was court martialed, found guilty of assaulting an officer and of unbecoming conduct in pulling the bell cord, and dismissed from the service.

THIS GIRL HYPNOTIZED TO LEAVE HER HOME?

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ristow, of 313 Cass street, Trenton, whose daughter, Nellie, has been missing two weeks, believe she has eloped to New York with Hans Nosek, a Trenton pottery decorator and artist, who has done some work for the Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia. Nosek holds to several occult beliefs, and the parents of Miss Ristow believe he has her completely under his control, as he has seemed to have a strange influence over her for some time. She was a stenographer at the John A. Roebling Sons Company's Works at Trenton, and went from home July 19 to spend a vacation with an uncle at Sugar Loaf Farm, near Hazleton, Pa. No word has been received from the farm, and this strengthens the belief that the girl is living in New York with Nosek, who left Trenton about the same time as Miss Ristow.

Nosek was constantly at the Ristow home and taught Miss Nellie many of his strange doctrines. So completely did he exercise his control over her that she permitted him to take her wages as soon as she received them every week. The relatives of Miss Ristow sought to have her sever her relations with Nosek, holding that his weird power over her was certain to come to no good end. Nosek met this argument, according to statements made today by the brother of Nellie, with the claim that the opposition to him was due to evil spirits.

Miss Ristow for a long time before going away was totally careless of things which did not involve Nosek. She would be in bad temper when he was not present, but his company always brought back her good spirits. Nosek also taught the girl to ignore physicians and medicines, and a short time ago, when she was ill, she refused to see a doctor or take his medicine.

GIRL SERIOUSLY BURNED.

Florence Socco, 12 years old, was seriously, if not fatally, burned by the explosion of a gasoline stove at Chatham yesterday noon. She was preparing her father's dinner at the time. Her mother was accidentally shot and killed by her son a year ago.

When her dress caught fire the girl ran outdoors and rolled in the grass until the fire was extinguished.

FAVORS BIG FEES FOR STATE MUTUAL TRUSTEES.

Vice-Chancellor Leaming filed in the Court of Chancery yesterday at Trenton an opinion holding that the three trustees and their counsel are entitled to compensation for services rendered by them in the liquidation of the affairs of the State Mutual Building and Loan Association up to the date of the entry of the decree of insolvency. The compensation is fixed at $2,500 each.

The trustees were Benjamin F. Fowler, S. Stanger Iszard and George J. Bergen. Harvey F. Carr, of Camden, was their counsel. After the appointment of these trustees by the stockholders of the association, David O. Watkins, State commissioner of banking and insurance, took proceedings against the concern and receivers were appointed. Then the Court of Errors and Appeals held that the trustees were acting illegally, as there was no law for winding up the association in that manner. The proceedings involved about $1,800,000.

Plainfield, N. J., August 5, 1908.

The new tax rate will be larger than the last. Just mark that.

In a few days, the New Brunswick Home News promises to make its appearance in a new dress. Judging by its recent signs of prosperity, there is no question but what the paper can afford it.

The death of William B. Allison, the senior United States Senator from Iowa, removes from the political arena one of the biggest men in the Republican party. For thirty-eight years he served in the upper house of Congress with marked fidelity and distinguished ability.

It is with much pride that the fact is recorded that Plainfield is a close second in Newark in the matter of raising funds for the proposed monument to be erected by the Grover Cleveland Memorial Association. Thus far, the Newark Star has gathered $334.40, while The Daily Press has collected $333.20. Cannot Plainfield wrest first place from Newark?

What possible excuse the Common Council could have for ordering the expenditure of $500 of the taxpayers' money for the purpose of having the present building ordinance revised is hard to understand. To say the least, it will strike the average taxpayer as extravagant, for why in the name of common sense sould not this proposed ordinance be drawn as all others are?

WE HAVE A FLYER, TOO.

With a small American flag flying from its stern and the red pennant of the Aero Club of America on the side, Captain Thomas S. Baldwin's big dirigible balloon which he constructed for the Signal Corps of the army was given its first preliminary trial at Fort Myer, Va., late yesterday afternoon.

For seven minutes the airship glided over the parade grounds at an elevation of from 150 to 200 feet and was maneuvered up and down and turned abruptly with ease and accuracy.

THE FORUM.

Answers Justice Mundy.

Editor, The Daily Press:

It is distasteful to me to enter into a newspaper controversy about a small matter which can be of little or no interest to your readers. But since Mr. Mundy has chosen to answer my statement as contained in your issue of Monday, and to doubt the veracity of either my son or myself, I will briefly reply.

No further discussion of the case and the publication which led to this unpleasant itself which has appeared in your columns, seems entirely unnecessary. Mr. Mundy simply re-iterates the statements of the plaintiff without explaining why he gave them more credit than the denial entered by my son. He does not show that the witnesses corroborated the woman's accusations. Of course anybody may make slanderous accusations; it is another matter to substantiate them. In my letter which you published on Monday, I have also shown under what authority my son acted, and why he did not think it worth while to bring his witnesses.

But Mr. Mundy thinks that my statement that I had seen the woman carry on in the halls as I described, is contrary to my son's sworn statement that I was not around. This illustrates Mr. Mundy's process of reasoning. Indeed, I was not around when the woman's first offence occurred, and when she was finally led out of the house, having detailed further action to my son after his report of the first offence. But between the time of this offence and the "ejection" there elapsed an hour. Yes, a full hour, Mr. Mundy. And in the meantime, I was around in the corridors of our somewhat extensive building and had occasion to observe the woman. Parenthetically it may be mentioned that if the woman thought that my son had overstepped his authority, she had then and there an opportunity to appeal to me. She did not, but disappeared very quickly in her room at my approach.

This statement ends the matter as far as I am concerned, and I wish to thank you for allowing me to use your columns for this purpose.

We must realize at once on this mammoth stock of Men's, Women's and Children's Summer Footwear. Every pair of these summer Shoes are new and bought for this summer's selling. They haven't cleaned up as thoroughly or quickly as we would have liked, and rather than carry them over we have sunk the cut price knife into their very vitals. Imagine a sale of gold dollars for sixty-five or seventy cents, and you will have an idea of this Sunshine Sale of ours. Don't think that these offerings are "specials" made up to sell at a cut price. They are not! Every pair comes from the regular stock. Every pair was made in the VanArsdale way—carefully selected stock, well and thoroughly put together by skilled workmen. That's part of the bargain, if you take advantage of these little prices. They are the regular VanArsdale quality or you needn't take them. Come at once, so that you will not be disappointed.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A movement is on foot to play a series of games between Rahway, Westfield, Plainfield and the 'Plains for the county championship. Such a series would be popular and would do doubt be a drawing card as well as having the effect of reviving the old time rivalry. Rahway has a strong team. Clinton Avenue is putting up a good game and the locals have held their own against all comers. Westfield has a new team but the lineup as contemplated would make the team a strong one.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Buckley have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Elliott T. Collins, of Brooklyn, and Miss Luckemeyer, of Newark, over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kalloway, of Stelton, have been visiting Mrs. Kalloway's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Coddington, of Park avenue.

Miss Mamie Gallagher, of Metuchen, is spending several days with Mrs. Frederick Clark, of Front street.

The local ball team has a game scheduled for Saturday with Westfield on the local diamond.

Mrs. Hoyt and daughter, of Brooklyn, have been visiting Mrs. Charles Haberly, of Front street.

Miss Isabella Hyams has returned from a visit of several days at her home in New York.

SCUTH PLAINFIELD.

A large crowd gathered at Marconnier chapel last evening and greatly enjoyed the peach festival. There was quite a number of young people from here among the guests.

Mrs. Laing, of Plainfield avenue, has written home from Germany, where she is staying with friends, and reports an exceedingly interesting and pleasant visit.

Miss Nellie Manning, of this village, and Misss Cora Dayton, of New Brunswick, are attending the convention at Northfield and will be away for two weeks.

Mrs. Margaret Pulver and son, Harry, of Troy, N. Y., are spending a week at the home of Mrs. Pulver's brother, W. E. McIntosh, on Woods' road.

Charles Randolph started on horseback for Chester, New York, today, where he expects to remain for a few weeks.

Mrs. P. C. Johnson is entertaining her father, J. Jones, of Plainfield.

WHAT IS A BACK ROOM?

City Counsel Dixon Says Bishops' Act Does Not Define It.

Corporation Counsel Dixon, of Jersey City, in an opinion to the Police Board, says that the Bishops' law does not define back rooms, "except inferentially by the provisions thereof in which liquor may be sold or served under licenses granted for that purpose."

He cites the sections of the acts relative to the classes of places which he enumerates, excepting barrooms, and says the act necessarily presumes that all places except barrooms may contain front and back rooms. He adds:

"Webster's International Dictionary defines a room to be—(1) A particular portion or space appropriated for occupancy; a place to sit, stand or lie. (2) Especially space in a building or shop enclosed or set apart by a partition; an apartment or chamber. As an illustration it quotes from Shakespeare the following line, "I found the prince in the next room.'

"A back room would be such a place or enclosure in the rear of another such space or enclosure, and, of course, such rooms are contemplated by the so-called Bishops' act in the above enumerated places.

"In addition to the above enumerated places the act provides that a license may be granted for the sale of liquor in a bar or business room on the ground floor or basement of a building or public street. With regard to this place you will perceive it shall be a single or entire space in which the business is conducted."

ONE MORE TOWN BURNS IN CANADA.

Old Michel Likely to Be Destroyed as Others Were in British Columbia.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 5.—After withstanding flames since Saturday the old town of Michel became a prey to bush fires last evening, which were fanned to renewed energy by a breeze from the north which the people have feared for several days. A brief bulletin received here gave no details, but it is believed that the people were sufficiently prepared to escape to safety without any loss of life.

The first fire which swept over and destroyed Fernie and other towns is still raging.

GREATEST FLIGHT OF ALL AIRSHIPS

Oppenheim, Aug. 5.—The Zeppelin dirigible balloon, owing to a defect of one of the motors, landed on an island in the middle of the Rhine near here at 6 o'clock last evening, after a record-breaking voyage from its headquarters on Lake Constance in an attempt to make a continuous flight of twenty-four hours.

The Count started from Friedrichshafen at 6:45 a. m. with eleven persons in the car attached to the airship, passed over Lake Constance and at Strasburg dropped a card at noon on which it was stated that the journey had been entirely successful thus far.

Thousands of persons gathered in the streets to watch the airship as it hovered over the city. It twice encircled the cathedral before heading for Mannheim.

The airship reached Mayence at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. All through the Rhine country the people followed the great aerial contrivance with their eyes and many ran after it, shouting, laughing and weeping.

The Count seemed to have perfect control of the balloon, which made an average of thirty miles an hour.

SENATOR ALLISON DEAD IN DUBUQUE.

Represented Iowa in the Upper House of Congress for Thirty-five Years.

Dubuque, Iowa, Aug. 5.—United Sates Senator Allison died of heart failure here at 1:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

William Boyd Allison was born at Perry, Ohio, on March 2, 1829. He passed his boyhood on the 80-acre farm of his parents and was admitted to the bar in 1850. He was married twice.

Senator Allison practised law in Ohio from 1850 to 1857 and removed to Dubuque, Iowa, three years after he was married. He raised troops for the Civil War and became a member of Congress in 1863.

He continued in the House of Representatives until 1871, and became a member of the United States Senate in 1873, where he remained continuously ever since, and was identified with every piece of important legislation considered by that body.

President Garfield offered him the position of Secretary of the Treasury, which he declined. He declined also when Presidents Harrison and McKinley made the tender of the same office.

In recognition of his application to the subject of finance he was sent as chairman of the American delegation to the International Money Conference at Brussels in 1892.

Senator Allison's name was advanced frequently for the Presidency. His candidacy reached its most considerable proportion in 1888, and it was his strength in the convention, insufficient to win for himself, that gave the nomination to Harrison.

PATERSON TO USE MACHINE.

Opponents of Voting Device Delayed Action Too Long.

It is expected that the voting machines will be used in Paterson at the coming election, as their opponents have delayed taking action too long. The time to file petitions will have elapsed since the Board of Aldermen meets again, on August 17.

Tame Deer at Millwood.

While crossing what is known as Beaver Run, near Millwood, Fred Shaw, of Jersey City, was surprised to come suddenly upon six deer feeding along the edge of the swamp in a field. He stood quietly behind a tree for several minutes watching them. A passing wagon only caused them to look up for a moment. Knowing the penalty for killing deer out of season, Shaw did not return for a gun to his boarding house, but he said: "I had the chance of my life at deer."

New Turnpike Bridge Plans.

Jersey City, Aug. 5.—The Board of Freeholders yesterday adopted plans for a new bridge over the Hackensack river at Newark avenue, on the Turnpike road. After the plans have been approved by the War Department proposals will be advertised for. The old bridge was condemned several months ago and passengers on the trolley between Newark and this city had to cross the river on a foot path.

Wittpenn Will Enforce Law.

Mayor Wittpenn, of Jersey City, said yesterday that while he favors baseball on Sundays, personally, as mayor he must uphold the law which calls for its suppression. He said, however, he would take no action until officially notified of a violation of the law.

Killed by Erie Train.

Nicholas Scalpi, 21 years old, of 315 South Mill street, Paterson, was struck by the Elmira express at the Clay street crossing of the D., L. & W. railroad shortly after 4 p. m. He lived until brought to the Barclay street station of the railroad.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Tower Building Has Received that Amount.

New York, Aug. 5.—The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has filed an interesting record in connection with the erection of its new tower building. It is shown that since the plans for its new building were filed there have been delivered to the company 8,746 newspapers clippings, gathered from all parts of the world.

The clippings, varying from page illustrations to a stick, average twelve inches in length, equaling 104,952 inches, or 1,469,328 agate lines. To buy this amount of space in the papers that carried the stories—for most of them were high class—would have cost $440,798.40. Many more stories will, of course, be printed, for the notable structure will attract newspaper attention for years to come.

Robbed by Highwaymen.

Glen Gardner, Aug. 5.—William Symson, of Elizabeth, who is boarding at a hotel in Main street, was attacked on the street last night by two men. After being knocked down he was robbed of $12, all the money he had with him. His clothes were nearly all torn from him in the struggle. A party from the hotel which started in pursuit of the highwaymen, found a derby hat with the initials "F. J. W." on the inside which was lost during the struggle, but no trace of Symson's assailants was discovered.

Match Causes Baby's Death.

While playing in the yard in the rear of her home yesterday Ellen Murphy, 4 years old, of 307 Willow avenue, Hoboken, stepped upon a match, which ignited and set fire to her dress. While trying to tear the burning dress from the little girl Mrs. Murphy was badly burned on the hands. The child was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where she died soon afterward.

Lew Dockstader at New Plainfield Theatre Monday, August 10.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

One of the constant aims which Lew Dockstader has kept in view in organizing his show this season is the elimination of vaudeville features from the bill. He has persisted in maintaining his entertainment along lines of minstrelsy, devoting his first part to a genuine minstrel entertainment and conforming to up-to-date requirements by filling in what was formerly called the olio with big acts both comic and spectacular. Mr. Dockstader has been for many years the exponent of all that is best in minstrelsy and it has been with his hand at the wheel that the good ship has been guided along the narrow channel of success. He has not been blind to the fact that the public craves novelty and in his desire to furnish it he has gone as far as the limitations of this peculiar brand of entertainment allow. He has racked his brain and spent thousands of dollars in getting material for his minstrel productions that would be novel and at the same time be not too foreign to the black face art. That vaudeville is not minstrelsy no one will deny. The two are as far apart as day and night in point of similarity. No lover of minstrelsy would be misled by a vaudeville entertainment under the guise of minstrelsy. The Dockstader company will be at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night.

Stamp Your Edgings.

For stamping scalloped and festooned edgings at home small rolls of stamping materal come in tubes ready to be applied to the cloth and pressed with a hot iron. There is enough in each tube to make ten yards of edging, and a variety of patterns is offered, ranging from the plain scallop, in several sizes, to very fancy ones. As scallops are being used for finishing the flounces on petticoats and white underwear, these ready to use sets are most convenient. Initials come in this way also. One can buy a box of whatever size and style desired, and for a few cents have enough on hand to stamp several sets of linen. Women who are gong to the country for the summer would do well to take along a few boxes of these designs, for it is not always easy to get stamping done in small villages, and, then, the patterns carried in country shops are not always desirable.

Crochet Work for the Porch.

The old-fashioned white bedspread crocheted with cotton thread has returned to favor. This has probably been brought about by the popularity of all things done with a knitting or a crochet needle.

The new ones have a deep fringe around them of cotton thread and are large enough to hang nearly to the floor. This saves the necessity of having a valance. The spread itself acts as one.

One need not go to the trouble of crocheting such a large expanse, which takes a summer's season to accomplish, for the spreads can be bought in the shops at small prices and look as well as the hand-made ones.

A Delicious Beverage.

There is still another cooling and refreshing drink for housewives to make at home and serve for dinner or supper.

This is built upon a strong lemonade, which allows five lemons and a cup of sugar to each quart of water.

To every quart of lemonade is added a quart of ginger ale. This is put in a bog bowl with a pice of ice. Springs of mint are washed, the stems bruised to bring out the full flavor and put into the lemonade when serving in small glasses.

SOME HISTORIC STYLES ARE NOW THE FAD.

One essential of fashion at present seems to be that it shall be drawn from French history at some period round about the Revolution.

Paris is now reveling in the Charlotte Corday styles, perhaps fearing that the directorie would become monotonous without some variation. The contrast is very great between the simple fishu and mob-cap fashions and astounding luxury of the directoire dresses to which we have become accustomed.

Young girls are particularly well suited by the former, more specially if they have the rare type of face which looks its best withiut a collar, because the softly folded fichu ought to define the base of the throat without anything above it. The mob-caps are being made in lace, flowered muslin and antique embroidery, and are tied up with colored ribbons, and perhaps a cluster of roses of cherries. They should be left transparent.

A very pretty get-up of this type seen recently had a skirt plain at the hips, but rather full below them (suggesting that the circular skirt is not far off), made in the finest white Indian muslin inserted with very large interlinked circles of fine Valenciennes above a fastooned insertion of very tiny pleats. The sleeves were of muslin inserted with lace, and beneath the arms conld be seen side pieces of the same, but nearly all of th bodice was hidden by t fichu in the softest Saxe blue silk, which, coming from deep at the back, crossed the shoulers, following the line of the neck and widening in front, was crossed around the waist, and fastened at the back with a few loops and two long ends.

A fold or two of tulle in the same shade was the only finish around the neck, the V in front, very small to begin with, being filled up with the tulle. A dainty little cap of lace, tied up with blue ribbon and pink roses, finished the costume.

THE NOTIFICATION COMMITTEE.

How should a candidate behave
When patriots come with accents grave
To tell him publicly that he
Is now the party's nominee?

Should he endeavor to conceal
His lack of interest in their zeal
And say, with solemn upturned eyes,
"This is indeed a sweet surprise!"

Or should he cut the formal knot
And get to business on the spot,
Upsetting speeches well rehearsed
By saying, "Boys, I knew it first!"
—Washington Star.

Mrs. Martha Snedeker, of 244 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Some six weeks ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills for an attack of kidney trouble that had been annoying me for a long time, procuring the remedy at Randolph's drug store. My main symptoms were sever backaches and pains in the top and back of my head, a stiffness in the limbs—especially my arms, and a sediment in the secretions that looked like brick-dust. I had a languid feeling of weakness and depression but physicians did not help me. Doan's Kidney Pills did seem to reach the cause of my trouble, however, and that very quickly and now all those aches and pains have disappeared and the kidney secretions are perfectly normal. This is all due to the healing powers of Doan's Kidney Pills and their direct action on the kidneys.

FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE PINKERTONS

Copyright by G. W. Dillingham Co.

The American Exchange Bank Robbery

Hastening to New York in response to the telegram sent him, Robert Pinkerton examined the evidence already collected by his representative, and then himself questioned all persons in any way concerned in the handling of the money. Mr. Pinkerton, after his investigation, was not so sure as some persons were that the package had been stolen by employes of the express company. He inclined rather to the opinion that, in the rush of business in the express office, the false package, badly made up though it was, might have been passed by one of the clerks. This conclusion turned his suspicions first toward the two bank messengers. Of these he was not long in deciding Dominie Earle to be, in all probability, innocent. While he had known of instances where old men, after years of unimpeachable life, had suddenly turned to crime, he knew such cases to be infrequent, and he decided that Earle's was not one of them. Of the innocence of the other messenger, Crawford, he was not so sure. He began a careful study of his record.

STARTED DOWN THE BUSY THOROUGHFARE.

Edward Sturgis Crawford at this time was about 27 years old, a man of medium height, a decided blond, with large blue eyes, and of a rather effeminate type. He went scrupulously dressed, had white hands with carefully manicured nails, parted his hair in the middle, and altogether was somewhat of a dandy. He had entered the bank on the recommendation of a wealthy New Yorker, a young man about town, who, strange to say, had made Crawford's acquaintance, and indeed struck up quite a friendship with him, while the latter was serving in the humble capacity of conductor on a Broadway car. This was about a year before the time of the robbery. Thus far Crawford had attended to his work satisfactorily, doing nothing to arouse suspicion, unless it was indulging a tendency to extravagance in dress. His salary was but $42 a month, and yet he permitted himself such luxuries as silk underclothes, fine patent-leather shoes, and other apparel to correspond. Pushing back further into Crawford's record, Mr. Pinkerton learned that he had grown up in the town of Hancock, N. Y., where he had been accused of stealing $60 from his employer and afterward of perpetrating a fraud upon an insurance company. Putting all these facts together, Mr. Pinkerton decided that, in spite of a perfectly self-possessed manner and the good opinion of his employers, Crawford would stand further watching. His general conduct subsequent to the robbery was, however, such as to convince everyone, except the dogged detective, that he was innocent of the crime. In vain did "shadows" follow him night and day, week after week; they discovered nothing. He retained his place in the bank, doing the humble duties of messenger with the same regularity as before, and living apparently in perfect content with the small salary he was drawing. His expenses were lightened, it is true, by an arrangement voluntarily offered by his friend, the young man about town, who invited him to live in his own home on Thirty-eighth street, whereby not only was he saved the ordinary outlay for lodgings, but many comforts and luxuries were afforded him that would otherwise have been beyond his reach.

Thus three months went by with no result; then four, five, six months; and, finally, all but a year. Then, suddenly, in April, 1889, Crawford took his departure for Central America, giving out to his friends that he was going there to assume the management of a banana plantation of 60,000 acres, owned by his wealthy friend and benefactor.

Before Crawford sailed, however, the "shadows" had informed Mr. Pinkerton of Crawford's intention, and asked instructions. Should they arrest the man before he took flight, or should they let him go? Mr. Pinkerton realized that he was dealing with a man who, if guilty, was a criminal of unusual cleverness and cunning. His arrest would probably accomplish nothing, and might spoil everything. There was little likelihood that the stolen money would be found on Crawford's person; he would probably arrange some safer way for its transmission. Perhaps it had gone ahead of him to Central America weeks before.

"We'll let him go," said Mr. Pinkerton, with a grim smile; "only we'll have some one go with him."

The Pinkerton representative employed to shadow Crawford on the voyage sent word, by the first mail after their arrival in Central America, that the young man had rarely left his stateroom, and that whenever forced to do so had employed a colored servant to stand on guard so that no one could go inside.

Nothing more occurred, however, to justify the suspicion against Crawford until the early part of 1890, when the persistent efforts of the detectives were rewarded by an important discovery. It was then that Robert Pinkerton learned that Crawford had before the bank officials in regard to told a deliberate lie when examined his family relations in New York. He had stated that his only relative in New York was a brother, Marvin Crawford, who was then driving a street car on the Bleecker street line. Now it came to the knowledge of Mr. Pinkerton that Crawford had in the city three married aunts and several cousins. The reason for Crawford having concealed this fact was presently brought to light through the testimony of one of the aunts, who, having been induced to speak, not without difficulty, stated that on Sunday, May 6, 1888, two days after the robbery, her nephew had called at her house, and given her a package which he said contained gloves, and which he wished her to keep for him. It was about this time that the papers contained the first news of the robbery, and, her suspicions having been aroused, she picked a hole in the paper covering of the package large enough to let her see that there was money inside. Somewhat disturbed, she took the package to her husband, who opened it and found that it contained $2,000 in bank notes. Realizing the importance of this discovery, the husband told his wife that when Crawford came back to claim the package she should refer him to him, which she did.

Some days later, on learning from his aunt that she had spoken to her husband about the package, Crawford became greatly excited, and told her she had made a dreadful mistake. A stormy scene followed with his uncle, in which the latter positively refused to render him the money until he was satisfied that Crawford was its rightful possessor. A few days later Crawford's young friend, the man about town, called on the uncle, and stated that the money in the package belonged to him and must be surrendered. The uncle was still obdurate; and when Crawford and his friend became violent in manner, he remarked meaningly that if they made any more trouble he would deliver the package of money to the Adams Express company and let the company decide to whom it belonged. This brought the angry claimants to their senses, and Crawford's friend left the house and never returned. Finally Crawford's uncle compromised the contention by giving his nephew $500 out of the $2,000, and retaining the balance himself, in payment, one must suppose, for his silence. At any rate, he kept $1,500, and also a receipt in Crawford's handwriting for the $500 paid to him.

Other members of the family re-called the fact that a few days after the robbery Crawford had left in his aunt's storeroom a valise, which he had subsequently called for and taken away. None of them had seen the contents of the valise, but they remembered that Crawford on the second visit had remained alone in the storeroom for quite a time, perhaps 20 minutes, and after his departure they found there a rubber band like those used at the bank. The detectives also discovered that on the 15th of May, 1888, 11 days after the robbery, Crawford had rented a safety-deposit box at a bank in the Fifth Avenue Hotel building, under the name of Eugene Holt. On the 18th of May he had exchanged this box for a larger one. During the following months he made several visits to the box, but for what purpose was not known.

On presenting this accumulated evidence to the Adams Express company, along with his own deductions, Robert Pinkerton was not long in convincing his employers that the situation required in Central America the presence of some more adroit detective than had yet been sent there. The difficulty of the case was heightened by the fact that Crawford had established himself in British Honduras, and that the extradition treaty between the United States and England did not then, as it does now, provide for the surrender of criminals guilty of such offenses as that which Crawford was believed to have committed. Crawford could be arrested, therefore, only by being gotten into another country by some clever maneuver. The man best capable of carrying out such a maneuver was Robert Pinkerton himself; and, accordingly, the express company, despite the very considerable expense involved, and fully aware that the result must be uncertain, authorized Mr. Pinkerton to go personally in pursuit of Crawford.

Mr. Pinkerton arrived at Balize, the capital of British Honduras, on February 17, 1890, nearly two years after the date of the robbery. There he learned that Crawford's plantation was about 90 miles down the coast, a little back of Punta Gorda. Punta Gorda lies near the line separating British Honduras from Guatemala, and is not more than a hundred miles from Spanish Honduras, or Honduras proper, directly across the Gulf of Honduras.

Difficulties confronted Mr. Pinkerton from the very start. People were dying about him every day of yellow fever, and when he started for Punta Gorda on a little steamer, the engineer came aboard looking as yellow as saffron, and immediately began to vomit, so that he had to be taken ashore. Then the engine broke down several times on the voyage, and the heat was insufferable.

As the boat steamed slowly into Punta Gorda it passed a small steam craft loaded with bananas. "Look," said one of the passengers to Mr. Pinkerton, not aware of the nature of Mr. Pinkerton's mission, "there goes Crawford's launch now."

Landing at once, the detective waited for the launch to come to shore, which it presently did. The first man to come off was Marvin Crawford, whom Mr. Pinkerton recognized from a description, although he had never seen him. Then he saw Edward Crawford step off, dressed smartly in a white helmet hat, a red sash, a fine plaited linen shirt, blue trousers, patent-leather shoes, and so on. Mr. Pinkerton approached and held out his hand.

"I don't remember you," said Crawford; but his face went white.

"You used to know me in New York when I examined you before the bank officials," said the detective, pleasantly.

Crawford smiled in a sickly way and said: "Oh, yes; I remember you now."

Mr. Pinkerton explained that he had traveled 5,000 miles to talk with him about the stolen money package. Crawford expressed willingness to furnish any information he could, and invited Mr. Pinkerton to go up to his plantation, where they could talk the matter over more comfortably. Seeing that his best course was to humor Crawford, Mr. Pinkerton consented, though realizing that he thus put himself in Crawford's power.

II.

They went aboard Crawford's launch and steamed up the river, a very narrow, winding stream, arched quite over through most of its length by the thick tropical foliage, and in some parts so deep that no soundings had yet found bottom. The plantation was entirely inaccessible by land on account of impassable swamps, and the crooked course of the river made it a journey of 23 miles from Punta Gorda, although in a straight line it was only six miles away.

Mr. Pinkerton was surprised at the unpretentious character of the house, which was built of cane and palm stocks and roofed with palm branches. Originally it had been one large room, but it was now divided by muslin sheeting into two rooms, one at either end, with a hall in the middle. Almost the first thing Mr. Pinkerton noticed on entering was a fireproof safe standing in the hall. It was of medium size and seemed to be new. He knew he was powerless, under the laws of the country, to search the safe, but he made up his mind that while he was in the house he would keep his eyes as much as possible upon it. That night he did not sleep for watching. But Crawford did not go near the safe until the next morning, when he went to get out some account-books. While the door was open Mr. Pinkerton saw only a small bag of silver inside, but he felt sure from Crawford's manner that there was a larger amount of money there.

Mr. Pinkerton remained at the plantation for 48 hours. On the second day he had a long interview with Crawford, questioning him in the greatest detail as to his connection with the robbery. Crawford persisted in denying that he had had any connection with it, or had any knowledge as to what had become of the stolen money. Argue as he would, Mr. Pinkerton could not beat down the stubbornness of his denials. All direct approaches failing, at last he tried indirection. He spoke of Burke, the absconding state treasurer of Louisiana, who, along with a number of other American lawbreakers, had fled to Central America. "Burke had a level head, hadn't he?" said he.

"How do you mean?" asked Crawford.

"Why, in going to Spanish Honduras. You know the United States has no extradition treaty there under which we could bring back a man who has absconded for embezzlement or grand larceny. Burke is as safe there as if he owned the whole country."

"Is that so?" said Crawford, looking significantly at his brother Marvin, who was present.

"Yes," said Mr. Pinkerton, "it is. I only wish the fellow would come up here into British Honduras; then we might do something with him."

Here the subject was dropped.

Next Mr. Pinkerton exhibited to Crawford a sealed letter written by James G. Blaine and addressed to the chief magistrate of British Honduras pointing to the seals of the state department to assure Crawford of the letter's genuineness, and hinting mysteriously at the use he proposed making of this document and at the probable effect that would follow its delivery.

With this the interview closed, and Mr. Pinkerton announced his intention of going back to Punta Gorda. Crawford had practically told him to do his worst, and he had not concealed his intention of doing it. Nevertheless their relations continued outwardly pleasant, and Mr. Pinkerton was treated with the hospitality that is usual in tropical countries. He saw no sign of any disposition on the part of either of the Crawfords to do him harm, but he kept his revolvers always ready, and gave them no chance to catch him napping.

Toward evening of the second day Crawford and his brother got the launch ready, and took Mr. Pinkerton down the river back to Punta Gorda, where they said good-by. At parting Crawford made a brave show of treating the whole matter lightly. "I may see you in New York in a couple of months," he said to the detective as they shook hands.

"If you see me in New York," said Mr. Pinkerton, "you will see yourself under arrest."

On landing, Mr. Pinkerton proceeded, with all the obviousness possible, to call at the house of the British magistrate, which was so situated that Crawford from the launch could not fail to see him enter. This seems to have confirmed the impression he had been striving to create, that British Honduras, though in truth a perfect refuge for a criminal like Crawford, was none. Crawford, apparently thoroughly frightened, and thinking he had not an hour to lose, steamed back in all haste to his plantation, gathered together, as subsequently appeared, his money and other valuables, and then, under cover of night, dropped down the river again, put out to sea forthwith, and crossed the Bay of Honduras to Puerto Cortes, in Spanish Honduras, the country of all Central America in which Mr. Pinkerton preferred to have him. In short, Mr. Pinkerton's stratagem had worked perfectly.

Mr. Pinkerton's reason for wishing to get Crawford into Spanish Honduras was not because the treaty arrangements were more favorable there than in British Honduras, but because the Pinkerton agency enjoyed unusual personal relations with the Honduras government. Several years before, when President Bogram had in contemplation the federation of Central American states under one government, he had applied to the Pinkerton agency for reliable detectives for secret service work. In consequence of this the present head of the Honduras secret force was no other than a former Pinkerton employe who had been recommended by the New York office to the Honduras government, and upon whom Mr. Pinkerton knew he could rely absolutely. Another man equally disposed to favor him was Mr. Bert Cecil, a member of the cabinet, and at the head of the telgraph service, and thus in a position to render most valuable service in the apprehension of Crawford.

As soon as Mr. Pinkerton learned of Crawford's flight, he hurried in pursuit, crossing the bay to Livingston, in Guatemala. In so doing he risked his life, first by putting out to sea in a little dory, and then by trusting his safety to a treacherous Carib boatman, who, when they were several miles out, evinced a strong disposition to take possession of the detective's overcoat, in order, as he explained with a cunning look, to turn its silk lining into a pair of trousers. At this, Mr. Pinkerton carelessly produced his revolver, which had a quieting effect upon the fellow, and the voyage was completed in safety. But soon after landing Mr. Pinkerton suffered an attack of fever, and being warned by the doctors to return to a northern latitude, he got the government machinery in motion for the apprehension of Crawford, had photographs of the former bank messenger spread broadcast through the country, and then having cabled the New York bureau to send responsible detectives to take his place, he sailed for New Orleans.

Mr. Pinkerton was succeeded in Central America by Detective George H. Hotchkiss, one of the best men in the country, who arrived in Balize on the 18th of March. A telegram from Pinkerton's former employe, now chief of the secret police in Honduras, informed him that Crawford had been seen in San Pedro, Spanish Honduras, on the previous Saturday, and was being closely pursued by Spanish soldiers accompanied by Pinkerton men. Hotchkiss sailed at once for Puerto Cortes, where he learned from the American vice consul, Dr. Ruez, that Crawford had left San Pedro hastily the previous Monday night. On further investigation the detective discovered that a San Francisco bully and former prize fighter, "Mike" Neiland, had called at Crawford's boarding house on Monday, and warned him that detectives were pursuing him from Puerto Cortes on a hand-car. Neiland had pretended to be Crawford's friend, and said he would keep him out of the hands of the detectives. Crawford, very much frightened, grabbed up some of his luggage and left the house with Neiland. It was generally believed that Neiland had designs on Crawford's money, and would not hesitate to kill him, if need were, in order to get it.

Hotchkiss immediately requested Mr. Bert Cecil, at Tegucigalpa, the capital, to cover all telegraphic points, and, if possible, have Crawford and his companion arrested on some trivial charge. The day after he reached San Pedro, on March 22, he received a telegram saying that Crawford and Neiland had been arrested and taken before the governor at Santa Barbara. They had been searched, and about $32,000 had been found on Crawford's person. The money was in old and worn bills that in every way resembled those in the stolen package. Whether they were the identical bills or not it was impossible to say, as the bank had not recorded the numbers.

On receipt of this news, Hotchkiss, accompanied by Jack Hall, a guide, set out across the country for Santa Barbara. The journey was accomplished, but only after the most terrible suffering and many privations and dangers. Moreover, the fever got its deadly clutches upon Detective Hotchkiss; and when he had finally dragged himself into Santa Barbara, he cabled the New York office: "Crawford and money held for extradition. Am sick. Cannot remain. Coming on steamer Tuesday. My associate takes charge."

Before sailing for New Orleans Detective Hotchkiss had an interview with Crawford, in the presence of the Spanish officials, and obtained from him a written confession of his guilt. While admitting that he had been a party to the robbery, the absconder tried to lessen his own crime by declaring that the plan to plunder the bank had been suggested to him by two men, named Brown and Bowen, whom he had met accidentally on a railway train in New York, and with whom he had afterward become very friendly. These men had taken him to Brown's house on Thirty-eighth street, somewhere between Eighth and Ninth avenues (Crawford could not locate the place more precisely), and introduced him to a fine-looking woman presented as Mrs. Brown, who was also in the conspiracy. They told him that he was earning very little money for a man in such a responsible position, and that he might easily make a fortune if he would put his interests in their hands and be guided by their advice.

The outcome of several conversations was a plan to get possession of a valuable money package on some day when Crawford should know a large sum was to be sent away from the bank. He claimed that on the day of the robbery one of his fellow-conspirators, Bowen, followed behind himself and Earle after they entered the Adams express offices, and managed to substitute a bogus package for the real one while the two messengers were going up the stairs. He did not make this attempt until he saw the bank detective, McDougal, turn back up Broadway. Crawford said that he managed it so as to precede Earle in going up the stairs, which gave Bowen, who was standing at the first turn, in the shadow, an opportunity to open the satchel and quickly make the substitution. Crawford declared that the conspirators gave him only $2,500 as his share of the booty, although promising him more. This sum he put in two envelopes and sent to his aunt, the one to whom he afterward intrusted the package supposed to contain gloves.

Crawford stated further that Brown and Bowen, having been forced to flee the country, sent him word from Paris, some time later, in a letter written by Mrs. Brown, that the greater part of the stolen money had been buried in a flower bed in the southeast corner of a yard on West Thirty-eighth street, and asked him to dig it up and send it to them. A remarkable fact in this connection is that the yard referred to on West Thirty-eighth street belonged to the house of the friend and benefactor with whom Crawford was living at the time of the robbery.

The Summer Coiffure.

The midsummer fashions in hairdressing shows a more marked departure from the pompadour than was apparent during the winter, says Harper's Bazar, though there is still a suspicion of it in the soft arrangement of the hair over the head; but the tendency is now to flatten the hair over the forehead and widen it at the sides, and to give a full chignon effect at the back. Ribbon bands are run through the soft front hair for all dress occasions, and in consequence a shell ribbon needle for drawing it through the hair is now considered a necessity of a complete outfit.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Congressman Fowler pretends to be deeply concerned lest the voters of the Fifth district reject his candidacy for re-election, and instead send a Democrat to the House of Representatives who would not uphold the hands of Mr. Taft, the supposition of the Jerseyman being that the Ohio gentleman will be elected. If we remember correctly, it was this same Mr. Fowler who went through the Fifth district proclaiming it to be a patriotic duty to vote for him, because President Roosevelt needed his support in Congress. If our memory is not again at fault, it was a gentleman of just about Mr. Fowler's size and make-up—and named Mr. Fowler, too—who fought Mr. Roosevelt's policies in Congress everytime last winter that he could find time to tear himself away from this quarry business up in Vermont, which, let it be noted, wasn't any too often. Wonder if it could be the same Mr. Fowler? —Trenton True American.

Baseball and General Sports

NEWARK NEEDS THAT ORANGE GAME BADLY

With Plainfield's record of seven wins and two defeats, giving one more victory than the Newark team has in the State league baseball to date, supporters of both teams are awaiting with keenest interest the decision of the league committee about the Newark-Orange game at Orange, Saturday, July 25. If this game is awarded to Orange, as Umpire Patten insists that it ought to be, Plainfield has a good lead in the pennant race which should definitely settle Newark in second place. Should the Newarkers be awarded victory, the local team will be tied for first place with the Newarkers.

"Pop" McDeavitt, the grey-haired manager-coach of the Newark nine, who made such fun for the fans at Crescent Oval Saturday, expressed himself in no uncertain terms about the Orange game after the whitewash last week. "You can bet every cent you've got that we'll put in a strong protest for that Orange game. That game is coming to us, if those three innings of baseball are judged a game by the baseball committee. I don't think our boys were so wrong in leaving the field. It was raining cats and dogs, you know, and they have a grass diamond over there at Orange. We could have played for an hour, if the rain had stopped.

"Sure we'll kick for what's coming to us, and I don't see how the league committee can award that game to Orange. If they do, you can take it from me that there'll be no Newark team in the Y. M. C. A. State league next year."

Manager G. L. Listman, of the Y. M. C. A. team, who is chairman of the league committee, is due back from his vacation the last of this week, and the decision about the game will be reached at a meeting to be held within a few days after his return. L. M. Smith, of Newark, and R. Zearfoss, of Passaic, are the other members of the committee.

The game in question was interrupted by a shower in the third inning and Umpire Patten called time. The players went into the stand for shelter, and in a little while it stopped raining. The umpire called the teams out on the diamond again, but several of the Newark players, it is said, had dressed and left the field, so that the game could not be continued. There was no score. Umpire Patten declared the game forfeited to Orange.

CHAUFFEUR SHAW IS ALSO A VICTIM.

Second Death Due to Accident at Railroad Crossing in Bogota.

Robert Shaw, the chauffuer in charge of the auto that was crushed by a Susquehanna and Western train at the Bogota crossing Sunday night, died in the Hackensack Hospital yesterday afternoon. His skull was fractured at the base of the brain and he never regained consciousness. He was 26 years old and was married about six weeks ago. His wife and parents were at his bedside when he died, the latter coming from Ithaca. Shaw was joint owner with Thomas Hughes of the Paterson garage to which the auto belonged.

Donald Holmes, the young Paterson lawyer, who was killed outright in the accident, will be buried today. Coroner Curry has decided not to hold the inquest until Prosecutor Koester returns from his vacation two weeks hence. Dr. James Curs and Wallace Paul, who were injured in the wreck, are reported out of danger in the Hackensack Hospital.

EDISON SILENT ON RESIGNATION TALK.

Will Neither Deny Nor Confirm Rumor That He Will Withdraw from Active Business.

A rumor to the effect that Thomas A. Edison would withdraw from active work in connection with the West Orange works of the Edison Phonograph Company and would spend the time resting and traveling was circulated yesterday. Mr. Edison would not either confirm or deny the rumor, simply saying:

"I have nothing to say."

Mr. Miller, who is manager for the Phonograph Company, said that, so far as he knew, there was nothing in the story, and that, although he was not authorized to make any official statement, he was inclined to doubt the truth of the rumor.

This is not the first time that stories of friction at the works have been circulated. At one time there was said to be trouble because of the discharge of several men at the personal instance of Mr. Edison, but nothing ever came of it.

Mr. Edison is now 62, and the wish of his friends that he rest may have been father to the thought in this latest report.

Body Still Unclaimed.

Though diligent inquiry has been made, no relatives or friends have been found of Abram McLellan, who was killed at Westfield Monday morning. The body is still at Cole's undertaking rooms and unless it is claimed by this afternoon it will be buried at county expense.

BRONSON HOWARD DIES AT AVON INN.

End Comes for Famous Play-wright After Year's Illness With Heart Trouble.

Avon-by-the-Sea, Aug. 5.—Bronson Howard, the playwright, died yesterday afternoon at the Avon Inn here, of heart trouble. Death followed a year's illness, and though sudden, was not entirely unexpected. Mrs. Howard and Dr. Whitney Waterman, Mr. Howard's nephew, were at the bedside when death came. Mr. and Mrs. Howard have been at the Inn here since June 25.

Mr. Howard was greatly benefited during the first few weeks of his stay, but recently had failed rapidly. Funeral services will be held at Dr. Waterman's cottage here on Thursday, and interment will be in a vault pending the removal of the body to Detroit.

Jersey City Civil Service Lags.

Jersey City, Aug. 5.—Contrary to expectation the ordinance providing for the acceptance of the civil service law was not introduced last night at the meeting of the Board of Aldermen. It was explained that Corporation Council Dixon had not prepared the ordinance. There is no opposition to it and it will in all probability be ready in time for the next meeting of the board.

Netherwood Camp Services.

Daniel Loizeaux will lead the meeting at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp tonight. Last night the service was in charge of James F. Parker.

—Charles P. Brewin has resigned his position at M. A. Brown's cleaning establishment and will start in a similar line of business for himself on August 22.

VOTING MACHINES GOING

Sixty-six Elections Leave Only 177 of the 361 Placed About the State.

118 ELECTIONS TO COME.

Only One District Has Thus Far Voted to Retain Machine—Secretary of State's Power.

Under the Holcombe voting machine referendum law passed by the last Legislature sixty-six elections have already been held on the question of the retention or rejection of the machines. In sixty-five of the elections the vote was in favor of excluding the machines, so that in those election districts hereafter they cannot be used. One election district, that of Mannington township, Salem county, voted to retain the mechanical voter.

Between now and September 3 approximately 118 other elections upon this question are scheduled to take place. Under the law no election on the voting machines can be held, so that September 3 is the last date this year for voting on the question, Election Day being November 3. The total number of voting machines in use in this State is 361. With sixty-six elections already held and others scheduled in 118 districts, only 177 machines are left in election districts wherein no petitions for an election have been filed.

The districts in which elections are to be held follow: Forty in Newark, seven in Passaic, eleven in Paterson, ten in Jersey City, ten in Orange, one in West Orange, five in East Orange, four in Camden, two in Kearny, one in Upper Freehold township, two in Freehold, one in Summit, two in Bound Brook, two in Washington, two in Red Bank and four in Long Branch. It is said in the office of the Secretary of State that only about 40 per cent. of last fall's vote, on the average, participated in voting machine balloting.

Although under the new law a municipality may reject its voting machines, the Secretary of State, who has charge of them, is not required to remove them. At least, that is the opinion now held, but the advice of the Attorney-General is to be sought on this point.

It is the purpose of the Secretary of State to leave in the municipalities where they now stand the machines that have been rejected, although, of course, they cannot be used in voting. The voting machine law puts the expense of caring for and insuring the machines upon the municipalities where they are located, and the Holcombe law made no change in this provision. Thus, under the decision of the Secretary of State those municipalities which have rejected the machines will still have to stand the expense of taking care of them.

In six districts from which the Secretary of State has already removed the machines elections were held, notwithstanding the fact that they had been taken away. These districts were in Millville, Clayton, Woodbury and Vineland. Twelve machines have been withdrawn from Jersey City, but an election on their retention or rejection will be held on September 2.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH ILL.

Suffering from Vertigo, but His Condition Is Said Not to Be Serious.

Bishop John Scarborough of the New Jersey Diocese, who is staying at Avon-by-the-Sea with his daughter, Mrs. Gummere, of Trenton, has been slightly ill, suffering at times from vertigo. Accounts of his illness have spread among his friends and members of the church throughout New Jersey, and for a time it was believed that the Bishop's condition was serious.

Bishop Scarborough's attacks of vertigo continue, but he attended the Episcopal church at Avon-by-the-Sea last Sunday.

Mrs. Higgins Surprised On Birthday.

Mrs. John Higgins, of Codington avenue, was tendered a pleasant birthday surprise party, Tuesday, when many of her friends and neighbors called in the course of the afternoon to extend felicitations. The day's mail brought her sixty souvenir postal cards from others who could not be present at the anniversary celebration. In the course of the afternoon, the guests were served with refreshments. Mrs. Higgins' daughter, Mrs. John Hummer, arranged the affair.

May Purchase Jackson Building.

Negotiations are underway between Morris Abrams and James Jackson whereby the former may purchase the Jackson building at Front street and Madison avenue. The deal may possibly be closed in a few days.

PLAINFIELDER NEAREST KIN TO BRONSON HOWARD

Mrs. Walter Bernard Maynard, of Evergreen avenue, a niece; Dr. Whitney Waterman, of Avon-by-the-Sea, and Howard Waterman, of Chicago, nephews, are the nearest relatives of Bronson Howard, the dean of playwrights, who died at Avon Inn, Avon-by-the-Sea, Tuesday, from heart trouble. When inquiry was made at the home of Mrs. Maynard today regarding Mr. Howard's death, it was learned that she was ill in bed and could not be seen. She has been a resident of this city for several years and has always been in close touch with her uncle.

Mr. Howard was sixty-seven years old, and has ranked as the "dean" of the playwrights' guild in this country. It may also be said of him that he was the father of the modern or so-called "drawing-room" drama in America. The production of his "Banker's Daughter" really marked an epoch in American stagecraft. Here was the intense, philosophic drama based upon real American social existence. It was pure comedy in the best sense of the term.

Of the same character were his "Aristocracy" and "Young Mrs. Winthrop." The latter was pure drawing-room drama, with all the scenes laid in drawing-rooms and all the characters belonging to the recognized upper social set of New York. Before Howard, the American stage was compelled to depend upon English dramatists for society drama. Secure in his own position, Mr. Howard devoted the latter years of his life to encouraging young playwrights.

The funeral services were held from Dr. Watersman's residence at Avon, today, and the burial will be at Detroit.

GETTING READY TO OIL TWO THOROUGHFARES

Work preparatory to treating North and Park avenues with a preparation intended to preserve the macadam and keep the dust down, is now being done under the direction of City Engineer A. J. Gavett. It is the intention to treat Park avenue first and that thoroughfare between Fourth street and Randolph road will probably be included in the section to be improved. Tarvia will be put on Park avenue and one of the necessary things in using this preparation is to have the street thoroughly cleaned so that the preparation can be spread on as much of the stone as possible.

The use of asphalt oilene on North avenue, it is said, will not necessitate so much preliminary care. It is the intention of the councilmanic street committee to give both preparations a fair trial so that it will be able to decide without any question which is the best. There has been some criticism of the use of the patent material, owing to what is claimed to be a disagreeable smell after it is spread on the roadway, but on the other hand in communities where it has been in use for long periods it is said that the odor is not at all objectionable, while it does serve to keep the dust down and at the same time preserve the macadam.

There is a growing sentiment here that if either one of the preparations prove thoroughly satisfactory, it would be economy for the city to treat all the principal thoroughfares with it and do away with street sprinkling by water which is recognized as an expensive way of ridding the city of the dust nuisance in the summer.

The asphalt oilene, which is to be used on North avenue as well as the Tarvia for Park avenue, arrived this week, although the preparations are made by two different concerns and the orders were given several months apart.

The company which makes asphalt oilene will put that preparation on North avenue, while the work on Park avenue is to be done by the street gang under the direction of Engineer Gavett.

The composition which has been used on West Eighth street in front of Mrs. Rufus Lincoln's residence is said to be giving excellent satisfaction and no disagreeable odor is noticed, that is not sufficient to be objectionable. There is considerable travel at that point, especially on the part of automobiles, and the surface of the road is as smooth as a board floor and has somewhat the apeparance of being painted. The preparation used there is made by the Standard Oil Company and was put on through the use of a sprinkling wagon furnished by the street department. Mr. Gavett is much pleased with the result of it and is quite enthusiastic over the prospect of solving the perplexing dust problem.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Ferry, of Lafayette place, have returned from a visit with friends at Peapack.

SOMERSET POLITICAL POT

Democratic Leaders to Hold Conference When Alvah A. Clark Returns Next Week.

THEY WANT HIM TO RUN.

Lots of Material For Both Assembly and County Clerk Nominations in the Democratic Camp.

Shortly after former Congressman Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, returns from the Thousand Islands early next week, something definite will be learned as to the probable Democratic ticket in Somerset county for strong pressure will be brought by his friends to obtain his consent for his nomination for State Senator. Notwithstanding that it is Presidential year, the Democrats believe that they have a chance in Somerset and particularly so if Mr. Clark will get in the field against Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for the State Senate.

Plans have been made for a conference of the county leaders to be held at Mr. Clark's home immediately on his return. If he should refuse to become a candidate, it is said that his friends will support Col. Nelson Y. Dungan. According to some of his close political lieutenants, there is fear that some of the leaders might take the opportunity to "stab him in the back" in revenge for his alleged dictatorial policy in recent years. There is another possible candidate in the person of former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, but as yet he has declined to announce himself.

There are a number of candidates for the Assembly nomination, including Runyon Field, of Bound Brook; Charles M. Hoagland, of Franklin township; Charles Acken, of Liberty Corner, and W. J. Logan, of Bridgewater township. Mr. Field is said to have a particularly strong following and if Mr. Clark comes out for Senator, he will be the probable nominee for Assembly it is reported.

For county clerk Freeholder T. E. Gibson, of Franklin township, appears to have developed the most strength. Others mentioned for this honor include former Mayor R. H. Brokaw, of Bound Brook, and County Collector E. B. Allen, of Somerville.

JOHN NEAGLE SUPPLIES JULY WEATHER REPORT.

While July furnished the hottest weather experienced in the same month for the past seven years, it was also notable for other peculiarities, including a series of seven thunder storms, a hail storm, and the katydids made their appearance on the 27th. The mean temperature was 0.8 degrees above the normal, while the precipitation was 1.09 inches below the normal.

Highest temperature, 100 degrees, date 12th; lowest temperature, 50 degrees, dates, 9th and 17th; mean temperature, 75.3; normal temperature, 74.5; mean maximum, 87.3; mean minimum, 63.3; number of times above 90 degrees, 10; greatest daily range, 37; total precipitation, 5.00 inches; normal precipitation, 6.09 inches; greatest amount in 24 hours, 1.19 inches, and of this amount 1.10 inches fell in ninety minutes on July 3; number of days of .01 or more of precipitation, 12; number of days clear, 12; partly cloudy, 16; cloudy, 3; dates of thunder storms, 3, 4, 12, 14, 22, 23, 24; date of hail, 12th, size of pea.

OWING BOROUGH HIS FINE, MONCTON GETS SIXTY DAYS.

Brought before Borough Recorder Dolliver for the third time within two weeks on the charge of raising a disturbance while in an intoxicated condition, Frank Moncton, who holds the borough record for booze consumption, was today sentenced to sixty days in the county jail, and was taken to Somerville this afternoon by Chief Marshal Weiss. Moncton was released from a borough court cell Monday upon his promise to pay $15, exxacted from him as a fine for raising a furore on Somerset street Saturday. The Recorder told Moncton he could pay the fine in two equal installments, and his first payment would have been due Saturday night.

Chief Weiss found the man preparing to take a nap on the sidewalk at Greenbrook road and Somerset street yesterday afternoon and escorted him to the lock-up. At his hearing today, he was even more penitent than usual, but the memory of the unpaid fine, as well as his bad record discounted all promises for the future.

LARGEST EXCURSION OF YEAR FROM HERE

Two sections of twelve coaches each were required to take the 1,500 members and friends of Watchung Council, Kights of Columbus, to Asbury Park, this morning. Although the weather was threatening during the early morning hours, and in fact up to the time that the excursionists were to leave Plainfield, a big crowd turned out and there was no trouble at all in filling the twenty-four coaches. It is the first excursion of the Knights of Columbus and promises to be a success. Nearly 800 free tickets were given to children.

The first section was in charge of Conductor Flanagan and Engineer Dunham, while Conductor Harry Dodwell and Engineer William Curry were in charge of the second section. The first section left here about 8:15 on time, but it was fifteen minutes later before the second section got away, and just as the train was disappearing from view a family of six arrived at the station too late to get aboard. They were certainly a disappointed lot of people, but they afterward planned to spend the day at another summer resort.

RELATIVES AND FRIENDS TENDER BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Mrs. Elizabeth Vroom, of West Second street, was tendered a birthday surprise party by twenty relatives and friends last night. The affair was arranged by her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Alexander, and Mrs. Damelie, and provided enjoyment for the guests for several hours. Dancing was a feature of the informal program during which a prize waltz was held. It was won by Miss Alice Bohrer and Herbert Vroom. Refreshments were served at a late hour. Mrs. Vroom received numerous appropriate presents in honor of the occasion.

Among those in attendance were John Macks, of Wilkesbarre, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Camarck, Mr. and Mrs. John Bushek and Professor Everton, of New York; Miss Fannie Chador, of Yonkers; William Wilson, of Jersey City; Mrs. G. Wagner, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Alexander, Joseph V. Giddes, George Wenzel, Miss Alice Bohrer, Warren Vroom, Roy Vroom and Herbert Vroom.

LOSES AN EYE.

Pond Employe Has to Have Optic Removed Through Piece of Steel Getting Into It.

Jonas Stranberg, an employe at the Pond Tool Works who resides on West Fourth street, underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital Tuesday for the removal of an eye. A piece of steel became imbedded in the optic three weeks ago and repeated efforts on the part of physicians failed to reveal it. He finally went to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary where an X-ray examination showed that steel imbedded in the back part of the eye ball but the nerve had become so badly affected that he was threatened with total blindness.

Stranberg returned to Plainfield and as a last resort the eye had to be removed in order to save the sight in the other one. The operation was performed by Dr. Ard. Stranberg is a young man and was married last August.

Lightning Smashes Glass; No Fire.

The lightning bolt accompanying the cannon crash of thunder at shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon struck the tower of Samuel D. Lounsbery's house, at 302 East Seventh street, shivering eight large plate-glass windows and reducing the frames to splinters. A neighbor telephoned an alarm to fire headquarters, but the firemen found no flames upon their arrival, although the cornice was scorched in several places. Mr. Lounsbery is with his family at Avon, and was notified of the accident by telegraph. The loss will reach $100.

Mr. Peck Soon to Sail for Home.

Rev. Arthur S. Peck, former rector of St. Stephen's church, will sail from Europe Thursday, August 21, and will stay in this city for a few days previous to assuming his new charge as curate of the church of St. Edward the Martyr, in New York city. Rev. E. W. Neil, rector of the church, died suddenly yesterday from the effects of the heat.

Mayor Townsend Home.

Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, was in his office in the borough this morning, having returned last night on a flying visit home for the meeting of the North Plainfield Council tomorrow night. Mr. Townsend was at Cascade, N. Y., where he and his wife are registered at the Cascade Lakes Hotel. He will return to the resort Saturday.

The Misses Edith and Ruth Winckler, of Asbury Park, have returned after a two weeks' sojourn with relatives in the borough.

A BAD CASE OF "RAMS"

Ending Up a Spree, Eugene Sutton, Gets Some Wild Ideas in His Head.

MAKES APPEAL TO COPS.

Rushes Into Police Headquarters and Begs Sergeant Overbaugh to Keep "Dutch" Ides from Killin; Him.

Affairs over at police headquarters on Sycamore street were in a peaceful state of quietness at 9 o'clock last night, when a young man, disheveled in appearance and panting for breath, burst into the reception room in front.

"Say," he yelled to Sergeant Overbaugh, who was behind the desk, "call him off, will you?"

"Call who off?" queried the Sarge.

"Why, Dutch Ides, the bandit. He's been running me around town for the last week and swears he'll put a bullet in me. I can't stand it any longer. Head him off, will you, Cap?"

"Sure," said "Cap," but at the same time he was figuring out the best way to handle the applicant. Being aware that "Dutch" Ides was killed by a policeman's bullet seven months ago he knew the man in front of him was either bug-house or had an awful case of the "rams," the term the cops apply to delirium tremens. He circled around him a moment or two and then by asserting that the best way to escape Ides was to get in the "cyclone cellar," he got the young man back to a cell.

Another officer coming in later took a look at the prisoner and discovered him to be Eugene Sutton, a local machinist who was before Judge Runyon a couple of weeks ago on a drunk and disorderly charge. He was arrested by Patrolman Nolan after he had deposited himself in a chair on Theodore Pruden's front porch at midnight and then rocked himself through a window. He talked rational at times, last night, but it became apparent that he had been drinking heavily and he was kept locked up.

Sutton was brought into court this morning and while he seemed to be all right, he suddenly began asking for "part of the money that was coming to him." Judge Runyon failed to grasp what he was driving at and the young man replied that the judge of the court at Easton, Pa., had sent $40 down to Chief Kiely to be kept for him until he called.

"That's what I came around here for last night," he said, "I needed a shave so I thought I'd come over and get the money."

This rambling talk was enough to convince the magistrate that Sutton was off in the head and he told him so in plain terms. He was busy trying to figure out whether it was a real case of missing buttons or rumdum when the prisoner suddenly pulled himself together and acknowledged that he had been drinking so hard of late he had lost his bearings.

"Well I should say you had," was the judge's comment; and let me tell you one thing right now, Sutton. You either cut out the rum and get sobered up or the next time I'll have you examined mentally for possible shipment to Morris Plains. You don't want that, do you?"

"Great Snakes, no," was the reply; "I'll try hard to leave the stuff alone."

"Well, you'd better," he was told, "because anyone who thinks that he is being pursued by a man dead and buried for seven months isn't fit to be at large. You can go now but keep Morris Plains in mind."

Sutton lives on West Front street and is said to be one of the best machinists in town. He has a habit of going on periodical sprees and last night's hallucination came at the close of a bad one. He is about thirty-two years old.

Cycling to Chicago.

En route to Chicago on a bicycle trip, Mr. and Mrs. John Ennis, of New York city, spent last night here at the end of their first day's ride. The couple will pedal leisurely, and said that they intend to make no record speed or endurance runs during the trip. They started toward New Brunswick this morning at 8 o'clock.

Edward A. Laing to Wed.

Announcement was made today of the engagement of Edward A. Laing, son of Mrs. Voorhees Laing, of East Front street, and Miss Bertha Brewer, of the borough. The wedding will take place early in the fall. Mr. Laing is one of the successful young merchants of the city, being engaged as a newspaper and stationery dealer.

New Store.

F. M. Masker, of Watchung avenue, has commenced the erection of a store, 20x40 feet, at Watchung avenue and East Fifth street.

P. S. C. EMPLOYEE IS OVERCOME BY HEAT

William Koghan, aged 30 years, who claims Chicago as his native city, and who started to work this morning for the Public Service Corporation on the large gas-holder being erected on Watchung avenue, was overcome with the heat during the morning and was found lying in the gutter at Watchung avenue and Second street by Patrolman Charles Flynn. He was assisted off the public thoroughfare.

In the meantime the ambulance was summoned, despite Koghan's objection, he claiming that he would be all right in a few minutes. He was removed to the hospital and given the proper remedies and he will be able to leave the institution some time today.

Koghan is a boiler maker by trade and is a mechanic above the average ability. He told the hospital authorities that he left his home in Chicago several weeks ago, his destination being New York. He reached Plainfield yesterday and at once got a job with the Public Service Corporation on the gas-holder now being erected. The man also admitted that possibly he had a few drinks too many and this may have had something to do with his illness.

MASTER BUILDERS HOLD A SUCCESSFUL OUTING

Combining relaxation with an opportune time for an exchange of ideas, the Master Builders' Association, of Plainfield and vicinity, conducted an all day outing and clam bake, yesterday. The affair was held in Krausse's grove on Johnson's drive, and was attended by 100 members of the organization and their friends. The surroundings were ideal for such an occasion, although the spot was somewhat hard to reach, while the weather remained pleasant until the program was completed.

The association members and their guests assembled about noon and while Erwin Y. Neighbor, of Timbo's, and a corps of assistants were busy getting the bake in shape, an informal program of sports was carried out. A feature of this end of the outing was a tug-of-war between two teams made up of painters and plumbers. There were eight men on a side and while the opinion prevailed that the plumbers had the best of the three heats, the painters declare the result was a big victory for them. The teams were made up as follows: Painters, Howard Woolston, anchor; Clarence W. Mundy, Harry Moulton Thomas Eganey, Harold Hansen, James Hansen, Alfred Luthman and Charles Rice; plumbers, George J. Tobin, anchor; J. J. Leahy, Nicholas Cody, Fred Masker, I. L. McVoy, Dan Hogan, William Mills and P. J. Neylon.

Another feature of the sports was a baseball game between teams representing the same crafts. Nine reputable bystanders assert on their solemn oaths that the painters won by a score of 5 to 4. The plumbers derived a lot of glory through a three base hit by John Leahy and superior fielding by Alex Milne. The two sides lined up as follows: Painters, Eganey, p; Mundy, c; Woolston, 1b; Townley, ss; Moulton, 3b; J. Hansen, 2b; Hansen, lf; Woolston, rf; Buckle, cf. Plumbers, Neylon, p; Keiderling, c; Milne, 1b; Laing, 2b; Leahy, ss; Cody, lf; Harper, rf; Wahl, 3b; Apgar, cf. Harry Moulton, Jr., was umpire.

The first part of the bake was served at 2 o'clock and Chef Neighbor did himself proud in getting everything just right. There was excellent chowder, choice roast beef, potato salad, all manner of vegetables and a half a watermelon to every diner. After this had been disposed of there was a respite of a couple of hours and then another serving was announced. It comprised most delicious bluefish, sweet corn and clams, topped off with clam broth. A corps of waiters insured prompt "delivery" and nothing could have been improved upon.

During the intermissions, the members and guests enjoyed quoits, swings, checkers and running and jumping contests. There were also addresses by "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine, Dr. Richard Moldenke, the expert metalurgist, and Andrew Dixon, of Paterson, president of the State Master Builreds' Association.

The affair was arranged and conducted by a committee composed of C. W. Krausse, Philip Jahn, Walter Apgar, David Dunavan, Charles Rice, L. B. Woolston and John Abbott. Besides donating the grove for the purpose, Mr. Krausse devoted the greater part of the day to looking after the welfare of everybody and is entitled to the lion's share of credit for the success of the outing.

HARD TIMES EXPLANATION

Dr. Moldenke, Authority on Industrial Problems, Gives Reason for Conditions.

PROSPERITY IS FAR DISTANT.

Expert Gets Down to the Root of the Matter and Tells Causes of the Trouble.

Before a gathering of representative business men and contractors at the annual outing of the Master Builders Association, yesterday afternoon, Dr. Richard Moldenke, of Watchung, one of the commission recently appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the natural resources of the country, asserted that the present business depression is more than twice as bad as the newspapers have reported and that a return to "good times" will not take place for at least a year.

"The coming election may bring about a betterment," he said, "but I do not look for a full restoration of business and trade affairs until twelve months or so after that. The public press has stated in the past few weeks that fully sixty per cent. of the mills and foundries in Pittsburg have resumed operations but it is not so. I have just returned from an extended western trip and know that only a few of the big plants have opened up on a respectable schedule. It will take a lot of time to improve conditions and when it does come I feel positive that there will be a better understanding between capital and labor."

Continuing his talk, Dr. Moldenke stated that one-half the present trouble has been caused by the United States Steel Corporation. He declared that when a natural slackness in the steel world became manifest, the policy should have been to lower the price of material so that the pig-iron industries could offer better rates and so keep up a normal demand.

"It has been the same way with other products," he continued, "and the shifting in the cost of brass goods is a good example. When copper was high and you went to purchase an article worth fifty cents, you would be charged that much plus a ratio relative to copper's rise. When copper dropped to a quotation about half what it was the previous week, you would still have to pay that fifty cents."

"This shifting in prices was always a matter that Andrew Carnegie studied and to give him full credit it must be said that he governed his rates accordingly. When trade was good and the demand heavy, his charges went up. When the demand fell off his cry was 'keep the mills busy,' and to do so he put the price of steel where cautious buyers would be induced to place their orders. It has been different with the steel corporation. You all have probably heard of the Judge Geary dinners in New York, called by the head of the big concern. The directors met at these affairs and it was while in session that they agreed to keep up prices. The result is apparent everywhere.

In another part of his talk, Dr. Moldenke laid stress on the importance of industrial education in this country. He intimated that the day must come when the fixed scale of prices for workmen will have to undergo a change; in other words, the man who is worth $1.50 a day will get that much and not $4 because circumstances have fixed a certain rate. When a man has a thousand dollars to build a house, he said, and finds that because of recent increases in wages and the cost of material he will have to pay $1,500 for what he expected to get he will simply hold off. As a result, the contractor gets the wrong end of the deal first and then the employe through a lack of work.

Touching upon his recent investigations as a member of President Rosevelt's commission, Dr. Moldenke declared that the waste of the natural resources of the country is but little realized by the people in New Jersey. He stated that the timber supply will only last for thirty years because of the ruthless manner in which it is being cut and that if something is not done to husband the standing timber prices for lumber will soon be prohibitive. The use of cement, he said, is aiding in prolonging the supply. He also told how coal mining is carried on as though the anthracite beds would last forever and how thousands of tons of fuel is wasted.

"It is a common thing in Pennsylvania and West Virginia," he said, "for veins of coal five feet thick to be worked. Perhaps the bottom foot will contain an excess amount of sulphur. Because of the extra cost needed to get this ready for market, the top four feet will be removed

UNION COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT.

In the matter of the application of Otto Grassmann for leave to assume the name of George W. Lawrence. | ORDER.

Otto Grassmann having on the eighteenth day of July, instant, applied to this court by petition, setting forth the grounds of the application and verified by the affidavit of said applicant annexed thereto, for an order to authorize the petitioner to assume another name, to wit, that of George W. Lawrence;

And it appearing to the court by said petition and affidavit, that said Otto Grassmann resides in Roselle, in the County of Union, and State of New Jersey, and that he is more than twenty-one years of age;

And it further appearing to the court that notice of such application has been published at least once in each week for four weeks successively next preceding the time of the said application, in "The Daily Press," a newspaper of said county, and the court being satisfied by said petition so verified that there are reasonable grounds for the proposed change, and that there is no reasonable objection that the petitioner should assume another name; and the matter having been adjourned to today;

It is on this first day of August A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Eight, ordered that Otto Grassmann be and he hereby is authorized to assume the name of George W. Lawrence, from and after the first day of September next, and that within ten days from this date, the said petitioner do cause a copy of this order to be published in "The Daily Press," a public newspaper printed in said county of Union, according to the provisions of the statute in such case made and provided.

On motion of John J. Hubbell,
Attorney of Petitioner.

B. A. VAIL, Judge.

VIGILANTES IN HUDSON.

Will Organize Under Name of Law and Order League.

Jersey City, Aug. 6.—Samuel Wilson, superintendent of the Civic Righteousness Federation, has been getting points from Trenton for the establishing here of a Law and Order League similar to Trenton's.

It is the plan of the federation to issue a call among the various churches throughout the county for 1,000 volunteers to man the movement, and the followers of Mr. Wilson declare that the army will be raised within a week.

Glassblowers Win Wage Scale.

Atlantic City, Aug. 6.—Glassblowers won a victory over the manufacturers at the end of the seven-day conference of their representatives. Working hours are to be the same as last year. Manufacturers, owing to the number of men out of work, allowed another concession in the number of apprentices, which shall be one to fifteen journeymen this year.

Heat Drives Girl to Suicide.

Sarah Mildred, 25 years old, of 98 Jewett avenue, Jersey City, where she was employed, attempted suicide by taking a dose of carbolic acid late last night. She is in the City Hospital in a comatose condition. Members of the family by which she was employed say she had been ill and complained of suffering terribly from the heat.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Falling from a trolley car at Gloucester City early yesterday, Frederick Miller sustained body bruises and was cared for at the Homeopathic Hospital, Camden.

One of the largest funerals ever seen at New Egypt was that of Mrs. Caroline Fischer yesterday. She had been a resident of that vicinity nearly fifty years.

Adjudged guilty of stealing bread from boxes in front of stores, Samuel Bachelor was yesterday sentenced to a month in jail by Recorder Stackhouse, in Camden.

To answer a charge of stealing a diamond from his brother, Edward Mitchener, of 1218 North Eighteenth street, Camden, was held in $500 bail in the Camden Police Court yesterday.

The grist and sawmill belonging to Asher Parker, at Pointville, was destroyed by fire yesterday, while the employes were absent from the building. It is supposed it was fired by the gasoline engine. Loss, $3,000. There was no insurance.

William Urban believed he had scared away the burglars who tried to gain entrance to his home in Frankville by a second-story window, but when he arose yesterday he found they had spent the night in his cellar. Urban thinks the burglars were hungry tramps.

Fire of mysterious origin destroyed the large barns of John Quirk near Point Airy, about two miles from Camden. When the fire was discovered it had such headway that nothing could be saved. One horse was got out, but was badly burned. The loss is about $2,800, partly covered by insurance.

Probably seized with cramps, Harry Hayes, twenty-one years old, of 321 Chestnut street, Camden, was drowned at the river end of Line ditch, in Camden, yesterday afternoon, while swimming. Two men made an unsuccessful effort at rescue, and when the body disappeared from view the police department was notified.

One of the few heat prostrations in the history of Atlantic City terminated fatally last night, when an unknown man, about fifty years of age, died in the City Hospital two hours after being stricken in the street. The stranger, who by his dress was thought to be a mechanic, fell unconscious on Metropolitan avenue, near the beach.

James W. Herman, alias Harry Williams, colored, was taken into custody at Mt. Holly yesterday by Detective Parker, on the receipt of information that he was wanted at Ogontz, Pa., for obtaining $2,000 under false pretenses. Only a short time after Parker received the description and information by mail he saw the negro in the local postoffice, and it did not take him long to locate him at the railroad station.

Having no faith in banks, Michael Moffo, a farmer of Dunbarton, Camden county, carried his money in his trousers pockets until a few days ago, when he fell into a ditch, and $250 became practically glued together. In a frenzy he attempted to pull the notes apart until it was impossible to tell the denomination of them. Yesterday the farmer consulted a lawyer, and an effort will be made to have matters straightened out by the Treasury Department at Washington.

He Was the Parents.

Little Bertram had always longed for a live pet, but as he lived in an apartment building, he had to be satisfied with toy animals.

Later his parents moved to the country and Bertram became the happy possessor of a kitten. He hugged it close and remarked "At last, I am the parents of a living creature!"—Delineator.

Bitten by Vicious Dog.

George Wilson, ex-chief of the Rahway fire department, was badly bitten yesterday by a vicious dog owned by Frank Theberg, of 246 Main street. The dog, a large mastiff, was chained to what is called a trolley wire, to protect Theberg's stable and barn. Wilson was not aware of this.

He Explains.

"John," said the candidate's wife, "you promised me to quit chewing tobacco."

"So I did."

"Then what are those stains around your mouth?"

"That's molasses, dear. I've been kissing babies."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Rain prevented all baseball games in the Connecticut League yesterday.

It is reported that Hickman, of the Cleveland team, has been sold to Toledo, of the American Association.

Ban Johnson declares he will, with the co-operation of club owners and managers, put a stop to betting on American League grounds, even if he has to cause the arrest of the offenders. The practice of betting on games prevails to the greatest extent in Chicago.

Delehanty, second baseman of the Washington American League Club, was suspended indefinitely yesterday by President Ban Johnson, as a result of abusive language used by the player in Tuesday's game, following an adverse decision by O'Loughlin. Otis Clymer, of the same club, suffered the same fate for the same cause.

Frank Chance, manager of the Chicago Nationals, has come out vigorously as an opponent of the "spitball," saying it is hard on catchers, injuring their hands; it causes fielders to make many wild throws; it is repulsive both in name and to the view of spectators, and its abolition would undoubtedly do much to increase batting. A few pitchers would, of course, be practically put out of the game, he says, but all clubs would be reduced to the same level of depending on science and not saliva for victories.

EXCISE IN ELIZABETH.

To what depths a party organ will go in an attempt to make political capital and to discredit the efforts of those who are devoting their time in the interests of their fellow-citizens and the State, is well illustrated in the shameful position of the Elizabeth Times in the excise matter. Instead of doing its duty in helping to rid Elizabeth of its well-earned title of "the rottenest city in the State," so far as the excise condition is concerned, tthat newspaper which circulates to some extent among the brewers, saloonkeepers and the like, seems to pander to that element which scoffs and defies the law of the State regulating the sale of liquor.

Here is but a sample of its vaporings: "The Bishops' law, except for a few praiseworthy provisions, is all but a dead letter in this State. It is laughed at, ridiculed or simply ignored. It is responsible for spasmodic exhibitions of respect for the law, for desultory enforcement for a Sunday or two preceded and followed by long periods of 'wide open' Sundays. Officials say the law cannot be enforced, and the proofs they adduce are of the most substantial kind."

The Times has a penacea of its own, but granted that it is in a better position to solve the problem than those who have made a careful, impartial and thorough study of the matter it shows that it is not in line with the best sentiment of the times when it advocates open saloons on Sundays. "Close them at midnight on Saturday and permit their opening for at least part of the following day," it says. Were the Times to advocate a restoration of the race track, the gambling joints and the like it could not do worse. Open saloons on Sundays means a desecration of the Lord's Day, and a blot on the fair name of the State.

Here is another sample of the campaign of excise education (?) being waged by the Times: "Provide that this law," the one it outlines, "shall remain in force until the people of any municipality shall decide otherwise." That is local option with a vengeance. If the inhabitants of any given community were to revoke its provisions, what then? Would they have the right to establish by ordinance one of their own making, which might be a disgrace to the State?

Yes, Elizabeth is "rotten," as the excise commission has proclaimed, but what is to be expected of it when a newspaper presents such a "rotten" scheme?

James E. Martine, the silver-tongued orator of Union county, is talked of as the Democratic nominee for State Senator. We believe that the genial James has never before been nominated for the office of senator. It is about the only nomination of importance that has escaped him up to this time, and he may be pardoned if he accepts it, because office-seeking is a harmless habit, excepting in cases when the man gets what he seeks.—Trenton State Gazette.

Had the Trenton editor been at all familiar with political events in Union, he would have known that its perennial candidate, James E. Martine, has thrice been nominated for the State Senator.

FISK TO NOTIFY FORT ABOUT ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City has not heard the last of President Charles J. Fisk and his colleagues of the State Excise Commission, and if the Plainfield Mayor has his way there will be a rattle of official bones in the seashore resort that may cause a surprise before the summer season is over. At least that's the way Mr. Fisk feels at present and he is arranging an appointment with Governor Fort to tell him about it. It is understood, the Executive anticipates Mr. Fisk's coming and will welcome him at the Sea Girt cottage.

One of the things the chief excise prober may ask the Governor is that he "put the spurs," as it has been expressed, to Clarence L. Goldenberg, the Atlantic prosecutor. Mr. Goldenberg told Mr. Fisk and his associates Monday that he had never tried to enforce the "bishops' law" in the coast resort and that it would be a waste of time for him to try. Mr. Fisk believes differently, however, and will tell the Governor so.

Mr. Fisk, who fixes the itinerary of the commission, had not planned to go to Atlantic City last Monday. He had thought it advisable to wait awhile longer and there was a belief that the commission would not visit the resort until toward "the wane of the season." It was Governor Fort who upset this calculation. Criticism of the policy of his delay reached vetoed the waiting game. Some of the members of the commission were surprised to learn that the Governor was so intimately acquainted with the plans of the probers. As the attack on Atlantic City has been made, Mr. Fisk is going to lay the testimony before the State Executive. In his opinion the disclosures were "something horrible." The admissions by the Atlantic City and county officials that the excise law is not observed and that no effort is made to enforce it simply because local sentiment and the politicians are against it, does not please Mr. Fisk a bit. He orders law enforcement successfully in Plainfield, he declares, and he believes it can be done elsewhere. At least, he argues, there is no excuse for prosecuting officials saying they have never tried to enforce laws.

DRAG FOUR FROM SURF.

Volunteer Life-savers Do Quick Work at Long Branch.

Four persons were almost drowned while bathing in front of the Hotel Brighton, Long Branch, yesterday. Miss Ruth Factor, of 432 Grand street, and Lester J. Keagin, of 117th street, New York, were overcome when reached and had to be carried ashore. Miss Factor had gone down twice when Volunteer Life Saver Benjamin Pollack reached her. Young Keagin was down for the third time when Daniel J. Mackintosh, a New York florist who is summering in Cooper avenue, reached the unconscious boy.

The others, who were also overcome, were Mrs. Factor, mother of Ruth, who swooned when she saw her daughter being carried to sea; and Miss Rose Brown, of Lakewood, who is spending the summer there.

DROWNED IN CANAL.

Trenton Has Had 15 Accidents of This Kind This Summer.

Joseph Edwards, 17 years old, son of Charles W. Edwards, of 49 Lincoln avenue, Trenton, was drowned in the canal near Academy street today. He was employed at the Roebling Works, but was not working today. With several companions he entered the canal. He could swim, but his companions could not. He struck out for the opposite bank but when near the middle of the stream his body suddenly stiffened and he sank. He came up once and then sank again. It is supposed he had an attack of heart trouble, to which he was subject.

There have been fifteen drownings there this summer.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Fisk as a Politician.

Chief Prober Fisk, of the Excise Commission, declared at Atlantic City Monday that he is not a politician. Mr. Fisk would scarcely venture such a statement in Plainfield, where he is better known. As a matter of fact, Mr. Fisk is very much of a politician, and has been for fifteen years or more. Only recently he retired from the chairmanship of the Republican City Committee in Plainfield, but he still retains his membership in that body. He is also a member of the Union County Republican Committee and chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee of the Fifth district. Mr. Fisk is a very good excise quizzer, but he was not as frank with Atlantic City as Atlantic City was with him.—Trenton True American.

AGAIN THE "MURDERER."

Tampa, Fla., Police Think They Have Man Who Paid Penalty.

"The evil that men do lives after them."

A striking proof of the truth of Shakespeare's epigram came up in Orange yesterday, when Chief of Police Washer received the news from the police of Tampa, Fla., that the negro who murdered Frederick R. Romer, the Orange undertaker, last December, and was electrocuted not long afterward, had been "found" again.

While the search for the murderer was on descriptions of the negro were sent all over the country, and every once in a while now some negro with gold teeth, such as the murderer had, is arrested and suffers more or less, for a time, for his crime.

NO GAS FOR EBERHARD.

Sheriff Removes Fixtures from Cell of Young Murderer.

Hackensack, Aug. 6.—Sheriff Brewster, of Hackensack, yesterday had the gas fixtures taken out of the room in the jail occupied by Gus Eberhard, the self-confessed murderer of his aunt, Mrs. Ottilie Eberhard.

The prisoner told Stephen Degroat, another inmate, that if the Grand Jury indicted him for murder he would commit suicide. The Sheriff thought it best to remove the gas for this reason. Eberhard is watched night and day.

The Rev. Dr. Mann May Be Bishop.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, for many years rector of Grace church, Orange, and now rector of Trinity church, Boston, is mentioned as a probable successor to the late Bishop Henry Y. Satterlee, of Washington. Dr. Mann was a leading candidate for Bishop of Newark after the death of Bishop Thomas A. Sarkey, and was repeatedly the choice of the laymen in convention, but did not have a majority of the clerical vote. The convention adjourned without making a selection, but in the fall, when a special convention was held, Dr. Mann requested his friends not to vote for him, and the Rev. Dr. Edwin S. Lines, of New Haven, was chosen.

Minister Almost Drowns.

The Rev. J. E. Rosencrest, of Bethayres, Pa., is in fair condition today, after being nearly drowned in the surf yesterday at Atlantic City. He was found floating unconscious and face downward in the surf. Five lifeguards tugged him to shore just in time to save his life. Nearly two hours' treatment was required to bring the totally exhausted and half-drowned man back to life.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Twelve borough properties are advertised to be disposed of at the public sale of back taxes, to be held in the borough building, Friday, August 14. Since the advertisement of the properties, settlements have been made in several instances, and it is probable that but a few of the properties will actually be offered.

As chairman of the outing committee of Sacred Heart church, Rev. E. J. Dunphy has decided upon next Saturday as the date. The outing will be held at Fox's Grove, South Plainfield, and the committee is now working on the program for the day.

Thomas McGuire, who has been ill at the home of his father-in-law, Dr. P. W. Brakeley, for the past two weeks, is able to be about again. He and Mrs. McGuire will shortly leave for Southern Pines, N. C., where they will make their home.

G. Archibald Brakeley, who has been seriously ill for the past week with ptomaine poisoning, is now able to be about the house again.

Miss Mabel Cole is sojourning at Ocean Grove. She is registered at The Arctic

ADAMS EXPRESS CO. TO ABSORB WEST JERSEY?

The Adams Express Company is about to absorb the West Jersey Express Company, according to a persistent report in financial circles in Philadelphia. The merger will take place within a week. Both concerns are controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

At the offices of the Adams Express Company the statement was made that there would "be something for publication on the subject in a few days." There has been no official notification of absorption as yet.

John B. Thayer, fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who is in a position to know all about the company's traffic deals, declared he had nothing to say about the consolidation of the express interests.

The West Jersey Express Company operates over the entire system of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, touching all the main seaside resorts and terminals in New Jersey.

STRANGLED MAN IN POLICE COURT.

Enraged Father Nearly Kills Prisoner Accused of Harming His Daughter.

Harvey Baker, 26 years old, superintendent of the East Trenton Machine Company, at Trenton, was almost strangled to death yesterday morning in the private office of Police Justice Harry Harris by Thomas Mathias, an expert tire maker employed by the Ajax-Grieb plant, father of Ada Mathias, 9 years old, whom Baker is charged with assaulting.

Mathias darted at Baker as soon as he saw him. He grabbed the prisoner by the throat with both hands and forced him against the wall, where he vigorously choked him. Had it not been for the timely interference of Patrolman Charles Cook the strangle hold which Mathias had on Baker would undoubtedly have resulted seriously.

SHOT AFTER HIS WIFE'S FUNERAL.

Daniel F. Mooney Killed in Butte, Mont., on Arrival from Dover, This State.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 6.—James W. Ryan, brother of John A. Ryan, superintendent of the North Butte Extension Company, yesterday shot and killed his brother-in-law, Daniel F. Mooney. Ryan surrendered himself.

Mrs. Mooney, Ryan's sister, died last week and Mooney had just returned from Dover, N. J., where interment took place. The shooting is believed to have been the result of family differences. Both families are prominent.

DOCTOR'S NARROW ESCAPE.

His Horse Is Knocked Down by Flying Automobile.

Dr. William H. Lawrence, Jr., of Overlook Hospital, Summit, had a narrow escape from death yesterday morning. He was riding a horse at the curve, foot of Summit avenue hill, when an automobile going fully forty miles an hour struck the horse, knocking it down and tearing the left stirrup and spur away. As the horse fell the doctor jumped and sustained a number of bruises. He was taken to the hospital suffering from nervous shock. The horse is badly cut.

EXCISE PROBE WILL BE A THOROUGH ONE

Former Judge J. Kearney Rice, of New Brunswick, one of the State Excise Commissioners, who has returned from Atlantic City, when asked today as to the nature of the report which the commission would make, said that no intimation of it would be given out before it had been handed to the Governor. He said that criticism to the effect that the commission was actuated in its movements by political considerations was based on imagination.

"When the commisison was organized," he said, "a plan was laid out in which it was arranged that we should begin visiting cities at the northern end of the State and then take in other cities in order, right straight along, one after the other, so there should be no choice of cities. I was in Arizona when the northern part of the State was examined, but I know that the commissioners' plan was followed out in detail till the hearings were temporarily discontinued by the absence of several members of the commission on business.

"When I returned home the latter part of last week I heard that they were to take up Atlantic City and I went there. As most of the members have arranged their business so that we can go on with the hearings, we are going to continue with the original plan. Anybody who wants to present information to the commission about any place will have the opportunity to do so. The commission will be glad to hear from all such persons."

TUG HAS CLOSE CALL.

Ran in the Path of Sandy Hook Boat Asbury Park.

Passengers on the steamboat Asbury Park, of the Sandy Hook line, were given a scare yesterday morning when the fast flyer had a very narrow escape from ramming a tug near the Cedar street, New York, pier, Atlantic Highlands. Excellent work on the part of Captain Larsen and other officers prevented the collision.

The Asbury Park was approaching her dock when the tug steamed into her path. It seemed as if a collision was inevitable, but the signal was quickly given for full speed astern and churning up the water and mud the Asbury Park succeeded in clearing the smaller boat. The rapid tooting of the whistle brought most of the passengers to the rail, and when the close escape was seen, the work of the officers in preventing the disaster was warmly praised.

STRUCK ACTING MAYOR.

Phillipsburg Man Gets 30 Days on Mercer Farm.

Paul Smith, of Phillipsburg, was sent to the county farm for thirty days, yesterday, for striking Actinb Mayor John D. Howell, of Trenton, Tuesday night. Mr. and Mrs. Howell were talking to a party of friends on North Bond street, Trenton, near the Battle Monument, when Smith, who was very drunk, came along and began to be abusive. As he reached Mrs. Howell he began to swear and deliberately pushed her aside in his staggerings.

Mr. Howell went to his wife's support and as he did so Smith hit him a telling blow in the face, knocking him against a nearby building.

Smith was arrested by Patrolman Laciskey. Smith claimed yesterday morning in court that he was so drunk that he did not remember what happened.

Want Synod in New Brunswick.

The German Synod of the East of the Reformed Church of the United States will be invited to hold its session in 1909 in New Brunswick. At the annual meeting of the congregation of the local German Reformed church Tuesday ight the Rev. M. H. Qutl and William Seimons were instructed to carry the invitation of the church to the synod meetting at Baltimore on September 9. The synod embraces all the territory east of Pittsburg and Buffalo.

Boonton Hotel Gets License.

The City Hotel, at Boonton, obtained its retail license immediately after the passage of the new amendment, allowing nine saloons, by the Common Council. After taking legal advice Mayor Kopp signed the license to take effect immediately. Last night it was open for the first time in over two years. The reopening of this place, after being closed for violation of law, was fought bitterly by the churches.

Rahway Wants High School.

The Board of Education of Rahway at an adjourned meeting decided to appeal to the State Board of Education for the $100,000 asked for by the Board of Estimate to secure a site and build a high school building, unless the Common Council acts promptly in the matter. The Common Council so far has made no effort to issue bonds, though several months have passed since the board of estimate made its report.

ARE THERE MOTHS AT YOUR HOUSE?

Here is the wail of many:

"I'm distracted," said the young housekeeper. "After wearing myself to a frazzle in house-cleaning time, trying to rout moths, I find they have gotten into my storeroom closet."

"Your fight was not scientific enough," laughed the older woman. "What did you do? Stick a little camphor on moth balls around and think your duty done? The wily moth needs much more strenuous remedies.

"Don't look so disconsolate, child; your winter wardrobe is not eaten yet. Have one rousing moth fight according to my prescription and you can hang out a flag of truce till frost comes.

"Mix gasoline, gum camphor and turpentine together in the proportion of an ounce and a half of camphor and a quarter of a pint of turpentine to every quart of gasoline.

"Crush the camphor well before mixing and put the mixture into a tightly-corked jug or bottle for over night. Shake well before using.

"Tomorrow bright and early take out all the clothes in your room and have them thoroughly brushed and beaten, burning the dust. Then put your moth mixture into a syringe and spray everything in sight. It will do no damage even to your woodwork or bedding if you happen to have any stored in there, so drench everything well.

"Shut up the room over night, putting a cloth along the cracks of the door, just as if disinfesting. The next day open and air the room and sweep and dust again.

"If you think any of the things done up in boxes are affected, they should be taken out, brushed and put back with fresh lumps of camphor after the boxes have been washed inside and out with the gasoline compound.

"I have used this remedy for years. In one house where the moths had taken possession, I did each room in turn in mid-July and never had further trouble.

"Be sure to shut the room for twenty-four hours and never have a light in it until the odor has disappeared or a bad fire may result."

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL ONE.

Parasols which may serve in all kinds of weather are becoming more and more recognized, and they may be found in all the gay colors. There are some even with knife-pleated ruffles around the edge. These last will deceive everyone, for they look like the lightest of sunshades, but are really waterproof and will protect one from the rain.

One parasol handle and frame will now do as a foundation for several parasols, for the newest ones have separate covers of different colored silks to simply stretch over the one frame. Think how convenient this would be for traveling, for it would be necessary only to carry a stick and frame covered with a sombre waterproof cover, which would be quite appropriate in case of rain or shine, and then, when one has reached her destination, the parasol could be turned into a light and airy thing that would suit any dress.

There are, too, some afternoon coats made of waterproof silk to wear with summer gowns for driving and motoring. It seems as though in time we will all wear waterproof clothes entirely; and indeed it would be a clever idea, for it would save a great deal of anxiety caused by the ever-fickle weather.

The Kind She Preferred.

"I want to make a gift to Miss Passay," said Dumley. "I wonder what sort of animal she'd prefer for a pet."

"A man," promptly suggested Miss Knox.—Philadelphia Press.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

One of the features of Lew Dockstader's minstrel entertainers, who come to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night, will be a unique stage effect entitled "Afloat in the Open Polar Sea," in which the polar regions are shown together with great moving ice bergs and the glorious scintillating aurora borealis or northern lights. This masterpiece of stagecraft is the result of years of thought on the part of several experts and is accomplished in a novel manner. The open water is shown and great cakes of floating ice which move about in the most natural manner possible. The scene alone cost more than $5,000 and occupies less than two minutes of time in being shown. The effect is patented and protected in this country and Europe.

Another play has been added to Clyde Fitch's success, "The Straight Road," which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre on Saturday afternoon and night, August 15. In this piece Mr. Fitch tells the story of the redemption of a woman. The particular woman in this case is a girl of the slums. She is in nature superior to her environments. She has a good heart, good moral instincts, womanly feelings. Yet these lie below the surface and are brought to life only by a big cat—in this case one of kindness. The play scenes are in part laid in the lower east side—there Moll O'Hara, the heroine, is lifted out of her low life by the kindness of a woman from another social sphere—and partly at a country place on the Hudson. In this company will be found such well-known people as Miss Minnie Victorson, Joseph Slaytor, Lora Rogers, Maggie Weston, Cyril Raymond, Arline Hines, Charlotte Meyer, W. M. Swayne, Edward Clement, etc. The original production will be used complete in every detail, which in all should make this attraction the treat of the season.

THE BEST MATERIALS FOR MIDSUMMER WAISTS.

How many shirtwaists a woman needs in preparing for her summer outing is a question that she alone can decide. She is wiser to avoid tailored ones of stout materials. These are all right for late spring and early autumn, but they are a trifle heavy for the middle of summer.

China silk, plain or striped, is admirable. In the dull white tones it serves better and is more stylish than white muslin. With it are worn turnover embroidered linen collars, although the negligee cuffs are untrimmed, rolled back and caught with link buttons.

If one wants to be at the top of the styles and, incidentally wants to show an exceedingly pretty corset cover, she should get one of the untrimmed shirtwaists of white cotton net. These are the coolest garments in the styles.

They are made of the wide net, which washes. Any simple model is chosen that has tucks or plaits. There is a high turnover collar and wide turnover cuffs, edged with cluny.

The blouse is fastened down the front, under a grandfather frill of net and lace, and fastened through with round pearl buttons. Under the turnover collar is worn a broad cravat of colored taffeta, tied in a huge square bow in front.

WHEN PAPERING ROOMS.

It is always a question as to how much paper is required to paper a room. The calculations can be more easily made if one bears in mind the following facts, recently published in Popular Mechanics: One single roll of common wall paper is eight yards long and eighteen inches wide. Ingrain, felt or cartridge paper is the same length, but thirty inches wide. A single roll of one-strip border is eight yards long and eighteen inches wide. A single roll of two-strip border has the same dimensions, but obviously contains sixteen yards of border. Common wall paper is put up in double rolls, while the ingrain, felt or cartridge paper comes in triple rolls.

To determine how much material is needed for a room multiply the height by the length of the four sides and divide by thirty-six. This will give the number of single rolls required. Allow a yard and a half of border for each single roll of common paper.

If ingrain, felt or cartridge paper is to be used multiply the height of the room by the length of the four sides; divide the result by forty-nine. This will give the number of single rolls required. Deduct one single roll of common paper for every fifty square feet of opening.

To determine the amount required for the ceiling multiply the length of the ceiling by the width and divide by thirty-six for the common paper. If the ingrain, felt or cartridge paper is to be used divide by forty-nine, and you will know how many single rolls will be required.

His First Thought.

The Arab guide was showing the American politician the pyramids.

"And it took thirty years to build them," said the guide.

The American politician gave a sigh of envy.

"Thirty years to build? Great Scott! Just think of the opportunity to graft."—Chicago News.

Baby's First Word.

Fourteen months is a critical age. It is then that you begin to speak, and an eager crowd waits upon your every lip-opening.

"Oh, sir!" exclaimed Nanna, rushing into the drawing room breathlessly, and carrying her 14-months-old charge, with whom she had been visiting the zoo. "Oh, ma'am, Archibald spoke this morning for the first time!"

"Really!" exclaimed the young father, jumping up in excitement. "Do you hear that, Belle? And what did he say, nurse?"

"Why, sir, I was showing him a large cage of monkeys, when he clapped his hands and called out, real plain, 'Papa—papa!'"—Answers.

The Kind Judge.

The hobo was pleading for pity.

"It's dis way, yer honor," he whined. "I don't git no chance. Everybody's agin' me—dey're all conspirin' to kep me down."

The judge beamed benevolently. "Well, nobody shall say that I joined in that conspiracy," he said. "Trying to keep you down, are they? Well, they shan't do it. I'll send you up."—Cleveland Leader.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 9, 1908.
By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Why and how to be healthy—1 Cor. vi, 19, 20.

There are few things in life that are more important than good health. With it and a fair amount of intelligence one may accomplish a great deal in a lifetime. But without it even a most brilliant mind cannot compensate it; hence the classic adage, "A sound mind in a sound body." Ill health comes from various sources. Sometimes it is inherited, or at least the tendency toward certain diseases which bring ill health for perhaps many years is inherited. In other cases, through accidents and events beyond our control, we suffer permanent ill health. In such cases no blame rests upon us, but with a brave heart and trust in God we should strive to regain as far as possible this great blessing of life.

Ill health frequently comes as a result of our own misdeeds. Nervous diseases, so plentiful and so disastrous today, are usually the result of overwork or overworry, or both combined. The insatiate greed for gold leads many to irregularity in living, to burdening mind and body more than they are able to stand, and the result is the weakening of the nervous system, which is so vital to health. Sinful lives, for which men are responsible themselves, wreck the health of many a man. Licentiousness, intemperance and other sins will sooner or later wreck the strongest of constitutions, and we find men at forty ill and decrepit who should be physically and mentally in the very prime of life. But they are old men before their day, made so by indulgence in sinful and ruinous vices. Young people, guard well your health if you have it, and seek it if it is in any way impaired.

But why should we be healthy? It has already been pointed out that health is important to our temporal welfare, but it is more than that. Our bodies, as Paul says, are the temple of the Holy Ghost, and this dwelling place should be a healthful one. It should be especially free from sin and the forms of illness that cover this sin. Moreover, the apostle declares that our bodies are not ours alone; that they belong to Christ, who has bought them with his own life's blood, and Christ wants the bodies that belong to Him to be clean and healthy. While on earth He healed men's bodies and still today does so, when in accordance with God's will and plan for us, in answer to our prayers. These facts testify to His interest in the health of our bodies. Moreover, strong, healthy bodies are necessary to the best service that we can render God. We are commanded to love God "with all our strength"—physical strength. Nor can the mind and soul reach their highest achievements except with strong, vigorous bodies. Bodily limitations are tremendous obstacles when they are strong, but how they hinder us when they are weak and ineffective!

How may we be healthy? Obey the laws of God and of nature. The man who obeys God's written commands will avoid many things that break down the health of the body. The man who obeys the laws of God in nature will conserve good health. Be temperate in all things—eating, drinking, in work and in pleasure. Be regular in all habits and have only good ones. Eat good food. Waste none of your sleeping time, for sleep is a great factor in health. Find time for recreation and exercise, always remembering that overexercising is as imprudent as none at all. A man whose business is in an office does not need muscles like a Sandow and only injures himself in trying to develop them by excess. Spend as much time as possible out of doors and in outdoor exercise. The simple methods of developing and preserving health are in the majority of cases the better. Then when passing good health "glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's."

The New Committees.

As a warning the following clever lines by Amos R. Wells are published to be posted in each committeeman's hat to be read when his interest is lagging or his heart growing faint:

Ten new committees, vigorous and fine.
One was too ambitious, and then there were nine.

Nine new committees, zealous and elate.
One got offended, and then there were eight.

Eight new committees laboring for heaven;
One got too shirking, and then there were seven.

Seven new committees "putting in best licks;"
One found it tedious, and then there were six.

Six new committees looking all alive;
One went to sleep, and then there were five.

Five new committees keeping up their score;
One became "too busy," and then there were four.

Four new committees, bright as bright could be;
One became careless, and then there were three.

Three new committees hunting things to do;
One thought he couldn't, and then there were two.

Two new committees, proud of good things done;
One grew "so tired," and then there was one.

One new committee holding on for fun;
Fun got exhausted, and then there was none.

By CLEVELAND MOFFETT — FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE PINKERTONS

Copyright by G. W. Dillingham Co.

The American Exchange Bank Robbery

Crawford claimed to have carried out these instructions, and deposited the package of money taken from the flower bed in the safe-deposit vaults in the Fifth Avenue Hotel building, where, as a matter of fact, he was known to have rented a box. He gave as his reason for not sending the money to Paris that he was in trouble himself, being under constant surveillance, and thought it best to keep the money secreted for the time. He admitted that he had carried this money with him to Honduras, and that it was the same found on his person by the detectives. By his description of Brown and Bowen, the former was a man about 25 years old, of slight build and light complexion, while the latter was ten years older, two or three inches taller, with a sandy mustache and very fat hands. Mrs. Brown Crawford described as about 25 years old, a blonde, with regular features. He had no idea what had become of these people since he left America, having had no further communication with them. None of the alleged conspirators has ever been found, and they are believed to be purely mythical.

Detective Hotchkiss also had an interview with "Mike" Neiland, Crawford's companion in flight, who described his first meeting with Crawford at his boarding house in San Pedro, and acknowledged that he had deliberately frightened Crawford into running away by his story of the pursuing detectives. He described their adventures and hardships in trying to escape over the rough country, the difficulties they experienced in buying mules, their sufferings from exposure in the swamps, and finally their capture by the soldiers. Neiland said that Crawford gave him $3,000 in $50 bills, and also allowed him to carry, a part of the time, a large package wrapped in oil-cloth paper and sewed up tightly. Crawford had told him to throw this package away rather than let anyone capture it; for, he said, it contained money which would send him to prison if found upon him.

As they pushed along in their flight, Crawford declared repeatedly that he would put an end to his life rather than be taken prisoner; and when the soldiers surrounded them he drew his revolver and tried to blow his brains out. One of the soldiers, however, was too quick for him, and struck the weapon out of his hand. After the capture Crawford vainly tried to bribe the guards to let him escape, offering them as much as $10,000. When the large package was opened, it was found to contain bundles of bills sewed together with black thread, and with about a dozen rubber bands wrapped around them, and a stout covering of buckskin under the oiled paper. The money amounted to $32,500, all in United States bills—fives, tens, twenties, fifties and hundreds, but mostly fives. Ultimately the money was returned to the American Exchange bank.

When organizing the pursuit of Crawford, Detective Hotchkiss had arranged with the Honduras government that any letters and telegrams that might come addressed to the absconder should be delivered to him. Several letters were thus secured from the young man about town in New York who had befriended Crawford so constantly in the past, and who seemed now disposed to stand by him even in adversity and disgrace. The letters contained counsel and reproaches, and seemed to indicate that relations of unusual familiarity had existed between the two men. Besides these letters, two cablegrams were intercepted from the same source, both being sent through an intermediary. The first was dated March 15, 1890, and read: "Tell Crawford go back. Papers bluff. No treaty exists." The second, sent two days later, read: "Inform Crawford will meet him in Puerto Cortes."

It is needless to say that the young man did not carry out his intention of joining Crawford in Honduras, for the same mail which would have brought him Crawford's reply carried the startling news that his protege and friend was under arrest in Santa Barbara, a self-confessed bank robber.

The government of Honduras consented, thanks to their friendly relations with the Pinkertons, to deliver Crawford over to one of the representatives of the agency, and Superintendent E. S. Gaylor, who had meantime replaced Detective Hotchkiss, took him in charge. A guard of Spanish soldiers brought the prisoner to Puerto Cortes, where he was placed in a hotel pending his transfer to a vessel sailing for the United States. Superintendent Gaylor himself was present to see that everything was managed properly, and he was seconded in his oversight by the former Pinkerton employe, the head of the secret police in Honduras. The final arrangements had been made, the government having taken advantage of a law authorizing the expulsion of "pernicious foreigners" in order to get rid of Crawford. The superintendent had actually taken passage for himself and Crawford, and selected berths, on an American vessel that was to sail on the morning of May 2, 1890; but the night before Crawford made his escape from the hotel, going without the money, which remained in the detective's keeping. How he escaped is still a matter of conjecture. The hotel stood on the water's edge, and from a balcony to which Crawford had access he may have managed to spring down to a wall built on piles. From there he may have reached the hotel yard at the back, and escaped over one of the picket fences that separated the hotel from the adjoining property. There is also a possibility that the Spanish soldiers were bribed; but this has never been proved, and is scarcely probable, as Crawford at the time of his escape had not more than $75 in Honduras bills in his possession.

During the following days and weeks untiring efforts were made to recapture him. The swamps were searched for miles, and soldiers were sent out in all directions. Mr. Gaylor believed that Crawford succeeded in making his escape into Guatemala, which was only 30 miles distant. He was undoubtedly assisted in his escape by the fact that people in the surrounding region sympathized strongly with him and would have done anything in their power to conceal him from his pursuers. At any rate, the man was never recovered.

Several years have passed since Crawford's escape, and all this time he has been left undisturbed in Central America, where he has been frequently seen by people who know him, and where he seems to be thriving. At last accounts he and his brother were engaged in business on one of the islands in the Mosquito Reservation of Nicaragua, where they were regarded as dangerous men by the government, likely to incite revolution. So strong was this feeling on the part of the Nicaraguan officials that some years ago advances were made to the United States government to have Crawford surrendered, the Nicaraguan officials declaring that they would gladly give him up if a demand for his extradition was made by the proper authorities in Washington. For some reason the demand has never been made, and probably never will be.

Immediately after Crawford had made confession, the American Exchange bank, realizing that there was no longer any doubt that the robbery was committed by one of its employes, voluntarily refunded to the Adams Express company the $41,000 that had previously been paid to it by the company, together with interest thereon for two years, and a large part of the expenses. Therefore the only complainant in the case now available would be the bank officials, who, for some reason, have seen fit to let the matter drop.

Mr. Pinkerton's theory of the way in which this robbery was committed is that Crawford had an accomplice who had previously prepared the bogus package, and who, by previous appointment, was standing on the stairs in the express office when the two messengers arrived. It has always been a question in Mr. Pinkerton's mind whether the old man, Dominie Earle, told the exact truth in his testimony before the bank officials. Not that he suspected Earle of having been implicated in the crime, but he has wondered whether Earle might not have been simply negligent to the extent of leaving Crawford in sole possession of the valise at some time after they entered the office. There is no doubt that Earle was very anxious to catch a four o'clock train at one of the New Jersey ferries, in order to get home early. He may, in his haste, have allowed Crawford to go upstairs with the valise unaccompanied.

This would explain how Crawford found opportunity to open the valise and make substitution of the bogus for the genuine package. Assuming that the accomplice was standing at a turn of the stairs, which are winding and rather dusky, it is perfectly conceivable that such a change of packages might have been effected with scarcely a moment's delay.

But consenting that Earle told the exact truth, he admitted that he lingered behind Crawford a little in ascending the stairs, and in so doing he may have furnished sufficient opportunity for the substitution. An old man going up rather steep stairs naturally bends his head forward to relieve the ascent, and in such position he might fail to see what a man close in front of him even was doing. The trouble with this theory is that it supposes the label on the bogus package to have been a forgery.

There is still another theory suggested by Mr. Pinkerton to account for the presence of the bogus money package in the valise when the two messengers reached the counter of the receiving department. It is that Crawford's confederate had provided himself with a second valise, similar in all respects to the one used by the bank, and that in this had been placed the bogus package with a forged label, making the substitution a matter of merely changing valises, which could have been accomplished in a second. It has also been suggested that Crawford might have managed the whole scheme himself, by having prepared a valise like the one he carried daily, arranged with two compartments, in one of which was placed the genuine package received from the paying-teller at the bank, while out of the other compartment was taken at the express office a bogus package previously placed there. What makes it the more reasonable to suppose that Crawford accomplished the theft single-handed is the fact that when arrested in Honduras the bulk of the stolen money was found on his person, while it was known that, in addition to the $32,000 then recovered, he had previously spent considerable sums in various ways. His voyage, for instance, must have been expensive; and it was found that he had given at various times to members of his family sums ranging from $20 to $50. This would have left out of the original $41,000 a very meager remuneration for a confederate.

Perhaps the most reasonable explanation of the robbery lies in the assumption that Dominie Earle, honest, but simple-minded, did not go upstairs at all with Crawford, but left him at the foot of the stairs, influenced by his eagerness to get home. Granting this supposition, what would have been easier than for Crawford, left alone at the foot of the stairs, to have turned back with the valise and gone into the back room of some neighboring saloon, or other convenient place, where he could manipulate the label and substitute the bogus package? There is reason to think that the bogus package had been prepared weeks before, which would have accounted in a measure for its worn and slovenly appearance. The time occupied in doing all this need not have been over 15 minutes, which would not have been noticed at the bank, especially as the robbery occurred after banking hours. It is highly improbable, however, that Crawford could have accomplished the substitution on the stairs of the express office; for, while these are winding and somewhat in the shadow, they are by no means dark, and are plainly in view of clerks and officials who are constantly passing. Besides that, Crawford could not have carried the dummy package concealed about his person without attracting attention, for the original package was quite bulky, being about 20 inches long, 20 inches wide and 14 inches thick. The bogus package was not quite so thick, and more oblong, but could not easily have been hidden under a man's coat. Finally, even supposing Crawford to carry the bogus package with him in some manner, he would never have dared to expose himself to almost certain detection by cutting off the label from the genuine package, pasting it on the bogus package, placing the latter in the valise and hiding the genuine one in his clothes—and doing all this on the busy stairs of an express office where at that hour of the day a dozen men are going up and down every minute.

The sum of all these theories is, however, that, in spite of the fact that the author of the robbery is known and the bulk of the money has been recovered, the manner of the robbery is to this day a mystery.

The End.

Open Friday Evenings; Close Saturdays at Noon.

New Jersey's Greatest Mail Order Organization.

We are justly proud of our mail order system. We feel that it is one of the strongest links in the chain of this great store's success. We want you to use it—test it thoroughly and allow us to demonstrate its many splendid advantages. The Bamberger mail order system is not the result of a day, but the culmination of years of painstaking effort. In fact, this branch of our business is so perfectly organized that you may shop as quickly by mail as in person. There are no delays—no errors—satisfaction is snugly packed with each parcel we send out. If you are not a patron (which is highly improbable) send in a trial order and you'll quickly realize the truth of the foregoing statements.

CARE OF THE EYES DURING THE SUMMER.

A great cause of eye suffering in summer is the glare from city streets built of stone. Those who must be out during the day find that the eyeballs are in a high state of irritation after the daily exposure.

In some countries blue glasses are worn, and during the heat of this summer men who really suffered from the glare had the courage to adopt this protecting method during all the hours they spent out of doors.

Women who have gone shopping during the day and walked the streets a good deal have come home with their eyes aching like a tooth and have not known what to do for the trouble.

All of this irritation is quickly relieved by first bathing the eyes in very hot water, then applying a mixture of camphor julep and witch hazel.

Witch hazel diluted with water can also be dropped directly into the eye, and this treatment quickly relieves the burning feeling.

It is also helpful to bathe the eyes when coming into the house with hot water and boracic acid, using a small portion to a large quantity of water.

In these hot days, when travelers will open car windows instead of leaving them down, as all the wise ones do, there is the constant danger of cinders, which irritate the eyeball. Those who travel two or three times a day on the trains find that their eyes are in a bad condition about this time of the year.

Here is a good bit of advice from one who knows: Restrain the impulse to rub the eye and insert a flat linseed into the corner of the eye. Close the lid and the seed will slide painlessly around the eyeball and soon come out at the other corner, bringing the cinder with it.

The best part of this remedy is that it does not leave any chance of inflammation. The oil of the seed covers the eyeball and takes out all irritation.

It is advisable for those who travel on trains constantly to carry a few of these seeds in the pocketbook.

Her Hated Rival.

"What was it you said about Miss Gidday?"

Mr. Goodley—I said her age surprised me greatly. She doesn't look 30, does she?

Miss Knox—No, not now. I suppose she did, though, at one time.—Pittsburg Press.

Bound to Get So.

"What forced you to become crooked?" asked the magistrate of the prisoner before him.

"Trying to make both ends meet, your honor," was the more or less satisfactory reply.—Cleveland Leader

TERROR OF GREEN TOOTHED MONSTER

THE CUCUPIRA OF AMAZON WOODS IS BULLET PROOF, BUT NOT INTELLIGENT.

IS FOND OF HUMAN HEARTS

Brazilian Explorer of Wilds Tells of Peculiarities of Demon of Wilderness of Which Natives Are Deathly Afraid.

Washington.—"I had not been in Brazil 24 hours before I heard of the cucupira," says a man who has been in out-of-the-way parts of Brazil. "At Para you can enter the primeval forests in a three-minutes' walk from your hotel, and so it happens that one may lie in bed and hear the prowling denizens of the woods giving their nightly concert. I was told, even while there, that any particularly frightful cry was made by the cucupira.

"Just what the cucupira was no one pretended to know. I was going up the river 600 miles to visit an old friend, and before going I read up about it.

"Prof. C. F. Hartt of Cornell, in 'The Mythology of Brazil,' wrote: 'One of the most important among the myths of the Indians of Brazil is called in the Tupi language the cucupira. In all parts of the country one hears of this evil spirit of the woods, but no good and exact description of it exists.'

"C. B. F. De Souza, in Valle de Amazonas,' wrote in 1873: 'I believe it is certain that the Indians believe in the existence of a spirit or demon which appears in the woods and is called the cucupira.'

"Mr. Bates, the naturalist, is quoted as saying: 'The cucupira are of both sexes and have children.'

"At the plantation of my friend, Capt. Manuel Valdez, I heard the same vague accounts of the creature. Almost every night at sunset, when the nightly concert begins, some one among his 30 employes would smil-

"I'm Hungry, Give Me Your Heart to Eat."

ingly say, as he heard some particularly unearthly cry: 'That is a cucupira.'

"To do justice to these people one must forget the impressions of tropical forests which he got from school geographies. Along the outskirts of the streams birds, butterflies and flowers are everywhere, and there is an incessant chatter and chirp of small birds. Go but a short distance and all is changed.

"One may walk for hours without seeing a living creature, and the silence is only broken by the harsh cries of macaws and parrots as they fly over or feed on the surface of the canopy of green, nearly 200 feet overhead. The forest is like a deserted cathedral and until sunset the silence is oppressive.

"But the moment the sun drops this silence is broken by sounds like the crash of a great orchestra. Even an educated man will feel that hidden all about him are creatures of which he can form no conception save by their frightful cries.

"In these solitudes, when the light is beginning to fall, and remembering the nightly pandemonium, it is not so hard to understand the origin and influence of the most absurd stories one has heard. For instance, a lost Indian hunter who had shot a large monkey lay down to rest and fell asleep. He was awakened by a strange creature, who proved to be a cucupira.

"'What is the matter, brother?' the cucupira asked, and sitting down beside him added: 'I am hungry, give me a piece of your heart to eat?'

"Secretly reaching behind him, the hunter gave him the monkey's heart.

"'That is good, now your liver,' said the hungry demon.

"This was eaten also. Then the hunter said:

"'I, too, am hungry; give me your heart and liver.'

"The cucupira, seeing that the man was uninjured, and not wishing to be outdone, took the hunter's knife and slashed out his two organs and fell down dead.

"Another hunter found a curious skeleton at the foot of a hollow tree. From the skull he removed one of the teeth, which were green, for a souvenir."

Clinton Ave. vs. High Bridge Here.

In an an effort to redeem themselves for the defeat at High Bridge, Saturday afternoon, the Clinton Avenues will engage with the High Bridge nine this Saturday afternoon at Crescent Oval. Manager Dorflinger, who arranged for the return game, is confident that the local players can do the trick, and "Cliff" Randolph will be used in the box. Boelzley will be the receiving end of the battery. Kraft and Thorpey will be the battery for High Bridge, and the visitors will be quartered at the Hotel Kensington during their stay in town.

Heat Kills Elizabeth Man.

James Morrow, janitor of the Elizabeth Yacht Club, was found dead yesterday morning in the clubhouse at Elizabethport. He had died from heat prostration. The body was lying on the floor. He had been dead several hours. Morrow was about fifty years old. He had been a 'long-shoreman, and some years ago was known as a "bad man" by the police. He served a State prison sentence for nearly killing Patrolman John Desmond with Desmond's own club. Morrow's wife then left him, and is said to be living in Newark with her children. The body was taken to Stiner's morgue.

"S. S." For Hawkins.

Thomas Hawkins, who was arrested early yesterday morning for intoxication, had sentence suspended when arraigned in the city court today. He told Judge Runyon that rum and politics were back of his troubles and that in the future he would cut out the politics, at least.

MILITIA WILL ESCORT MAJOR WM. B. MARTIN

Winkler's Second Regiment band and the Second battalion of the same regiment, composed of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Somerville companies, have been selected to escort Major William B. Martin in the march through the streets of Elizabeth next Saturday evening when he is to be tendered a formal reception upon his return from Bisley, England.

Major Martin has been participating in the marksmanship contests in connection with the Olympic games. He made the highest score in the rifle matches and received at the time a complimentary cablegram from the governor.

Middlesex Tax Assessments Lower.

New Brunswick, Aug. 6.—The amount of tax assessments in Middlesex county will be about one million dollars less this year, according to the idea of the County Tax Board, which met here yesterday to receive the books of the assessors. All of the assessors handed in their books except that from Metuchen. The lower assessment is the result of the State board under the law making the second-class railroad property assessment. The heaviest reduction will be in Woodbridge, Perth Amboy and South Amboy. The county will get this loss in taxes back from the State. The board would not make public the assessment on bank stock further than to state that the National Bank of New Jersey stock would be $105 instead of $160, and that of the People's Bank here $58 as against $140. They are local banks.

DEMONSTRATION OF SUCTION CLEANER ATTRACTS MANY.

T. W. Kloman, inventor of the Cleanator, a portable vacuum cleaner machine for residential use, now on exhibition at the P. S. C. electric office on East Front street, has announced that the demonstration of the machine will continue for the rest of the week, instead of being terminated today, as was announced. Mr. Kloman, with his brother, C. H. Kloman, are from Rutherford, and many local people are daily going to the electric light office to see the machine in operation.

The patents for the machine were granted about two years ago, and Dr. Justus H. Cooley has one of the first ones made. The power to create the cleansing suction is generated by a one-half horse-power motor, operated from an ordinary electric light fixture. The operating cost is claimed to be but three to five cents an hour. The dust is drawn in by suction through a hose, and the air, passing through a tank of water, leaves its impurities and passes out through an exhaust fitted with a muffler at the bottom of the machine. On the machine used for demonstrating here, a demonstrating glass has been fitted. There is a glass globe fitted in the pipe before it enters the water tank, and makes it possible to see the dust particles as they whirl through on the way to the tank.

So powerful is the suction at the end of the hose, which may be fitted with various shaped suction nozzles, that dirt may be drawn through a heavy rug from the floor beneath. This insures a perfect cleansing of the room. Another feature of the machine's work is that it will clean tapestries, wall surfaces and billiard tables to perfection. One of the nozzles it fitted with a brush and it is with this nozzle attached that the demonstrators clean metal, glass and chinaware.

Sarah Parse Hart.

After an illness of only about a week, Mrs. Sarah Parse Hart, for many years a resident of Scotch Plains, died at Bound Brook yesterday morning. She was 94 years of age. Mrs. Hart was the widow of the late Cooper Parse, and several years ago moved from Scotch Plains to make her home with Bound Brook relatives. The funeral will be at her late residing place in Bound Brook tomorrow afternoon, and the interment will be in the Baptist cemetery at Scotch Plains Saturday morning at 10:30, when there will be a committal service.

GOV. AND MRS. FORT RECEIVE AT SEA GIRT

Prominent society people from various cities were guests last night of Governor and Mrs. Fort at their first reception in the new cottage at Sea Girt. It was the custom some years ago to hold a governor's ball during each encampment at the Beach house. This was followed by a reception that was held under the auspices of the New Jersey State Rifle Association at the clubhouse near the rifle range. The reception last evening, however, was the first of the kind in fifteen years.

Among the guests were Representative and Mrs. Benjamin F. Howell, Colonel and Mrs. J. M. Schoonmaker, of Pittsburg; General and Mrs. Joseph W. Plume, former first Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. William M. Johnson, Dr. William G. Schauffler, Mr. and Mrs. Weling G. Sickle, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hauck, General and Mrs. C. Edward Murray, Senator and Mrs. Frank O. Briggs, General and Mrs. Bird W. Spencer, Colonel Nelson Y. Dunyan and Judge Dowling, of New York.

Today is the last Governor's day of the season, and Mr. Fort has as his guests the members of the State Editorial Association, the Legislative Correspondents' Club and newspaper men from all parts of the state. The clerks of the State House are among those invited.

PERSONAL.

Sylvester J. Place is enjoying a two weeks' outing on the Jersey coast.

Miss Margaret Hoffman, of Canton, Ohio, is visiting friends on South avenue.

Mrs. Millard F. Elderton, of East Front street, who has been sojourning at Asbury Park for several weeks, has returned.

State Supervisor of Roads R. A. Meeker and Mrs. Meeker, of Madison avenue, have been spending the past week at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Blatz, of the Jackson building, left this morning for Atlantic City, where they will register at the Chester Inn.

Mrs. J. F. Runyon and daughter, Anna, of East Sixth street, are sojourning at Upper Montclair. Miss Margaretta Runyon is visiting at Bridgeport, Conn.

Samuel J. Deutsch, of Richmond, Va., is visiting his brother, Morris Deutsch, of Madison avenue. This is the first time in two years that the brothers have seen each other.

Mrs. Anna G. Dunham and her daughters, the Misses Ella and Elizabeth, of East Sixth street, have returned from Connecticut, where they have been sojourning for several weeks.

William Morris.

William Morris, who, for eighteen years was a resident of this city, living at Forster place and Clinton avenue, died at St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, Tuesday, following an operation. He had been ill but a short time. During the past four years Mr. Morris was living in Trenton. He was born forty-seven years ago at Lincolnshire, England, and came to this country eighteen years ago. He was a boiler maker by trade, but retired from business several years ago. His wife died three years after he came to this country, and two children, William and Frances Ruth Morris, who survive, have made their home with their aunt, Mrs. John D. Forster, of Forster place. Mr. Morris was a member of the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The funeral service will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home of Mrs. John D. Forster and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery. Rev. L. F. Bower, minister in charge of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, will officiate.

Jenkins Rubber Plant Destroyed.

The Jenkins Rubber Company plant at Division and Magnolia streets, Elizabeth, was totally destroyed about 3 o'clock this morning, entailing a loss of about $100,000. The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion. During its progress two firemen and policeman were injured and had to be removed to the hospital. They will recover. The company was engaged in the manufacture of rubber for mechanical purposes.

City National Dividends.

Up to date, the City National Bank has paid out in dividends on its bank stock $347,250, and not $47,250, as reported in last night's paper. This correction is but fair to that prosperous institution.

Rev. George B. Dougherty, of West Orange, who is to preach in the First M. E. church, Sunday morning, is the son-in-law of the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, formerly of this city, his wife being Bertha Hurlbut.

THE ANNUAL DISCUSSION.

Mother wants to go abroad; sister thinks that queer.
And they quite acridly have jawed concerning it, we fear.

Brother wants to try the cliffs; aunt prefers a lake.
And there have been some bitter tiffs with lots of sides to take.

And while each booms some chosen spot, extols its beauties rare,
Pa grins and thinks as like as not we won't go anywhere.

Corporation Counsel Bound for Iceland Aboard Boat Which Struck a Rock.

THE VESSEL BADLY DAMAGED.

Plainfielder Witnessed the Olympic Games In London and Felt Proud of His Own Country.

Among the 220 passengers aboard the Hamburg-American steamship Oceana, which struck a rock east of the island of Inch Keith, in the Firth of Forth, at midnight Wednesday, were Corporation Counsel and Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, of this city. The boat was soon refloated and although not in a dangerous condition, it was decided to put into port at once. The vessel was anchored in the Firth of Forth, near Edinburgh. Several of her watertight compartments had been torn open and though the passengers were in no danger at any time another steamship was sent at once to take the Oceana's place for the voyage to Iceland.

Warren Marsh, brother of the corporation counsel who is in charge of the latter's office, received a cablegram last night stating that he and his wife were safe and well. He evidently anticipated the fact that Plainfielders would learn through cable dispatches of the accident to the steamship.

Mr. and Mrs. Marsh twice visited the Stadium while in London and witnessed the Olympic contests and they had ample opportunity to cheer heartily for the American entrants. They were fortunate enough to be present the day that Hayes, the American, won the great Marathon race. In a letter written by Mr. Marsh to a Plainfield relative he briefly described the memorable event and said that words could not describe the display of enthusiasm on the part of the 100,000 spectators, when at first the Italian flag was run up above the American, indicating that Dornando, the representative from Italy, had won, but a few minutes later when the judges announced Hayes as the winner the Americans present went wild with excitement. Mr. Marsh says that the Italian was assisted three times in reaching the finishing line and that any fair minded person would have at once awarded the race to Hayes. He speaks in high praise of the work of the American athletes, adding that they had every reason to be proud of the country's representatives.

JOHN FERRARO TO BE SENT BACK TO ITALY.

John Ferraro, the young Italian living on Terrill road who recently attempted suicide by slashing his throat, was locked up at Police Headquarters, last night, for the purpose of having his sanity enquired into. He has been wandering around town in an aimless way, sleeping on porches and in hallways, and frequently annoying passersby.

When Ferraro was brought before Judge Runyon, this morning, friends stepped forward and said they would like to have arrangements made to send the young man back to Italy. Chief Kiely was in favor of the plan and steps were taken at once to procure his passage. Ferraro, who is strikingly handsome, seemed greatly pleased at the prospect of returning to his native home. He has plenty of money in a bank to pay all expenses.

Plainfielders Walk to the Shore.

Guyion Fountain and his brother, Gideon Fountain, of West Seventh street, have returned from a sojourn at Asbury Park, and the journey to the shore was a novel one in that they walked from this city to Red Bank, from which point they took the train to the Park. The young men left Plainfield about 8 o'clock in the morning and aside from the fact that they stopped but once or twice for refreshments, maintained a steady pace on their tramp, reaching Red Bank the middle of the afternoon. The day was a particularly warm one and not calculated to inspire the young men with an ambition to cover the distance in the shortest possible time. However, they did not loaf on the road and considering everything made excellent time. The young men decided to walk the distance as a means of healthful exercise and not with a view of making a record.

William Pearson Seriously Ill.

William Pearson, of Liberty street, the well known electrician, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital this morning to be treated for acute appendicitis. His condition is said to be serious.

LOCAL CYCLISTS ENTER WESTFIELD ROAD RACES

The Plainfield Cycling Club will be represented in the bicycle races to be held tomorrow at Westfield by nine members, who will compete in the ten mile handicap road race and in the mile race for the championship of Union county. The local entries are Harry Hook, Robert Guttridge, Sherman Haberle, Jack Todd, Raymond Mantz, W. Symons, I. B. Huffman, Harry Warren and George Adams.

The race meet will be under the sanction of the National Cycling Association, and D. M. Adee, president of the association, will be the referee. Mayor A. L. Alpers, of Westfield, is to be the honorary referee. "Val" Valiant, sporting editor of the Bicycling World, who was formerly a resident of this city, will act as clerk of the course. Edward Floyd, of Westfield, is to be starter, and W. H. Quackenbush, of Westfield, is manager of the meet. The judges will be A. J. Wilson, of Westfield; Paul Thomas, of the C. R. C. A.; R. F. Kelsey, of the N. C. A.; Samuel Morrison, of the Edgecomb Wheelmen, and J. D. Gluck, of New York city. A. C. Fitch and J. S. Irving, of Westfield, and Dr. A. C. Griffin, of the C. R. C. A., will act as timers and the official scorers are to be Arthur Tuttle and William Locke, of Westfield.

In connection with the racing, there will be a band concert and speeches at the fountain at 8 o'clock in the evening. At this time, D. M. Adee, president of the National Cycling Association, will award the prizes. John D. Gluck, of New York, who formerly lived in Westfield, will made an address; R. F. Kelsey, chairman of the board of control of the N. C. A., will speak on "Racing as a Sport," and "Val" Valiant will speak on the topic, "What I Think of Westfield." The band concert, which is in two parts, will consist of a dozen numbers.

Mountain avenue and Broad street will be the starting and finishing point of the ten mile handicap, and the finish of the one-mile handicap. In the ten-mile race, there will be sixteen prizes awarded, and the first prize will be a handsome Pierce Racing bicycles The name, number and handicap of each rider will be announced before the start of the race.

The winner of the one-mile championship road race will be awarded a gold medal as champion of Union county. In addition, he will receive a pair of Ajax tires. The second-place man will receive a championship silver medal, and a Persons' Dominion saddle, and a bronze medal and a Morse chain will be awarded to the rider finishing third. The medals are offered by W. H. Quackenbush, of Westfield, manager of the race. There are eight prizes in all for this event, which will be run in several trial heats. The winner of each heat will receive a bicycle wrench.

Four time prizes are to be awarded in the ten-mile race, and the rider making the best time will receive a Crawford bicycle. Jack Horner and a delegation of riders from the Plainfield Cycle Club will ride to Westfield to root for the local riders.

ADMIT HOLD-UP.

Young Men Also Wanted for Robberies in South Amboy.

Robert Stegaway, 18 years old, and William Dexter, 20, before Justice of the Peace Pickersgill at Perth Amboy yesterday morning acknowledged holding up Harry Solomon, of New Brunswick, on Saturday, and were sent to the county jail. Solomon is a cigar dealer. He had been on a collecting trip. Near Stelton he was held up by two men, who took $40 from him. His description of the highwaymen fitted that of Stegaway and Dexter, for whom the local police have been hunting for some time.

They were wanted for robberies in South Amboy and Detective Mark Long had followed the men up and down the Lehigh Valley Railroad between Perth Amboy and Bound Brook, but was unable to land them, as they knew him and kept out of his way. Finally, having located them, he secured James McDermott and James Mansfield, railroad watchmen, who arrested the fugitives Wednesday.

Isaac S. Stites.

Isaac S. Stites, who moved to the borough from Bayonne last fall, died last night at his home on Somerset street. He was seventy-one years old and had been suffering from the effects of a paralytic stroke which he sustained several months ago. He is survived by a wife and family. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church, Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

—Neuman Brothers will have a record-breaking display of fresh fruits and vegetables tomorrow. Rocky Ford melons, Georgia peaches, Jersey corn, tomatoes and lima beans will be among the specials.

MAJ. MARTIN RETURNS TOMORROW AFTERNOON

Major William B. Martin, together with other members of the American Rifle Team, which won first honors at Bisley in competition against teams from all parts of the world, is a passenger on the American Liner New York, which is due to arrive in New York at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The committee from the National Rifle Association, which was appointed to meet the American team on its arrival, has arranged to receive the members of the team down the Bay. They will make the trip on the Mohawk, and the committee has invited the members of the committee on reception in Elizabeth to join it on the boat.

Upon the return of the Mohawk to New York, the Elizabeth committee and Major Martin will board a Standard Oil Company tug and go to Elizabeth, where an appropriate celebration in honor of Major Martin will be held in the evening. It has been arranged to have Senator Thomas J. Hillery represent Governor J. Franklin Fort, and the Second Regiment will also take part in the celebration under the direction of Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan. Colonel D. F. Collins as chairman of the local committee, will have charge of the celebration, which will include a short parade to be followed by a banquet at Russ' restaurant. Thus far fifty-five persons have subscribed for dinner tickets. The number is limited to 100 and the committee expects to dispose of them today.

MADE-OVER CARS FOR LOCAL TROLLEY LINES

The Public Service Corporation is planning to put improved trolley cars on the city lines, which include Netherwood, Somerset and Fourth streets, and while the cars, it is said, are not to be new ones, as promised by the company, they will be a decided improvement over those now in use. The cars are now in one of the company's shops being practically rebuilt on modern lines, equipped with double trucks, and large wheels. They are about three windows longer than the cars in the service on the city lines and will have double motors.

One obstacle will have to be overcome and that is the height. The cars are higher than those in use and there is some doubt as to whether it will be possible to run them under the Watchung avenue bridge as they are now constructed. If they will not go under, thirty inch wheels will be substituted for the thirty-two inch with which all trolleys are equipped. This change will not cause much trouble and there would then be no doubt as to running the cars under the bridge. It is claimed by the company that the Watchung avenue bridge is the lowest of all the new ones erected by the New Jersey Central in the city and for this reason some difficulty is experienced in planning to operate certain cars over the line.

FUNNY AND NOVEL "STUNTS" MARK Y. W. C. A. SOCIAL.

Ranking as the premier of the summer's social events at the Y. W. C. A., the "Stunt Party" held last night at the association building, kept the two score members who attended in gales of merriment during the entire evening. A feature of the program was the program rendered by a zobo band, composed of the members of the committee. Miss Margaret E. Mosher, physical director of the association, acted as the leader of the "musicians" and those who melodized on combs and drums were the Misses Elsie Goddard, Florence Jennings, Olive LeLany, Autumn DeLany, Louise Harral, Sarah Head and Lillian Fedderman.

Miss Marion Brown, as "Jennie Jones," and Miss Mary Campbell as "Sister Sue," won lots of applause by their rendition of Eugene Field's "Little Peach." Miss Harriet Mattison explained the Silver Bay girls' "stunt," and five of the gathering who were up there sang the Silver Bay songs. Miss Elsie Goddard and Miss Marion Brown presented scenes from Romeo and Juliet and there were recitations by the Misses Ida Englehardt and Ellen Doughty.

Everyone took part in the "stunts" and informal singing was a feature. Refreshments were served under the supervision of the committee.

Vacation at Atlantic City.

Borough Marshal Charles Keller started on his ten days' vacation today and in company with Lieutenant William Gaub, of the borough fire department, will start for Atlantic City tomorrow.

Mrs. William Sampson, of East Fifth street, is recovering after a severe illness with diphtheretic sore throat.

NEW YORK JOINS THE MEMORIAL MOVEMENT

Before starting for Winter Harbor, Me., to resume his vacation, Mayor McClellan, of New York city, yesterday announced the New York personnel of the Cleveland Memorial Committee, which will arrange for a big meeting in honor of Grover Cleveland to inaugurate steps in conjunction with the Cleveland Memorial Association of New Jersey for the erection of a permanent memorial of some kind to the late ex-President. The committee is as follows:

Francis Lynde Stetson, chairman; Lyman Abbott, E. C. Benedict, Joseph D. Bryant, Nicholas Murray Butler, John Carwalader, John G. Carlisle, Andrew Carnegie, Joseph H. Choate, William F. Coakley, Charles S. Fairchild, John H. Finley, Richard Watson Gilder, George Harvey, W. M. Laffan, John G. Milburn, Frank D. Millet, Paul Morton, Patrick F. McGowan, St. Clair McKelway, Herman A. Metz, De Lancey Nicoll, Adolph S. Ochs, Morgan J. O'Brien, Peter B. Olney, Alton B. Parker, Francis Key Pendleton, Whitelaw Reid, Herman Ridder, Isidor Straus, Edward M. Shepard, William F. Sloane and Egerton K. Winthrop, Jr.

Former United States Senator John F. Dryden is chairman of the New Jersey State committee and among his associates are Governor J. Franklin Fort, and former United States Senator James Smith, Jr. The Plainfield members of the committee are Alexander Gilbert, Edwin S. Hooley, William L. Saunders, Charles W. McCutchen, Samuel Townsend, Ernest R. Ackerman, W. J. Buttfield, George P. Mellick and A. L. Force.

N. Y. SUN CHASTISES CONGRESSMAN FOWLER

The New York Sun scathingly rebukes Congressman Charles N. Fowler, who is seeking re-election in this district after having spent fourteen years apparently fruitlessly at Washington, for insulting the members of the last Congress. Although Mr. Fowler is chairman of the House committee on banking and currency, by right of seniority, his pet currency measure, which he has advocated for years, was turned down by the decisive vote of his colleagues, whose action was enthusiastically ratified by the Senate.

The currency law enacted by the Senate and House is now characterized by Mr. Fowler as an "ignorant, cowardly and most dangerous piece of legislation." In reply to the man who has thus assailed his colleagues in Congress and who wants the people of this district to send him back to represent them for three years more, The New York Sun says editorially:

"Mr. Charles N. Fowler, chairman of the House committee on Banking and Currency, denounces the Aldrich-Vreeland currency law as an 'ignorant, cowardly and most dangerous piece of legislation.' Admitting that the measure is not ideal in all respects, it must nevertheless be said that Mr. Fowler merits severe rebuke for the discourteous and even insulting terms in which he refers to a law enacted by the Senate and by the House of Representatives of which he is himself a member.

"Mr. Fowler's present attitude lays him open to at least the suspicion of 'undergoing grinding torments' because he was not made a member of the National Monetary Commission. He probably expected to be included in the membership of that committee, and perhaps hoped that as a member he might convert his fellow members and bring them to an approval of his individual notions. Nevertheless, when his name came before the appointing power the thumb was turned downward

"It is reported that there is to be a National Business Men's Protective Association which shall be the agency for the promulgation and dissemination of Mr. Fowler's financial theories. Those theories are to be preached to every creature and a now blind and deluded public is to be made to understand that there is 'absolutely no difference in principle between bank book credits and bank note credits,' and that 'the masses of the people who use currency instead of checks are entitled to have just as economical and cheap credits as the rich and powerful who keep bank accounts.'

"To those of our readers who do not fully grasp the significance of these momentous phrases we can only say that their ignorance is the soil in which Mr. Fowler hopes to do his ploughing and his planting."

R. H. M'ADAMS HEADS CO. BOARD OF ELECTIONS

Vacancies on election boards in Elizabeth, which holds a special election on Tuesday, August 25, to decide the fate of the voting machine were filled by the Union County Board of Elections at a meeting at the Court House yesterday afternoon. The principal business, however, was organization.

After Ralph L. Morrow, of this city, had been sworn in as a member, organization was effected. Robert H. McAdams, of Elizabeth, was again chosen chairman. Mr. Morrow declined the nomination for secretary and George J. Stewart, of Elizabeth, was chosen to fill that office. Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, was re-elected clerk to the board. The sergeant-at-arms was continued in office.

A meeting of the board will be held next Saturday morning to arrange for the publication of primary election notices throughout the county, and another meeting will be held on Wednesday, August 19, when the Republican and Democratic county chairmen will submit lists of district board members, which they wish appointed for the various districts throughout the county.

Mr. Morrow was appointed two weeks ago by Governor Fort to succeed Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., also of this city, who resigned after being appointed assistant prosecutor of Union county.

The new county board consists of R. H. McAdams, R. L. Morrow, G. J. Stewart and Fred Zior.

INTERESTING DATA IN JERSEY BANK REPORTS

New Jersey's savings bank resources amount to $100,405,48, according to the report of David C. Watkins, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance. The report is based on sworn statements of the condition of savings banks at the close of business on July 15, and of trust companies on June 30.

There are twenty-six savings banks, eighteen State banks and seventy-five trust companies. The savings banks have total resources of $100,405,448.93, with liabilities of the same amount, including surplus funds of $6,699,421.52. The amount of cash on hand in these banks is $513,944.01.

The seventy-five trust companies have assets and liabilities amounting to $177,746,841.38, in which is included a surprise fund of $16,246,851.98. The banking houses and furniture and fixtures are valued at $5,130,146.74. The cash on hand in these institutions amounts to $4,162,645.32.

The eighteen State banks have resources and liabilities of $17,569,524.94, including a surplus fund of $1,035,000.

CHOKED BY $300 PEARL.

Was In Lobster Which Jersey City Man Was Eating.

Peter A. Kane, of 232 Jersey avenue, Jersey City, nearly met an untimely end by choking while eating a lobster.

Kane is fond of lobsters and never misses an opportunity to stop at Voll's restaurant in Hoboken, where a specialty is made of seafood. Last night he made his customary visit.

When in the middle of his repast a hard substance lodged in his throat, causing him to choke for several minutes. It was removed with difficulty. Kane, with the cause of his discomfort in his hand, complained to Voll of his carelessness in preparing food. On closer examination his find proved to be a pearl, which a dealer, who was present, estimated to be worth $300. Kane stopped his denunciation of Voll's culinary methods and ate more lobsters with the hope of adding to his gem collection.

Knights' Excursion a Success.

The first excursion of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, to Asbury Park, yesterday, was a success, and the day at the shore was all that one could ask for. During the afternoon it rained for a few minutes but not enough to spoil the pleasure of the excursionists. The enjoyment of the Plainfielders was marred on the return journey owing to the sad death of William J. Kiely, of the borough, who was killed while trying to board the train at Asbury Park. It cast a gloom over the hundreds of excursionists and the untimely death of Mr. Kiely was deeply regretted by everyone. The Plainfielders arrived home about 9:30 o'clock.

STREETS NOW TOO WET FOR WORK ON NEW PAVE

Wet weather has interfered with the treatment of Park and North avenues with tarvia and asphaltoilene, but Street Commissioner Gavett said today that all was in readiness for the continuation of the tarvia treatment of Park avenue as soon as the roadway dries sufficiently to make its application effective. The west side of Park avenue, between Seventh and Ninth streets, has already been treated with the preparation, and will be ready for use by Sunday. On account of the wet street, a section of this distance has been left without treatment until the road shall have dried out. Tarvia is to be applied on Park avenue between Seventh street and Randolph road.

Asked if there had been any "kicks" about the new process Mr. Gavett said that people seem well pleased with it. "There is at least one man who has a kick, and a big one, too, I guess," he continued, "and he is Richard Stevens. He rode his bicycle through the stuff just after the gang applied it, and spattered his back with the tarry mixture. He said he didn't see it. There may be a slight smell to it now, but I don't believe there will be after it gets thoroughly dried."

The asphaltoilene, also to be used on the city streets, has arrived in town, but the spraying wagon and the contractor's gang which is to apply the stuff have not come yet, so the work is held up. Asphaltoilene is to be applied on North avenue between Watchung and Park avenues, and on Park avenue, between North avenue and Fourth street. It is also to be spread on Park avenue beyond Randolph road, as far as the street committee shall decree.

Mr. Gavett's attention was called to a new tar-spraying machine, which has recently been tested in London. According to a report by Consul General Robert J. Wynne, a tar macadam road built with the use of this machine is smooth, dustless, and durable.

"I have heard of this process," said the Street Commissioner, "and it is undoubtedly a good one. The cost, however, is between 85 and 97 cents a square yard. The tarvia road we are making here in Plainfield will only cost about four cents a square yard, while asphaltoilene costs about six cents a square yard. Our macadam costs seventy cents a running foot on a road sixteen feet wide, and of course, this must be taken into consideration in computing the cost of the process."

FISK GOING TO CAMDEN.

Excise Investigators' Subpoenas Cause Flutter Among Officials.

A surprise was sprung on city and county officials at Camden yesterday when subpoenas were served on Mayor Ellis, Prosecutor Scovel, James McCabe, the license clerk; Chief Gravenor, of the Police Department, and three police captains to appear next Monday before the state xcise investigation commission, which recently stirred up such a sensation in its revelations of condition in Atlantic City. It was not supposed that the board would take up the consideration of Camden before the fall.

The board has had detectives at work in Camden for a month. They have worked as bartenders and porters in saloons and have gathered important evidence of violations of the Bishops' law. The officials will be called to testify as to the strictness with which the laws have been enforced, and whether reported violations have met with prompt investigation and prosecution.

Camden county is the bailiwick over which David Baird resigns. One of the interesting stories which the commission will investigate is to the effect that half of the beer sold in Camden comes from Philadelphia, and that a tax of 25 cents a keg is collected to help run Baird's machine. Other stories of a similar nature are to be looked into by the commission.

Will Hold Prosperity Convention.

Frank W. Weed, of West Front street, is a member of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the Interstate Prosperity Convention to be held in New York, August 14 and 15, under the auspices of the United Commercial Travelers and Travelers' Protective Association. On Friday, August 14, there will be a public convention to be addressed by leading citizens and prominent officials and on Saturday there will be a banquet, amateur sports and ball at the Manhattan Beach Hotel. The associations in charge of the affair have leased Manhattan Beach as well as the hotel for the day and they expect to have several thousand guests.

Mrs. J. C. VanDyke and Miss Mary VanEps, of East Fifth street, have returned home after spending two weeks with relatives of the former at Gladstone, Bernardsville and Millington.

EXCURSIONIST IS KILLED

Wm. J. Kiely's Life Crushed Out Beneath K. of C. Train at Asbury Park Station.

HUNDREDS VIEW THE ACCIDENT.

Many Women Faint and Only Prompt Action Prevents Further Mishaps In Great Crowd On Platform.

In full view of hundreds of Plainfielders waiting on the platform of the Asbury Park station at 7 o'clock last evening, William J. Kiely, of Steiner place, the borough, was hurled beneath the first section of the local Knights of Columbus excursion train and so badly injured that death ensued within five minutes. The front trucks of one of the cars passed over his left shoulder and arm, crushing him badly and leaving his inert and helpless. A score of men rushed to his assistance while a hastily given signal brought the special to a stop before any more wheels reached him, but he was beyond all aid.

The mangled form was lifted from the track by Hugh Higgins and John Hines and when the big crowd of happy, care-free excursionists realized what had happened, laughter and merriment gave way to the most intense excitement. A number of women who were so near that they could see the young man, dropped to the platform in fainting spells and added to the confusion. Chief of Police Kiely, Father B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, and Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, were in the midst of the throng and brought something like order out of chaos by directing the men to get everyone as far away as possible and calm the women and children. Father Bogan was one of the first to realize that the young man had but a short time to live and bent over him to administer the last rites of the church. He breathed his last just as the priest concluded.

Chief Kiely took charge of the body and started to remove it to the baggage room of the station but was held back by a railroad attache who asserted that it must remain exactly where it was until the coroner arrived. The Plainfield official realized what that meant because of the crowd and declaring that he would be amenable to the law, instructed Patrolman John Payne, another excursionist, to assist him in carrying the stretcher bearing the form. It was placed in one of the depot compartments, the employes continually protesting that such an action was unheard of.

The Monmouth county officials viewed the body last night and gave the necessary permit for removal. It was brought to Plainfield this morning and taken to the home of the young man's parents.

According to the stories of those who viewed the accident, Mr. Kiely had been standing on the platform with the idea of taking the second section of the train when he became aware that his sister, Mrs. Thomas Gough, of Grandview avenue, was on the first. It was just pulling away from the station and he made a rush to get aboard. His hand grasped the rail of a forward car but because of the way in which he was running, he lost his balance and was thrown beneath the two platforms. Almost the next instant the wheels passed over him.

The victim of the accident was thirty-four years old and had always lived in the borough. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Kiely, of Steiner place, and was employed as a salesman by the Sapolio Company at the New York office. He was well known as a baseball enthusiast and in the winter season was prominent as a bowler, taking part in the local tourneys. Besides his parents and sister, he leaves two brothers, Garret and Edward Kiely, both living at home.

The arrangements for the funeral services have not yet been made.

South Plainfield Excitement.

Found wandering aimlessly about the grounds of Justice William E. Smith, at South Plainfield, last night, a man, twenty years old, giving his name as Gerald McClellan, and claiming Newark as his home, was arrested by Marshal Reilly. When brought before the justice this morning, McClellan said that he had been tramping about in search of work. On his promise to get out of the village, the Newarker was released.

Miss Sheldon With Proctor.

Miss Marie Sheldon, of Cranford, who took a prominent part in several amateur operatic productions in this city, is now the soprano soloist in a quartet on the Proctor circuit. She recently appeared at Proctor's theatre, Newark, where the quartet was well received.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

BOUND BROOK AND VICINITY.

Mrs. Charles Fisher and children, of Plainfield, were guests yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garretson at Five-mile Lock, near South Bound Brook.

WESTFIELD.

A second brood of elm beetles has made its appearance on the trees here and are destroying what little foliage was left by the first swarm.

The local Court of Foresters took a trolley trip to Somerville yesterday afternoon.

Dr. J. R. Harvey, of Westfield, has gone to Stroudsburg, Pa.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Arrested upon complaint of Mrs. John Raferty, of Lincoln, Henry Ludovice, of Piscataway township, was held to await the action of the grand jury on charges of assault and battery and carrying concealed weapons by Justice of the Peace Rogers at New Market Wednesday. Testimony revealed the fact that Ludovice had found two boys in his corn field and chased one of them home and administered severe corporal punishment. At the hearing, Ludovice, who was accused of pursuing the lads with a shot-gun, swore that the gun was empty. He is a farmer and said that he had been troubled much of late by boys stealing his crops.

The first of a series of five championship games between the Dunellen F. C. and New Market F. C. nines will be played tomorrow afternoon on the local diamond. This is the first series between the clubs in four years. Miller and Dodwell will be the Dunellen battery and Fulton and Dixon will be the points for the village nine.

The resignation of Principal Lester Messeroll, of the local schools, accepted at the meeting of the Board of Education Tuesday night, will go into effect Monday. Mr. Messeroll has secured a similar position in the Bernardsville schools and will take charge in the fall.

H. L. Hathaway, of The Call, is at a hospital in Philadelphia, under observation for a few days to determine the cause of a stomach trouble which has been troubling him for several weeks past.

Members of New Market Grange spent yesterday on their annual outing at Riverside Park. There was a particularly large turnout for the affair.

Routine business was transacted at the regular meeting of Lakeside Council last night.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The local ball team plays the first of the series of three games with Westfield on the home grounds tomorrow. The local team will probably line-up as usual, with the exception of Manager Frentz, who is still out of the game on account of illness. Weiner and Albert are slated as the battery.

The fans will enjoy their first home game in their series tomorrow, when the locals play Westfield. Ortlieb will be in the box for the visitors.

Assessor George H. Johnston is making his annual call on the taxpayers. Does beat all how little we own at this time.

Miss Susie Parse has been entertaining her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. William Crisp, of Trenton.

A number from here attended the K. of C. excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove yesterday.

Mrs. Otto Peterson, of Newark, is spending two weeks with her mother, Mrs. Benjamin Clark.

The weekly prayer meeting will be held at the Baptist church tonight.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

An interesting exhibit of flowers raised by the school children of Hightstown, from seeds given out at the school, is being shown at the Hightstown postoffice.

A small boy released the brakes of a freight car at Millville yesterday, and the car, running down a siding, plunged from the track and demolished a small building.

Although they succeeded in prying open a shutter, thieves were unsuccessful in their efforts to enter the home of Charles Van Note, at 525 Pine street, Camden, yesterday.

At Cape May Courthouse so many incandescent lights have been destroyed that the company is undecided whether to remove the lights or to set a watch to capture the offenders.

For insulting Mrs. Howell, wife of Acting Mayor John D. Howell, of Trenton, and for assaulting the latter when he went to the defense of his wife, Paul Smith, of Phillipsburg, was sent to the Mercer county workhouse for thirty days.

Rather than carry his case to the courts and run a chance of losing it, Presbrove Cranmer, of West Creek, who was run down by an automobile a few weeks ago, a leg being broken, has accepted $100 in settlement of all claims against the owner of the automobile.

When Albert McFadden in his big touring car met Charles Dolby in a buggy on a Glassboro street yesterday each turned to pass the other on the same side of the street. A collision was the result, the buggy being wrecked and the occupants thrown out, but not seriously injured.

Mamie Burton, colored, who gave her address as Philadelphia, yesterday, was held in $200 bail for the grand jury at Ocean City on a charge of forgery preferred by John R. Wilson, a summer cottager there. Wilson alleged that the woman, while employed as a domestic, forged a check in his name.

Parties from Philadelphia, with a derrick scow and a diver, are removing the machinery and iron from the steamer Florence, at Bordentown, which was burned in Crosswicks Creek, February, 1902. The machinery in the tugboat James Herron, burned nearby a few months later, also is to be taken out.

The second annual reunion of the Baird and Wyckoff Association, composed of descendants of Captain David A. Baird, of Tennent, and Jacob Wyckoff, of Manalapan, both of whom served with distinction in the Revolution, was held in the First Cranbury Presbyterian church yesterday, and was largely attended.

Arrested for raiding the home of John Shedaker, a farmer on the Camden pike, Benjamin Schilde and Henry Schroder, of Baltimore, were about to be released by Magistrate Smith last night, when the prisoners twisted their tale out of semblance of truth, and the disgusted magistrate sent each to jail for a month.

John Johnson is lying unconscious in McKinley Hospital at Trenton, and it is thought that he cannot recover from injuries received in falling from a ladder yesterday. Immediately after the accident it was thought that Johnson was merely bruised, and he was taken home, but he became unconscious and was hurried to the hospital.

Tired of having their petitions for the improvement of the Malaga road, which is the missing link in the fine route from Camden to Cape May City, turned down by the Cumberland County Board of Freeholders, the Landis Township Committee has ordered Judge Royal P. Tuller to bring mandamus proceedings to compel the county board to repair the highway.

Run down by a locomotive in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards at the foot of Clinton street, Camden, yesterday, Thomas Talleken, of Smithville, was jammed beneath the pilot with such force that his right arm was cut off at the shoulder. The man was inspecting engines at the time of the accident. Talleken was hurried to the Cooper Hospital. He will probably recover.

Detroit has purchased Bush, shortstop of the Indianapolis team of the American Association, for $5,000.

The Cleveland American League Club has bought Wilbur Good from the Akron (Ohio) team, of the Pennsylvania League. Good is an outfielder with a fine record as a batter and base runner.

Vice Chancellor Walker, of New Jersey, on application of Frederick W. Schlegel, has granted a rule for the New Jersey Exhibition Company to show cause on August 11 why it should not be restrained from holding Sunday ball games in Hoboken.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, heavy batter of the Detroit team, married Miss Charlotte Marion Lombard, daughter of one of Augusta's wealthiest citizens, yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Cobb will spend a few days visiting Georgia towns, after which he will rejoin the Detroit team, his wife traveling with him.

Action which it is stated means the reinstatement of M. J. Kelly, of the St. Paul club, expelled in 1906 for umpire baiting, was taken at a meeting of the American Association in Chicago yesterday. All but one voted in favor or reinstating Kelly, and it is declared this vote will be forthcoming at a later meeting. The move to regain Kelly's services was made as a result of a petition signed by eleven thousand business men of St. Paul, the Mayor of that city and commercial organizations.

The East Millstone team will play Bound Brook at the latter place tomorrow afternoon. Skillman, of Princeton University, will pitch for East Millstone, against Phil. Smith.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team will journey to Trenton tomorrow and try conclusions with the State Capitol team. It is said that the Trenton boys have strengthened up considerably since they played in this city and are prepared to make it interesting for Plainfield.

The High Bridge team will make its first appearance in Plainfield tomorrow when it will cross bats with the Clinton Avenue boys on Crescent Oval. The local team feels pretty sore over last Saturday's result at High Bridge and are just itching to "get even" with the Hunterdon county aggregation. Clifford Randolph and Bouzler will be in the points for the home team, while Kraft will again try to fool his opponents with his mysterious curves. The contest should be one of the best of the season.

The Boston Americans have won seven out of ten games on their present trip.

The New York Nationals had won seven straight games up to their tie of Wednesday.

The Highlanders have lost eleven straight games. They haven't won one since July 21.

Young Mr. Herzog is a bundle of energy and generally does something to let the onlookers know he's in the game.

No mad rush as yet on the part of American League clubs to come to the aid of the New Yorks by trading players.

Hobe Ferris, of the Browns, has hit safely in every one of his last twenty-four games. He began his continuous walloping streak on July 9.

Jake Weimer was sold to New York, but wants a piece of the purchase money and hasn't reported. Should think a player would be willing to give a bonus to get from Cincinnati to New York.

Bill Hogg would have had a hit in Cleveland the other day if Sweeney had been more wideawake and gone to second when Bill dropped a fly between Bradley, Joss and Hinchman. One hit would fatten up Bill's batting average to vast proportions.

GOLF.

It is not unlikely that the course of the Apawamis Club at Rye will be the scene of a national championship tournament in another year or so. During the recent invitation tournament there it was frequently said that Apawamis, well bunkered, would be the best championship links around New York. Of course, Walter J. Travis would not admit this, but he has been quoted as saying that after Garden City it is the first choice.

With a view to making their long eighteen-hole circuit up to date in every particular, the Apawamis committee has started in to have new traps placed at the sixth, eighth, ninth, twelfth and sixteenth holes. This, however, is not all, as the work of trapping will be continued until all the short holes have been care-

THE MEMORIAL FUND.

The Trenton True American copies an editorial from The Press urging a liberal resuonse from the citizens of Paterson to the appeal by the local committee to collect funds for a monument to former President Grover Cleveland, the comment is as follows: "All that The Press says is true. Nevertheless, it is lamentably a fact that New Jersey's response to the call for contributions to the Cleveland monument fund is shamefully slow and miserably poor. In the great city of Newark less than $800 has been raised, and outside of that town the only place in New Jersey where a creditable response has been made is in Plainfield. Through the efforts of The Daily Press of that city a total of $327 has been raised. In Trenton, where Grover Cleveland certainly had many friends and admirers, The True American has been able to account for less than $10 contributed to the fund intended to provide a monument to perpetuate the memory of one of the world's great statesmen. Perhaps Paterson people may respond more liberally. Let us hope so. The Press echoes the last three of these somewhat despondent words, "Let us hope so."—Paterson Daily Press.

In justice to Plainfield let it be recorded that the Newark Star has collected $334.50, just thirty cents more than this paper has up to the present time. If the rest of the State doesn't get a hustle on, we will be compelled to raise this monument right here in Plainfield, where patriotic citizens are plentiful.

REALTY FAKERS.

Following a suggestion of The Daily Press, the board of governors of the New Jersey and New York Real Estate Exchange has declared war on suburban realty boom sharks. At its meeting yesterday this body heard the complaint of a reputable real estate man of Westfield who told of alleged land fakers in that section and decided to wage a vigorous campaign against all fraudulant agents.

The law and legislation committee of the board invites the public to submit any grievances they may have against any real estate corporation that has effected lot sales in New Jersey by means of false representations, and asks that they be addressed to 30 Church street, New York city. Such complaints will be investigated and the guilty concerns will be exposed, and, where the facts warrant it, legally prosecuted at the expense of the exchange.

New York real estate concerns which advertise bargain offers in alleged Plainfield realty, which in reality is located in and about the village of South Plainfield, three miles distant from here and in another county, should take this as a warning to cease their deceitful practise.

Judge Foster, of Monmouth county, has given proof that he is fully abreast to the spirit of the times inasmuch as the punishment he administered to an excise offender at Freehold demonstrates that he is convinced that the time has come when mere fines will not serve the ends of justice in such cases. Five months in the county jail was the sentence he imposed upon a saloonkeeper who kept his place open after hours. His action entitles him to be accorded the same honorable mention as was given by the State papers to Judge Booraem, a few days ago when he sent a Dunellenite to jail for a violation of the Bishops' law. A little of this "medicine" in our own county might be effectual in bettering the flagrant condition of affairs in Elizabeth.

Is it not high time that the Councilmanic public affairs committee insists that the P. S. C. carry out the promise it made to give Plainfield the benefit of new rolling stock on all local trolley lines? Last fall when this corporation wanted to double track one of its lines here, the request was granted, the city receiving as a part consideration the assurance that up-to-date cars would replace the dingy ones then in use before January 1 last. The same old cars are still being operated, and now it is semi-officially announced that some dilapidated vehicles are being made over for use here. If this is the way the P. S. C. proposes to fulfill its agreements, the city should govern itself accordingly.

According to the report of State Commissioner of Banking David O. Watkins, just issued, there are 119 financial institutions in New Jersey holding deposits aggregating $238,892,421. It is significant that Elizabeth, which has a population of approximately 70,000, reports a total of about $8,000,000 deposits, while Plainfield, whose population is but 20,000, is credited with deposits amounting to $6,000,000. Relatively speaking, Elizabeth is "a dead one" in Union county when compared with Plainfield in banking statistics.

As reported in this issue, Mayor George M. McClellan has appointed a committee of distinguished New Yorkers to co-operate in the Cleveland memorial movement started in his native State. Plainfield ranks second only to Newark in the size of its contribution to date, and this notwithstanding that the latter has a population sixteen times greater. The Daily Press acknowledges $334.20, and fully expects that before the list is closed $500 will have been raised here.

Newark papers are boasting of the fact that the health board in that city has placed tuberculosis on the list of communicable cases to be reported by physicians. Such has been the practise in Plainfield for several years, but then we have grown accustomed to holding the lead in progressive movements and advanced ideas.

It is a matter of sincere regret that William S. Tyler is not now a member of the Common Council.

THE FORUM.

Fish and Game Laws.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of yesterady, I was much interested in the game law charts, showing the open and closed seasons, evidently published with the authority of the New Jersey Game and Fish Commission. One chart was labelled "orthern section" and the other "southern section." Will you kindly explain their meaning at your earliest convenience.

SPORTSMAN.

(The fish and game laws, approved March 22, 1895, divides the State into two sections so far as its provisions apply. The northern section includes the counties of Sussex, Warren, Hunterdon, Somerset, Morris, Passaic, Bergen, Hudson, Essex, Union, Middlesex and Mercer. The southern section includes all other counties in the State.—Editor.)

EAGLES IN SUSSEX COUNTY.

Two large eagles were observed yesterday circling near Culver's Lake, about six miles from here. Others have been reported from different sections of the county.

Two deer, one a buck with three-foot antlers, have taken up a residence in a sugar-beet field on the farm of Thomas McDonald, near Newton. Near Layton, Sussex county, about ten miles from here, a herd of seven has been wandering from farm to farm for the past two weeks, destroying gardens and damaging fruit trees. Owing to the law prohibiting the killing of these animals, farmers have no chance to protect themselves, as it seems impossible to scare them away.

83-YEAR-OLD MAN COMMITS SUICIDE.

Theodore Stapf, a retired merchant, committed suicide with carbolic acid at the home of his son, William T. Stapf, 102 Sanford street, Newark, early yesterday.

Mr. Stapf was 83 years old. He had been despondent since the death of his wife, four years ago, and this, combined with the heat of the past few days, is supposed to have led him to destroy himself. He had threatened to commit suicide.

After his son had helped him to arise, about 6 o'clock, he left the old man for a moment. He heard his father fall, and, rushing to his apartment, found him on the floor in great agony, with the empty poison bottle on the floor.

Deputy County Physician Muta, of West Orange, granted a burial permit, and the funeral services will take place from the son's home at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. Burial will be private.

TO ROUND UP JUNKMEN.

Larkins Says They Are Responsible for Many Thefts.

Captain Larkins, of Jersey City, yesterday detailed several of his staff to visit all the junk shops in the city to investigate their methods of doing business. Those whose books of record of articles bought are not kept in strict accordance with the law will be taken into custody. Captain Larkins said he agreed with Judge Carey that the junk shops were responsible for many of the thefts committed in the city and added:

"I have pretty positive information that many of the junk shop keepers will buy anything from anybody, even though they know the stuff to be stolen. This certainly fosters petty thievery. Children, knowing that the junkmen will buy most anything from them, form the habit of purloining small articles. After awhile, as a result of the ease with which they can dispose of their loot, not a few of them become habitual criminals."

BRUSHED FLY WITH GUN.

Now Thiel Is in Hospital with Hole Through Head.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brulins, of Leonard street, Jersey City, were at breakfast soon after 6 a. m. yesterday, when they heard a pistol shot in the front of the house. Going to the room of a boarder, Henry Thiel, 54 years old, they found him on the floor with a revolver at his side and bleeding. An ambulance was called and Dr. Cosgrove, who attended Thiel, said the bullet entered his head an inch and a quarter behind the angle of the right eye and came out through the centre of the nose. The eye is entirely destroyed.

In a statement to police headquarters detective Thiel said he was cleaning the revolver and in attempting to brush away a fly the weapon was discharged. The police are inclined to believe it was an attempt at suicide. Thiel had a delicatessen store in Manhattan last year but failed. He got work, but lost it in May last and since then has been in hard luck.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Mrs. George Schenck, of New Market, was given a birthday surprise at her home Tuesday night. She in company with the members of her family spent the day at Boynton Beach, and when she returned in the evening found her home completely in possession of a large company of friends and neighbors. The lawn and porch were decorated with Chinese lanterns, flags and bunting. The evening was spent in playing games and listening to a program of vocal and instrumental music. Mrs. Schenck received a number of useful gifts. During the evening refreshments were served. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Soper, Misses Mildred, Marjorie, Marie Soper and Lester Soper, Mr. and Mrs. Edward TenEyck and children, Miss Grace Norman, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Neale, Mr. and Mrs. Herlick, Mrs. Marsh, the Misses Mamie and Helen Cook, Miss Danz and William Cook.

The new fire house has been given its final coat of paint and arrangements are now being made to use the building for the first time at the next meeting of the company.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kellogg drove to Boynton Beach, yesterday, where they spent the day fishing.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Bayonne Democratic City Committee has indorsed Hugh H. Mara, editor of "The Bayonne Herald," for the nomination for Recorder. Hyman Lazarus, the present official, is a candidate for renomination on the Democratic ticket, and there are several Republican aspirants.

Colonel Austen Colgate, or Orange, Governor Fort's personal aide and member of the Assembly from Essex, yesterday announced himself as a candidate for another term in the Legislature. He refused last week to announce himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Sheriff.

"I am not surprised," said James E. Martine today, "that the New York World appears to be returning to the Democratic fold. All should be on the Lord's side."

State Senator Ackerman, who is making his annual tour abroad, visited the giants' causeway in Ireland on July 25, according to souvenir cards received by his friends here.

State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, is expected home from Europe on Tuesday, Aug. 18. "Uncle Joe" will be returned to the Legislature no matter who his opponent may be on election day.

It is not at all unlikely that the next Governor of New Jersey will hale from the central section of the State. Just remember that.

Dr. Richard Moldenke, of North Plainfield township, is rapidly gaining ground as an aspirant for the Republican Assembly nomination in Somerset county. In character he much resembles Senator Ackerman, of Union, and in ability he ranks second to none among the many learned men of that county.

A dispatch from Buffalo says that the selection of former Senator James Smith, Jr., of New Jersey, as vice chairman of the Democratic national committee and head of the sub-committee, which will control the Democratic campaign in the eastern states, is being strongly urged by several national committeemen, and while Chairman Mack has made no definite decision, it is believed here that Mr. Smith will be named for the place.

Democratic State Chairman Robert S. Hudspeth is one of those prominent Democrats who write a wretched hand. At least that's what Robert Davis says. The Jersey City collector tells a story to the effect that he received an important letter from Chairman Hudspeth some time ago. He could not make out the signature, but in spite of the aid of a number of hand-writing experts he was unable to decipher the message. Davis sent for Hudspeth and showed him the letter, saying: "Hudspeth, what in thunder is this all about?" The Democratic state chairman replied: "Why, that's one of my own letters. How do you expect me to read it? I give it up."

Mr. Davis is invited to go to Lincoln, Neb., to represent New Jersey at the formal notification of William J. Bryan. This ceremony is scheduled for Wednesday, August 12. After that date Mr. Davis may go to Acra, in the Catskills, for rest, unless unexpected things should happen (politically) to keep him in Jersey City.

Former State Senator Michael T. Barrett, of Newark, has been indorsed for State senator from Essex by the First ward Democratic executive committee of Newark.

Mrs. D. DeWitt Brokaw, of Sycamore avenue, who has just returned from Bermuda, left today for a summer sojourn at Point-of-Woods, Long Island. She will be registered at the Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Besler, Miss Helen Besler, George Besler and W. Besler, of Rockview avenue, are members of a party of twenty-seven who are making the Ideal Tour together. Mr. Besler and family are in a Stevens-Duryea car. Yesterday they were registered at the Equinox House, Manchester, Vt.

THE BREAKFAST TABLE

A SUMMER PROBLEM.

The breakfast table, as well as its contents, often receives less attention than it deserves. Spotless table linen and shining silver and cutlery do their part, if permitted, but care and taste in the decoration of the table must be added, if breakfast is to be a pleasant and attractive meal. In hot weather, especially, the breakfast table should receive its full meed of care and thought, for with summer comes the disinclination to eat substantial food during the day, and breakfast ought, therefore, to supply a good foundation meal of suitable and appetizing character.

The chief dish or dishes should be varied from day to day, and all should be in keeping with the season. Cold ham, for example, might be served on two separate mornings in the week, and on the others one or more of such dishes as the following: Fried or broiled fish; eggs boiled, poached or scrambled; scallops or croquettes from the remains of any cold meat; fish cakes or kedgeree, all prepared from the remains of cold fish, savory tomatoes, or, occasionally, on cooler mornings, fried bacon and fried tomatoes; sardines on toast; cold tongue or other cold meat.

The croquettes and scallops could be prepared on the previous day, and would then only need frying in fat before breakfast or warming if already cooked. None of the other dishes mentioned will take long to prepare.

Cod fish or cold meat salad is another suitable summer breakfast dish, and the remains of cold ham might be utilized either in such form or, for a change, in the following way: Fry some very thinly sliced onions in a little hot butter; add to this the cold ham cut up into small pieces and a little boiled rice; season with a pinch of cayenne and, if liked, two or three spoonfuls of grated cheese; stir all together over the fire, taking care to avoid burning, and serve hot with toast. Homemade potted meat made from either fresh or cold cooked meat can be made with but little trouble and is much appreciated for breakfast in hot weather. As an alternative to the fish cakes or other hot dishes prepared from fish left over from previous meals, pickled fish might be served.

One of the best ways of preparing this is as follows: Put the cold fish into a fairly deep dish with a little of the water in which it was boiled; add an equal quantity of vinegar, pepper and salt, and a little herbs, let the fish remain in this pickle till breakfast next day. It should be turned several times to insure its being thoroughly saturated.

If the family is large it is better to have two or three substantial dishes, one or two hot and the others cold, rather than a large quantity of one kind. Fruit, fresh or stewed, and tomatoes and watercresses should appear at breakfast every morning in summer, these being not only especially suited to the season, but also good from a health standpoint, and they render attractiveness to the table, a matter well worth consideration.

Toast buttered and dry, and freshly made rolls and hot cakes, preserves or marmalade, with the usual coffee and tea, hot and cold milk, brown and white bread and butter would complete a meal certain to give more satisfaction in every way than the average uninteresting breakfast. —Philadelphia Press.

A WONDERFUL NECKLACE.

The most costly necklace in the world belongs to the Countess Henckel, a lady well known in London and Paris society, the value of which is said to be $250,000. It is really composed of three necklaces, each of historic interest. One was the property of the ex-Queen of Naples, sister of the late Austrian Empress; the second, once the property of a Spanish grandee, while the third was formerly owned by the Empress Eugenie. Not long ago a necklace composed of 412 pearls, in eight rows, the property of the late Duchess of Montrose, was sold for $60,000. The Empress Frederick of Germany is said to have possessed a necklace of thirty-five pearls, worth at least $200,000, while Lady Ilchester's necklace of black pearls is valued at about $125,000.

To Amuse the Children.

The question how to amuse the little folks who, going away for the summer, are deprived of many of the playthings to which they are accustomed in their own homes, is a puzzling one. A clever woman makes a practise of clipping from the magazines any illustrations which will interest the children. These she cuts out carefully, and, arranging them to the best possible advantage, pastes them on sheets of paper cambric. These sheets are stitched together in books, not too large to be easily handled. These picture books can find a place in the most crowded trunk and will help to while away many an hour on a rainy day.

GOLF.

The hard and baked-out turf these midsummer days becomes a valuable aid to the record breakers. Phenomenally long runs after the carry make it possible for the golfers to "eat up" distances in a manner that, under normal conditions, would be physically impossible. At the Dunwoodie Country Club the other day A. J. Lasher made two remarkable shots going to the home hole, which is 583 yards. He was past the pin with a drive and brassie. Not long ago Lasher overdrove the 290-yard tenth hole.

Apropos of Lasher's record "stunt," H. Chandler Egan, in the amateur championship tournament at Baltusrol in 1904, created a sensation by going over the sixteenth green with a drive and a cleek. This meant a total of at least 530 yards. On the other side Edward Blackwell has on several occasions been credited with gaining considerably more than 500 yards in two shots, while James Braid, the open champion, once covered 555 yards.

Jerome D. Travers, the national champion, plays only on Saturdays and Sundays at Montclair these days, and while this is not sufficient to keep him at the top of his game he always manages to get round in low figures. Travers does not expect to appear in open competition until the national tournament is held at Garden City in September.

A committee, consisting of members of the Scottish-American Golf Club, has arranged to hold a professional tournament at Van Cortlandt Park on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 1 and 2. Something like $400 will be offered in prize money. This affair will immediately precede the "Herald" cup competition to be held over the public course the last three days of the same week.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

There have been minstrel shows and minstrel shows but there never has been one that seems to have hit the public fancy like the one Lew Dockstader and his company of minstrel entertainers are putting up this season. In addition to all the old favorites, Mr. Dockstader has added several new faces, among them being that of Al Jolson who has been setting the Pacific coast wild with delight with his singing and his wit. He is a newcomer in minstrel circles but a decided addition. The Dockstader minstrels will be at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night.

Clyde Fitch, the most popular American author, has probably written more successful plays than any two playwrights combined, and it's very seldom that they are seen at popular prices. In this rare instance "The Straight Road," which had such a successful run at the Astor theatre, will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, August 15, with a company of selected players and the entire original production. Mr. Fitch has given the play a story full of heart interest, brim full of comedy. The principal character of his play is a waif, left to the mercy of a large city and all its evil. She is taken in hand by a mission worker, who shows her the right from the wrong. The moral of the play teaches us, that though we may fall so low that we think there is nothing left for us but the river, or some other means of self destruction, yet if we only have hope and faith in ourselves, we can rise and hold up our heads with respect among fellow beings.

RECOVER RING STOLEN BY VALESKA BARTSCH.

After serving as a token of betrothal for a part of the five weeks that it was missing, a diamond ring, the last of the jewels stolen by Mrs. Valeska Bartsch, who was arrested by the Newark police several weeks ago, was recovered last night and restored to its owner, George Malraison, of 41 Park row, New York, at Somerville. Mrs. Bartsch is to be sentenced Friday for robbing a former employer while posing as a domestic.

The ring was received by Detective Horter at Newark police headquarters from Parkville, a summer resort in Sullivan county, N. Y. It had been expressed by Andrew Jatkowsky, of 160 Broome street, who had given it to his fiancee as an engagement ring.

Mrs. Bartsch pawned the ring with Benjamin Kirsch, of 411 Springfield avenue, for $75. Kirsch sold it to Morris Feldman, of Springfield avenue and Hayes street, for $92, and George Swirski, who lives at the same address, purchased it from him, paying $100. The detectives expected to find the ring with Swirski, but the day before they arrived at his house Jathowsky bought it for $115.

Rahway Boy Bitten by Dog.

William Lennaker, ten years old, the son of Mrs. William Lennaker, living near Rahway Junction, was bitten through the lip and on the forehead yesterday by a dog belonging to Mrs. A. McCann. The dog has been killed. The boy will go daily for eighteen days to the Pasteur Institute for treatment.

SLEPT IN ALTOGETHER.

Someone Stole Woman's Clothes While She Took Swim.

Hannah Muntz, of Hoboken, doffed her garments late Wednesday night and took a plunge in Newark Bay off the City Park, Bayonne. When she went for her clothing, which she had concealed in bushes, they were gone.

She went to sleep beneath the City Park bathing houses, where Detective Lazarus found her after midnight. Acting Recorder Stillwell sent her to the penitentiary for sixty days.

A Comfortable Home Next Winter

A cozy warm house, warm everywhere, is not impossible to obtain. To have one room comfortable and the adjoining room chilly is very trying, especially when you have guests. The will save you from making apologies, and from furnace dust, and cut down your coal bills. It will warm the house thoroughly from end to end with the minimum of dirt, trouble and expense. The Boynton dealer in your town will tell you why.

BOYNTON

The Furnace with the Square Fire Pot

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH NOT SERIOUSLY ILL.

Head of Diocese of New Jersey Recuperating at Daughter's Home at Avon.

Bishop John Scarborough, of the Episcopal diocese of New Jersey, is recuperating from an attack of vertigo at the summer home of his daughter, Mrs. William Bummere, at Avon. Though it was reported that he was critically ill the bishop, when seen yesterday, was comfortably seated on the veranda reading the morning papers.

Bishop Scarborough explained that he had been stricken by the heat while in Connecticut and had fallen, breaking his left wrist. His physicians, Dr. W. H. Clark, of Trenton, and Dr. Reeves, of Spring Lake, has recommended that he take a much needed rest at some seashore resort. He went immediately to Avon, where he has been with his daughter for the past three weeks.

"I have cancelled all of my summer appointments and will not resume my labors until the cool days of October," he said.

This is the first vacation the bishop has taken in ten years. He is 78 years old and has been occupied in diocesan work for over half a century. Dr. James M. Reeves, of Spring Lake, said yesterday afternoon that Bishop Scarborough had been compelled to take a rest as a result of his arduous duties until October 1, when he will resume his work.

DR. BECKER SAVES LIFE OF MRS. COOK.

Jersey City Woman Had Been Under Water Several Minutes When Pulled Out.

Dr. Frederick W. Becker, alms physician of Newark, figured in the rescue from drowning of Mrs. Belle Cook, wife of Dr. William F. Cook, of Jersey City, at Budd's Lake late Wednesday. Mrs. Cook was rescued after she had been under water several minutes and it took twenty minutes application of artificial respiration by Dr. Becker before she showed signs of life. It was not until 3 o'clock yesterday morning that she regained consciousness.

Mrs. Cook went canoeing with Frederick Piper, an intimate friend of the family, and while reaching for a paddle which she dropped, the craft overturned. Piper caught Mrs. Cook and pushed her to the overturned canoe so that she could cling to it as he swam to shore with it. She lost her grip and sank, whereupon Piper called for help. The cries were heard by Dr. Becker and his son, William, who put out from a float in boats and by three youths, who were swimming.

The latter were nearer to the overturned craft and one of their number, a son of Former Mayor Smith, of Hackensack, brought Mrs. Cook to the surface. While Smith rowed her ashore Dr. Becker worked over her and continued his ministrations at the Cook cottage. Meantime Dr. Cook arrived from Jersey City and was first told that his wife had nearly drowned.

PULLS YACHTSMAN FROM THE HUDSON.

Jack Johnston, Caretaker of the Portsmouth, Makes Thrilling Night Rescue.

Harold Blair, a Baltimore yachtsman, was rescued from drowning in the Hudson at Hoboken early yesterday by Jack Johnson, the veteran caretaker of the U. S. S. Portsmouth. Johnson nearly lost his own life in the struggle to get his man out of the water.

Johnson was making the rounds of his vessel shortly after midnight when he heard a splash and a cry from the water about twenty feet away. Without waiting to remove his clothing, he dove from the dock and reached Blair just as he was disappearing. Blair became panic-stricken and clutched his rescuer so tightly that they nearly went down together, but the sturdy Johnson swam with his man to the Portsmouth, where he got momentary relief by supporting himself and Blair from the anchor chains.

Taking off his suspenders, he tied Blair, now unconscious, to the chains with them, then climbed up the side and pulled his man up after him. He declined a monetary reward.

BULLETS FLY IN HOBOKEN STREET.

There was an exciting time yesterday afternoon when two men tried to get away from the police and made a hot run in both directions through the crowd along Washington street in Hoboken. The men gave the names of James Keenan, 25 years old, of 25 Vandam street, and Edward Bryce, of 824 Greenwich street, Manhattan.

They were arrested Wednesday while trying, it is alleged, to dispose of a horse and delivery wagon for $5. Yesterday morning they were arraigned before Recorder McGovern and remanded for further investigation. Hoboken having no city photographer, the prisoners were being led along Washington street to a regular gallery to be photographed when they broke away. Keenan was caught at Eighth street. Bryce, after dodging three bullets from a detective's revolver, finally ran into Odd Fellows' Hall in Washington street, where he was caught.

March of the White Guard

By SIR GILBERT PARKER.

(Copyright, 1908, by R. F. Fenno & Co.)

CHAPTER I.

"Ask Mr. Hume to come here for a moment, Gosse," said Field, the chief factor, as he turned from the frosty window of his office at Fort Providence, one of the Hudson Bay company's posts. The servant, or more properly, Orderly Sergeant Gosse, late of the Scots Guards, departed on his errand, glancing curiously at his master's face as he did so. The chief factor, as he turned round, unclasped his hands from behind him, took a few steps forward, then standing still in the center of the room read carefully through a letter which he had held in the fingers of his right hand for the last ten minutes as he scanned the wastes of snow that stretched away beyond Great Slave lake to the Arctic circle and the Barren Grounds. He meditated a moment, went back to the window, looked out again, shook his head negatively, and with a sigh walked over to the huge fireplace. He stood thoughtfully considering the floor until the door opened and Subfactor Jaspar Hume entered. The factor looked up and said:

"Hume, I've something here that's been worrying me a bit. This letter came in the monthly batch this morning. It is from a woman. The company sends another commending the cause of the woman and urging us to do all that is possible to meet her wishes. It seems that her husband is a civil engineer of considerable fame. He had a commission to explore the Copper Mine region and a portion of the Barren Grounds. He was to be gone six months. He has been gone a year. He left Fort Good Hope, skirted Great Bear Lake, and reached the Copper Mine river. Then he sent back all of the Indians who accompanied him but two, they bearing the message that he would make the Great Fish river and come down by Great Slave lake to Fort Providence. That was nine months ago. He has not come here, nor to any other of the forts, nor has any word been received from him. His wife, backed by the H. B. C., urges that a relief party be sent to look for him. They and she forget that this is the Arctic region, and that the task is a well-nigh hopeless one. He ought to have been here six months ago. Now, how can we do anything? Our fort is small, and there is always dauger of trouble with the Indians. We can't force men to join a relief party like this, and who will volunteer? Who would lead such a party and who will make up the party to be led?"

The brown face of Jaspar Hume was not mobile. It changed in expression but seldom; it preserved a steady and satisfying character of intelligence and force. The eyes, however, were of an inquiring, debating kind, that moved from one thing to another as if to get a sense of balance before opinion or judgment was expressed. The face had remained impassive, but the eyes had kindled a little as the factor talked. To the factor's despairing question there was not an immediate reply. The eyes were debating. But they suddenly steadied and Jaspar Hume said sententiously, "A relief party should go."

"Yes, yes; but who is to lead them?"

Again the eyes debated.

"Read her letter," said the factor, handing him it.

Jaspar Hume took it and mechanically scanned it.

The factor had moved toward the table for his pipe, or he would have seen the other start, and his nostrils slightly quiver as his eyes grew conscious of what they were looking at. Turning quickly, Jaspar Hume walked toward the window as if for more light, and with his back to his superior he read the letter. Then he turned and said, "I think this thing should be done."

The factor shrugged his shoulders slightly: "Well, as to that, I think so, too, but thinking and doing are two different things, Hume."

"Will you leave the matter in my hands until the morning?"

"Yes, of course, and glad to do so. You are the only man who can arrange the affair, if it is to be done at all. But I tell you, as you know, that everything will depend upon a leader, even if you secure the men. . . . So you had better keep the letter for to-night. It may help you to get the men together. A woman's handwriting will do more than a man's word any time."

Jasper Hume's eyes had been looking at the Factor, but they were studying something else. His face seemed not quite so fresh as it was a few minutes before.

"I will see you at ten o'clock to-morrow morning, Mr. Field," he said quietly. "Will you let Gosse come to me in an hour?"

"Certainly. Good-night."

Jasper Hume let himself out. He walked across a small square to a log house and opened the door, which creaked and shrieked with the frost. A dog sprang upon him as he did so, and rubbed its head against his breast. He touched the head as if it had been that of a child, and said: "Lie down, Jacques."

It did so, but it watched him as he doffed his dog-skin cap and buffalo coat. He looked around the room slowly once as if he wished to fix it clearly and deeply in his mind. Then he sat down and held near the firelight the letter the factor had given him. His features grew set and stern as he read it. Once he paused in the reading and looked into the fire, drawing his breath sharply between his teeth. Then he read it to the end without a sign. A pause, and he said: "So this is how the lines meet again, Varre Lepage!" He read the last sentence of the letter aloud:

"In the hope that you may soon give me good news of my husband, I am, with all respect, Sincerely yours,

"ROSE LEPAGE."

Again he repeated, "With all respect, sincerely yours, Rose Lepage."

The dog Jacques looked up. Perhaps it detected something unusual in the voice. It rose, came over, and laid its head on its master's knee. Jasper Hume's hand fell gently on the head, and he said to the fire, "Rose Lepage, you can write to Factor Field what you dare not write to your husband if you knew! You might say to him then: 'With all love,' but not 'With all respect.'

He folded the letter and put it in his pocket. Then he took the dog's head between his hands and said: "Listen, Jacques, and I will tell you a story." The dog blinked, and pushed its nose against its master's arm.

"Ten years ago two young men who had studied and graduated together at the same college were struggling together in their profession as civil engineers. One was Varre Lepage and the other was Jaspar Hume. The one was brilliant and persuasive, the other was persistent and studious. Varre Lepage could have succeeded in any profession; Jaspar Hume had only heart and mind for one. Only for one, Jacques, you understand. He lived in it, he loved it, he saw great things to be achieved in it. He had got an idea. He worked at it night and day, he thought it out, he developed it, he perfected it, he was ready to give it to the world. But he was seized with illness, became blind, and was ordered to a warm climate for a year. He left his idea, his invention, behind him—his complete idea. While he was gone his bosom friend stole his perfected idea—yes, stole his perfected idea, and sold it for twenty thousand dollars. He was called a genius, a great inventor. And then he married her. You don't know her, Jacques. You never saw pretty Rose Varcoe, who, liking two men, chose the one who was handsome and brilliant, and whom the world called a genius. Why didn't Jaspar Hume expose him, Jacques? Proof is not always easy, and then he had to think of her. One has to think of a woman in such a case, Jacques. Even a dog can see that."

He was silent for a moment, and then he said, "Come, Jacques. You will keep secret what I show you."

He went to a large box in the corner, unlocked it, and took out a model made of brass and copper and smooth but unpolished wood.

"After ten years of banishment, Jacques, he has worked out another idea, you see. It should be worth ten times the other, and the world called the other the work of a genius, dog."

Then he became silent, the animal watching him the while. It had seen him working at his model for many days, but had never heard him talk so much at a time as he had done this last ten minutes. Jaspar Hume was generally a silent man; decisive even to severity, careless carriers and shirking under-officers thought. Yet none could complain that he was unjust. He was simply straightforward, and he had no sympathy with those who were not the same. He had carried a drunken Indian on his back for miles, and from a certain death by frost. He had, for want of a more convenient punishment, promptly knocked down Jeff Hyde, the sometime bully of the Fort, for appropriating a bundle of furs belonging to a French half-breed, Gaspe Toujours. But he nursed Jeff Hyde through an attack of pneumonia, insisting at the same time that Gaspe Toujours should help him. The result of it all was that Jeff Hyde and Gaspe Toujours became constant allies. They both formulated their oaths by Jaspar Hume. The Indian, Cloud-in-the Sky, though by word never thanking his rescuer, could not be induced to leave the Fort, except on some mission with which Jaspar Hume was connected. He preferred living an undignified, an un-Indian life, and earning his food and shelter by coarsely laboring with his hands. He came at least twice a week to Jasper Hume's log house, and, sitting down silent and cross-legged before the fire, watched the Subfactor working at his drawings and calculations. Sitting so for perhaps an hour or more, and smoking all the time, he would rise, and with a grunt, which was answered by a kindly nod, would pass out as silently as he came.

And now as Jasper Hume stood looking at his "Idea," Cloud-in-the-Sky entered, let his blanket fall by the hearthstone and sat down upon it. If Jasper Hume saw him or heard him, he at least gave no sign at first. He said in a low tone to the dog: "It is finished, Jacques; it is ready for the world."

Then he put it back, locked the box, and turned toward Cloud-in-the-Sky and the fireplace. The Indian grunted; the other nodded with the debating look again dominant in his eyes. The Indian met the look with stoic calm. There was something in Jasper Hume's habitual reticence and decisiveness in action which appealed more to Cloud-in-the-Sky than any freedom of speech could possibly have done.

Jasper Hume sat down, handed the Indian a pipe and tobacco, and, with arms folded, watched the fire. For half an hour they sat so, white man, Indian, and dog. Then Jaspar Hume rose, went to a cupboard, took out some sealing-wax and matches, and in a moment melted wax was dropping upon the lock of the box containing his Idea. He had just finished this as Sergeant Gosse knocked at the door, and immediately after entered the room.

"Gosse," said the sub-factor, "find Jeff Hyde, Gaspe Toujours, and Late Carsallen, and bring them here."

Sergeant Gosse immediately departed upon this errand. Jaspar Hume then turned to Cloud-in-the-Sky, and said, 'Cloud-in-the-Sky, I want you to go a long journey hereaway to the Barren Grounds. Have twelve dogs ready by nine o'clock to-morrow morning."

Cloud-in-the-Sky shook his head thoughtfully, and then after a pause said, "Strong-back go too?" (Strong-back was his name for Jaspar Hume). But the other either did nor or would not hear. The Indian, however, appeared satisfied, for he smoked harder afterward, and grunted to himself many times. A few moments passed, and then Sergeant Gosse entered, followed by Jeff Hyde, Gaspe Toujours, and Late Carsallen. Late Carsallen had got his name "Late" from having been called "The Late Mr. Carsallen" by the Chief Factor because of his slowness. Slow as he was, however, the stout Scotsman had more than once proved himself sound and true according to Jaspar Hume's ideas. He was, of course, the last to enter.

The men grouped themselves about the fire, Late Carscallen getting the coldest corner. Each man drew his tobacco from his pocket, and, cutting it, waited for Sub-factor Hume to speak. His eyes were debating as they rested on the four. Then he took out Rose Lepage's letter and, with the group looking at him now, he read it aloud. When it was finished Cloud-in-the-Sky gave a guttural assent, and Gaspe Toujours, looking at Jeff Hyde, said, "It is cold in the Barren Grounds. We shall need much tabac." These men could read without difficulty Jaspar Hume's reason for summoning them. To Gaspe Toujour's remark Jeff Hyde nodded affirmatively, and then all looked at Late Carscallen. He opened his heavy jaws once or twice with an animal-like sound, and then he said, in a general kind of way:

"To the Barren Grounds. But who leads?"

Jaspar Hume was writing on a slip of paper, and he did not reply. The faces of three of them showed just a shade of anxiety. They had their opinions, but they were not sure. Cloud-in-the-Sky, however, grunted at them, and raised the bowl of his pipe toward the Sub-factor. The anxiety then seemed to be dispelled.

For ten minutes more they sat so, all silent. Then Jaspar Hume rose, handed the slip of paper to Sergeant Gosse, and said, "Attend to that at once, Gosse. Examine the food and blankets closely."

The five were left alone.

Then Jaspar Hume spoke: "Jeff Hyde, Gaspe Toujours, Late Carscallen, and Cloud-in-the-Sky, this man, alive or dead, is between here and the Barren Grounds. He must be found—for his wife's sake." He handed Jeff Hyde her letter. Jeff Hyde rubbed his fingers before he touched the delicate and perfumed missive. Its delicacy seemed to bewilder him. He said in a rough but kindly way, "Hope to die if I don't," and passed it on to Gaspe Toujours, who did not find it necessary to speak. His comrade had answered for him. Late Carscallen held it inquisitively for a moment, and then his jaws opened and shut as if he were about to speak. But before he did so the Subfactor said, "It is a long journey and a hard one. Those who go may never come back. But this man was working for his country, and he has got a wife—a good wife!" He held up the letter. "Late Carscallen wants, to know who will lead you. Can't you trust me? I will give you a leader that you will follow to the Barren Grounds. To-morrow you will know who he is. Men, are you satisfied? Will you do it?"

The four rose, and Cloud-in-the-Sky nodded approvingly many times. The Sub-factor held out his hand. Each man shook it, Jeff Hyde first; and he said, "Close up ranks for the H. B. C." (H. B. C. meaning of course Hudson Bay Company.)

With a good man to lead them they would have stormed, alone, the Heights of Balaklava.

Once more Jaspar Hume spoke: "Go to Gosse and get your outfits at nine to-morrow morning. Cloud-in-the-Sky, have your sleds at the store at eight o'clock, to be loaded. Then all meet me at 10:15 at the office of the Chief Factor. Good night."

As they passed out into the semi-arctic night, Late Carscallen with an unreal obstinacy said, "Slow march to the Barren Grounds—but who leads?"

Left alone the Sub-factor sat down to the pine table at one end of the room and after a short hesitation began to write. For hours he sat there, rising only to put wood on the fire. The result was three letters; the largest addressed to a famous society in London, one to a solicitor in Montreal, and one to Mr. Field, the Chief Factor. They were all sealed carefully. Then Jaspar Hume rose, took out his knife and went over to the box as if to break the red seal. He paused, however, sighed, and put the knife back again. As he did so he felt something touch his leg. It was the dog. Jaspar Hume drew in a sharp breath and said, "It was all ready, Jacques; and in another three months I should have been in London with it. But it will go whether I go or not—Whether I go or not, Jacques." The dog sprang up and put his head against his master's breast.

With His Back to His Superior He Read the Letter.

"Good dog! good dog! it's all right, Jacques; however it goes, it's all right!"

Then the dog lay down and watched the man until he drew the blankets to his chin, and sleep drew oblivion over a fighting but masterly soul.

PLAINFIELD AND HIGH BRIDGE AT CRESCENT OVAL TOMORROW

The contest at Crescent Oval tomorrow between Clinton Avenue and High Bridge will be second only to the Plainfield-Somerville games and should attract one of the biggest crowds of the season. Manager Dorflinger received word last night that the High Bridge team and their friends will reach Plainfield at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in two special cars over the New Jersey Central. The full strength of the team will be represented and Kraft and Norton, the old Somerville battery, will be in the points and will make every effort to repeat last week's exhibition when Clinton Avenue was defeated 13 to 2.

Manager Dorflinger's colts are on edge for the contest and they are just anxious to get revenge for their trouncing in Hunterdon county. It was the second hard bump for the locals this season, Scotch Plains being the first offender a few weeks ago when they defeated Plainfield by a score of 10 to 0. Randolph is in fine condition and ready for a battle. He will be ably supported behind the rubber by Bouzler, the clever catcher from Elizabeth, while the rest of the positions will be filled by the regular men. The Public Service Corporation will run three special cars from Watchung avenue and Fourth street to the grounds at 2:30 o'clock and two cars will leave that point every fifteen minutes afterward until 3:45 o'clock to accommodate the crowds.

3 MORE CONTESTS BETWEEN PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE

Managers Ernest Dorflinger, of the Clinton Avenues, and Bogart Conklin, of the West Ends, Somerville, have agreed to extended the series of contests between the teams to five, and three more will be played during the season. The next will be played at Somerville, Saturday, August 29, and the fourth game will be on Crescent Oval, Saturday, September 19, while the fifth one will be decided on grounds to be selected later in the season.

The fans were so well pleased with the first two contests, both being won by Plainfield by a score of 3 to 1, that their appetites have been sharpened for more of the same kind of ball. Manager Conklin believes that the three additional games will serve to prove the true strength of the teams and is quite as anxious to play them as Manager Dorflinger.

HUSBAND "NOT ANGRY."

When Asked About Wife's Flight Says "Let Her Go."

When William Gorman, of Newton, was aked yesterday about the disappearance of his wife and Martin May a week ago Tuesday, he replied, "Let her go. I'm not angry."

Gorman is a grocer at Newton and his wife is a tall, handsome blonde. She met May at the home of her sister, Mrs. Philip Heintz, in Sussex, where he was employed in Mr. Heintz's bakery.

Miss Effie Conover, of Jackson avenue, leaves tomorrow for California, where she will spend a month visiting relatives.

HERE AND THERE.

Among Plainfield's oldest and most respected citizens is W. C. Duyckink, of 137 Crescent avenue, who is now ninety-three years old and enjoys perfect health and strength. Mr. Duyckink was in active business for eighty-three years and had great success. He is a great admirer of President Roosevelt and enjoys discussing his many excellent qualities. Although so far advanced in years, Mr. Duyckink keeps thoroughly posted on all topics of the day and is a fine conversationalist. He not only has made it a rule to keep posted on all the happenings of the day, but possesses an exceptional memory with which he retains his knowledge. He thoroughly enjoys a smoke and restricts himself to six cigars a day. He says he is a constant reader and admirer of The Daily Press, believing it, he says, to be the only medium through which he can keep well informed of local happenings. Mr. Duyckink is a thorough Jerseyman, having been born in New Brunswick. For over thirty years he owned the Spencer farm in Washington Valley. He is in love with Plainfield and his last days are being spent with all the comfort and pleasure that "The City Beautiful' and a fine home can afford.

SEVEN AUTOISTS FINED.

Mercer County Farmers' Crusade Against High-Speeders.

Hamilton Township, Mercer county, is witnessing a lively war between the farmers and automobilists, having for its cause the claim of the farmers that the autoists habitually break the speed laws. The first fines in the crusade were imposed yesterday, when Justice of the Peace Manfred Naar fined seven prominent Pennsylvania and New Jersey car owners on the charge of over-speeding. The fine in each case was $5 and costs.

Those who were fined were George Gerhard, of Overbrook, Philadelphia; George W. Kellenberg, of Pittsburg; John Lynch, of Uniontown, Pa.; G. B. Linnard, Frank Miller, Jr., and Thomas McDonald, of Philadelphia, and Daniel Sutter, of Mt. Holly. Seven other alleged lawbreakers will be given a hearing next Tuesday morning.

The township constables held a meeting and appealed to the Mercer County Automobile Club for aid in stopping the alleged violations. It is claimed that several accidents have been caused by the speeding machines. It is said that a wagon was demolished at Hightstown, two girls thrown out of their wagon by a collision at Edinburg and several cows have been killed. The farmers have a mile marked off on the Edinburg road, and the autoists fined were timed while running that mile.

Saloonkeeper Gets Jail Sentence.

Abraham H. Rosenbaum, alleged proprietor of the Brooklyn House, at Water Witch, near Highlands, was sentenced by Judge Foster yesterday at Freehold to five months in the county jail and to stand further commitment until the costs of prosecution are paid for selling liquor after hours on Saturday night. Rosenbaum expected a fine would be imposed and was prepared to pay it. When sentenced to prison he gasped and collapsed.

Miss Julia Meaney and Miss Margaret Meaney, of East Sixth street, are sojourning at the Laurel House, Atlantic City.

"Trusty" Escapes from County Jail.

Richard Gindell, of Elizabeth, who was committed to the county jail on two separate charges of being drunk and disorderly, the penalty being sixty days and a fine, escaped from the jail yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock. He was a "trusty" and Warden Dodd gave him the freedom of the jail at all times. He had served the sixty days and was serving the fine. Grindell had the reputation in Elizabeth of being a "no account" and it is not likely that any great effort will be made to capture him.

Mrs. George R. Vanderhoef, of West Front street, who has been detained at home by illness, has recovered.

FREAKISH LIGHTNING.

Fired House, Gave Girl Stiff Neck and Burned Umbrellas.

Freehold, Aug. 7.—Several places were struck by lightning during a severe thunder shower which visited this place yesterday afternoon. Fire resulted from one, the double house on Conover street, occupied by the families of Orsemus Griggs and Thomas and Albert Gagshaw. Mrs. Griggs was in an upstairs room at the time and did not know that the house had been struck until she saw neighbors running to the fire.

A tree in front of the residence of Hugh Mulligan, on Jackson street, was struck by lightning and Miss Elizabeth Mulligan was stunned. She could not speak for fifteen minutes, and still suffers from a stiff neck as a result of the experience.

A house on HcLean street, occupied by the family of John Emmons, was struck at the chimney. Bricks were scattered about the yard. In its course to the ground the lightning set fire to three umbrellas in the cellarway.

NEWSPAPER MEN GUESTS OF FORT AT SEA GIRT.

Newspaper men, principally members of the State Editorial Association and the Legislative Correspondents' Club, to the number of 60 or 70 and about three-score office employes from the State house, Trenton, were Governor Fort's guests at Sea Girt yesterday.

It was the last Governor's day at Camp Fort, and the executive, who has played host to politicians on most of the other occasions this summer, decided this trip to make a real holliday of it for himself as well as those he invited.

The only politics talked was in the form of queries put to the Governor by the scribes, many of whom seemed particularly anxious to find out what his position was in regard to the Colby-Raymond Senatorial fight in Essex.

ACCUSE PEACE JUSTICE.

Slow to Pay Wages He Collected for Hungarians.

Justics of the Peace Thomas L. Slugg, of Roosevelt, was before Justice of the Peace Pickersgill, at Perth Amboy, yesterday morning, accused of embezzlement by three Hungarian employes of a Roosevelt manufacturing plant. They asserted that Slugg collected wages for them and failed to turn the money over.

Slugg admitted he had had difficulty with the men over his slowness in paying them money he had collected. Counsel for the complainants was unwilling to press the charges if Slugg would make an adjustment and the case was adjourned for two weeks. In the meantime Slugg, who promised to straighten out his accounts with the Hungarians, was released on his own recognizance.

FIND "BOTTOMLESS" PIT.

Workmen In Paterson Come Near to Falling Into It.

A "bottomless" pit was unearthed yesterday by workmen making an excavation at Ellison and Colt streets, Paterson. The diggers were more than fifteen feet below the curb level when there was a sudden creak and crash and tons of dirt disappeared into the bowels of the earth.

Several of the diggers narrowly escaped being dragged along and others were so scared that they refused for a time to return to the hole, fearing that they would be swallowed up. Contractor McDonald put on an additional force of men and they are at work trying to fill the pit.

Real Estate Man Dead.

Lambert Speer, seventy-nine years old, was found dead Wednesday night seated in a chair in his home at Caldwell. Heart disease caused his death. Mr. Speer was born in Pine Brook, where for twenty years he conducted the old hotel. He went to Caldwell, where he engaged in the real estate business. He had much to do with the construction of the Caldwell Railroad, now operated by the Erie. He leaves his wife and three daughters and two sons.

R. K. Fox's Paintings Burned.

Oil paintings and objects of art belonging to Richard K. Fox were destroyed late yesterday in a fire which burned a cottage at Asbury Park, rented to Thomas Stokes, of Brooklyn. During the turmoil a negro waiter was arrested for larceny. He was caught running away with jewelry stolen from the cottage.

—Under the direction of City Engineer A. J. Gavett the street gang is reconstructing the gutters on Grant avenue, taking out the small stones and using large block stones instead.

IT RECALLS PROMISED GIFT.

Loves "Dear Bill" and Is Willing to Accept One More Term at Washington If Fifth District Really Insists.

The New York Sun's leading editorial today is so particularly interesting to the voters of the Fifth Congressional District that The Daily Press goes to the painful necessity of reproducing it in connection with a letter from a correspondent published in the same paper:

"Finance Fowler.

"In another place on this page a Newark correspondent sketches the character and political methods of the Hon. Charles Newell Fowler, a statesman known from the Delaware to where flows the Rahway, as straight and deep as he. Mr. Fowler cannot be judged with entire fairness, however, by an alien to his Congress district. In Union, in Morris, in Warren, tenacious is Mr. Fowler's hold upon the imagination and affections of a God gearing and golf playing population. In 1906 he got 19,760 votes, and his Democratic competitor, Farmer Jim Martine, only 19,208. Farmer Jim had to be a candidate. He is hardy and perennial. He was put up in 1906, we believe, because anybody else could have beaten Mr. Fowler. Who could take care of the finances of the nation if Finance Fowler was not in the House? Troy-hills and Succasuma, Parsippany and Allamuchy—where in the Fifth Jersey district is there not a pride in the statesman who makes bills by the bushel on a subject which few people understand and who is never absent from his post when it seems necessary for his re-election that he should be there? We are informed that the colored citizens of the Fifth Jersey district are greatly impressed with the financial genius of this Elizabethan.

"In regard to Mr. Fowler's famous offer to found a library our correspondent is unjust. In an impulse of generosity and before election Mr. Fowler did, we believe, offer to contribute out of his scanty store for this beneficent purpose. Afterward he saw that it would be wrong to fulfil his promise. It would like a bribe even it for a good object. It would tend to weaken the self-respect of his constituents. It would be an act of favoritism to a particular town. Mr. Fowler loves all his district with an equal love. Finally, it would be to sanction in cold blood the impulse of a moment. It would never do for Mr. Fowler's constituents to regard him as impulsive. Reserve, restraint, calculation, deliberation—these are the qualities to be expected of a man who, if he is not the peer of Hamilton and Gallatin, as his admirers believe, is at least next by no long interval to Coin Harvey. In so far, then, as Mr. Fowler disappointed foolish hopes in this library business we must approve, not blame him.

"This year Mr. Fowler's prospects are brilliant. Not only has he come grandly to the front with his denunciation of the Aldrich-Vreeland currency law—and we understand that his views are already finding support among the colored citizens of his district—but he has thrown himself on the ample bosom of Mr. Taft. 'Dear old Bill! Was in the same college with him at Yale. Have known him all my life. Has been my brother and chum always.' The impression in the Fifth district is that it would be peculiarly hideous to vote against Mr. Taft's Fowler; that it would be like voting against Mr. Taft himself.

"Still, as the cruel figures show, a change of 277 votes in 1906 would have taken Finance Fowler from the marble halls of Congress and given him back to the quarries."

Here is the letter:

"To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: I have just read with a great deal of interest the editorial in today's Sun on "The Fowler Campaign of Education" and am glad to see that you have struck the keynote of 'Fowlerism,' when you say:

" 'To those of our readers who do not grasp the significance of these momentous phrases we can only say that their ignorance is the soil in which Mr. Fowler hopes to do his ploughing and his planting.'

"The Hon. Charles N. Fowler has depended upon the gullibility of a long suffering and unsuspecting public ever since he stepped into the political arena. Endowed with a large lunged, resonant variety of canned eloquence that would shame the Peerless One himself, Fowler, 'went the limit' on wind until some of the unsuspecting public came in out of the draught.

SOME NEW ORDINANCES

Three Measures Enacted by Borough Fathers to Take Effect on August 20.

ALL ARE BENEFICIAL ONES.

One Regulates Carrying of Fire-Arms; One Distribution of Handbills and Third Creates New Election District.

Commencing Thursday, August 20, three new borough ordinances, unanimously passed on the third reading at the meeting of the North Plainfield Council last night, will go into effect in the borough. One of these prohibits, the carrying of weapons and their discharge within the borough limits, and an amendment to it on the third reading last night prohibits the distribution of circulars in the borough, guarding against the littering of the borough streets with waste paper, and the third provides for the formation of a third election district in the northern part of the borough.

The fire-arms ordinance prohibits anybody within the borough limits from carrying a "revolver, rifle, shotgun, sword, sword-cane, dagger, dirk, knife, spear, brass knuckles," or any other weapon found in an arsenal, ancient, mediaeval or modern. The only persons who can carry all or part of these weapons without being subject to arrest and a $20 fine are the police officers. The ordinance as passed for the first two readings last month had a clause excepting the carrying and discharging blank cartridges on the Fourth of July, but Councilman Woolston got after this restriction last night and the exception was struck out. Mr. Woolston said that he considered the enforcement of that clause one of the most essential things in the whole ordinance, and added that more harm was done by celebrating with blank cartridge revolvers on Independence Day than in any other way. Mayor Townsend said that inasmuch as the wife of one of the borough councilmen had been struck by a stray bullet last Fourth, he felt the same way, and the ordinance was amended on its third reading to exclude the restriction.

The waste paper ordinance will come as a blow to circular distributors in North Plainfield, prohibiting, as it does, the distribution of any papers or periodicals unless ordered or subscribed for. The ordinance creating a third election district, made imperative by the increase in voters in the borough, makes a new district of the section of the borough north of Green brook.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF C. N. ELLIOTT WELL ATTENDED.

The funeral service of Clive N. Elliott, who was drowned in the Connecticut river at Turner's Falls, Mass., on Tuesday afternoon, was held at the former home, 33 Rutgers avenue, Nutley, yesterday afternoon. It was in charge of Rev. J. Ogden Winner, pastor of the M. E. church, of which Mr. Elliott and his family were members and active workers, assisted by Rev. Mr. Mackey, of Purchase, N. Y.; Rev. Elbert Clement, of Arcola, N. J.; Rev. E. M. Garton, of West Summit, and Brother Cannon, a member of the Wesley Praying Band, of Jersey City.

A well-deserved eulogy of Mr. Elliott was paid by Pastor Winner in which he spoke of the loss to the home, the church and the community in general, adding: "Here lies a man that was saturated with the Word of God and filled with His Spirit." The other clergymen read appropriate Scripture selections and offered prayer. Miss Nellie V. R. Brown, soprano soloist of the M. E. church, sang effectingly, "Sometime, We'll Understand," "Never a Day so Dreary," and "The Christian's Good Night." The display of floral tributes was very handsome and there was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The burial was at Nutley. A number of Plainfield relatives and friends attended the obsequies.

Resumes Vacation Sojourn.

Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, who returned to this city to attend last night's Council meeting, left this afternoon to go back to Cascade Lake, N. Y., where he will remain until September 1. During his absence, L. B. Woolston, president of the Council, will be the acting Mayor.

Funeral of Isaac S. Stites.

The funeral of Isaac S. Stites will be held from the late home on Somerset street, Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock and from St. Joseph's church at 10 o'clock. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Cachoo a Patent Preparation.

S. S. Adam, of the Babcock building, of Cachoo fame, has just been granted a patent on his article.

PLAN A.O.H. CONVENTION

AT NEWARK ON AUGUST 18.

Mayor Haussling to Extend Welcome—500 Delegates Expected—State Membership 6,608.

The biennial state convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will take place August 18, in the new Auditorium, 83 Orange street, Newark. It is expected that the session will be attended by about 500 delegates, representing the various organizations and 89 divisions in the State. Division No. 4, of Plainfield, will be well represented.

In the morning of the day of the convention the delegates will attend mass at the cathedral. Following this there will be an open session at which the freedom of the city will be tendered by Mayor Haussling.

At the conclusion of the open meeting the convention will convene with State President John P. Dullard presiding. State President Dullard, in his report, will give an account of the organization in the state during the past two years. He will make a number of recommendations for the consideration of the convention. One of these will be cutting down of the representatives to the state convention to two from each division. This will make the state convention a body of 200 delegates instead of about 550. Mr. Dullard believes that by this change more deliberation and better results can be accomplished in the way of legislation, and that the various divisions can be saved a considerable amount of money in the matter of expenses of delegates.

It is understood that Mr. Dullard will not be a candidate for re-election. His principal reason for not wanting the office again is because of his inability to give the time which he feels it demands. The most probable successor to Mr. Dullard is Captain C. A Reilly, of Newark, the present state vice president.

The report of State Secretary Frank Deveraux, which will be submitted at the convention, will show that on December 31, 1907, the A. O. H. was organized in 18 counties, with a total of 89 divisions. The membership in the state is 6,608.

LEW DOCKSTADER'S MINSTRELS ARE HERE

Lew Dockstaders' minstrel troupe, seventy strong and all artists, arrived in town early this afternoon and began their rehearsals at once. A big street parade will be held in the business section at 8 o'clock tonight and on Monday night, the great black-face company will give a performance at the New Plainfield theatre. Tickets are now on sale.

Lew Dockstader, the minstrel, although a man well along in the forties, appears to be about thirty-five year. He is a dapper, well groomed man, who throws off years like a duck sheds water. The other day he was introduced to an old gentleman who looked at him keenly and said: "You're not, Lew Dockstader; you may be his son, but you're not the minstrel man. I know it."

Salvation Army at Netherwood Camp.

The service at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp last night was in charge of the local corps of the Salvation Army, and Captain and Mrs. Hopkins were in charge of the meeting. Music was a feature of the meeting, and the Salvation Army commander and his wife were especially impressed with the enthusiasm shown by the mothers and children at the camp in singing the various gospel hymns. They have arranged to be at the camp some evening this month to teach the children some of the Salvation Army songs. The speakers had forceful messages, which they delivered especially to the children.

Funeral of William J. Kiely.

The funeral sevice of William J. Kiely, whose sudden death occurred Thursday night while he was returning from Asbury Park, will be held from the late home at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and at 3 o'clock from St. Joseph's church. Rev. W. H. Miller, the pastor, will be in charge. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

DeCamp Takes Gaub's Place.

Callman John DeCamp, of the North Plainfield fire department, has been appointed for regular duty at borough headquarters during the absence of Lieutenant William Gaub, who started his ten days' vacation today.

UNION CO. REPUBLICANS ENJOY ANNUAL OUTING

Five hundred Republicans of Union county left Elizabethport this morning on the steamboat "Sea Gull," for their annual outing at Witzel's Grove on Long Island. All parts of the county were well represented by the "regulars," Elizabeth turning out the biggest crowd. Included among those who made the trip was Hamilton F. Kean, Captain Robert F. Kirkland, the prospective candidate for sheriff, and all the Republican office-holders at the county seat.

The start from the 'Port was made at 10 o'clock and after a two hours' sail the Grove was reached. The day will be spent in athletic sports and talking politics.

VISITING MINISTERS IN LOCAL PULPITS

With such an array of ministerial talent occupying the pulpits of the Plainfield and North Plainfield churches, there will be no excuse for Plainfielders who are at home from remaining away from divine services tomorrow. In each instance the supply is a well-known divine and worshippers are assured of hearing a good sermon. The supplies announced for tomorrow as as follows:

First M. E. church, Rev. Dr. Geo. B. Dougherty, of West Orange; no evening service. First Baptist church, morning and evening, Rev. Dr. F. W. Lockwood, of Pittsfield, Mass. Park Avenue Baptist church, Rev. O. T. Stewart, of Roxborough, Philadelphia; no evening service. Faith chapel, morning and evening, Rev. J. A. Cubberly, of Worcester, N. Y. First Presbyterian church, morning and evening, Rev. Percy F. Schelley, of Phillipsburg. Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, morning and evening, Rev. Dr. J. G. Mason, of Metuchen. Hope chapel, morning and evening, Rev. Fred B. Newman, of Trenton. Warren chapel, morning and evening, Rev. Mr. Porter, of Coal Run, Ohio. Trinity Reformed church, Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick; no evening service. Monroe Avenue M. E. church, morning, Rev. Edward F. Randolph, of Philadelphia; evening, service in interest of Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, addresses by Miss Sara Curry and George E. Hall. Congregational church, Rev. Dr. James M. Whiton, editor of Outlook; no evening service.

There will be no services in St. Peter's German Lutheran church on account of repairs. Rev. William B. Hamilton, of Elizabeth, will be in charge of the Gospel meeting at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp at 4 o'clock. J. D. Loizeaux will speak at the Plainfield Rescue Mission tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. V. Pennington, of Newark, will speak at the Gospel Mission, East Front street and Bank place, tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock.

Record Month for Arrests.

During the month of July, there were forty-six arrests made by the North Plainfield police, according to the report of Borough Recorder Dolliver at last night's meeting of the Borough Council. This is the largest number of arrests in the history of the borough in a single month, but is in a measure accounted for by the fact that on several occasions there were six or seven persons taken at a single haul. The borough has made money off this increase in police activity, and the Recorder turned over $84 in fines as a result of sentences imposed.

William Koghan Leaves Hospital

William Koghan, the boiler maker, who was overcome with the heat on Thursday while working on the P. S. C. gas-holder, and was removed to the hospital, recovered sufficiently to leave the institution this morning. He will probably return to his job on Monday. Koghan is from Chicago and was tramping to New York. When he reached Plainfield on Wednesday he obtained a job with the P. S. C. and decided to remain here for the present.

MARTINE INVITES BRYAN

Sends Message to Nebraskan Urging Him to Make Three Speeches in New Jersey.

HE MAY CARRY THE STATE?

Farmer-Orator Naturally Thinks Bryan Has a Chance Here—Wants Him to Visit Cedar Brook Again.

Acting on his own volition, he says, James E. Martine, Bryan's closest personal friend in New Jersey, today wrote the Nebraskan requesting urgently that he visit this State during the campaign. "The Farmer-orator," renamed "Old Faithful," in his letter declared that there is to his mind a probable chance of carrying the State for the Democratic National ticket next November and that he considered that Mr. Bryan should make a personal visit to the State before November 1.

"I consider that it would be expedient for our cause that you make at least three speeches for us," wrote Mr. Martine, "and I would suggest that you speak at Newark, Jersey City and Trenton; by all means at Newark."

When The Daily Press correspondent asked Mr. Martine whether James Smith, Jr., had prompted him to do this, he stated that he had neither seen the former Senator, nor communicated with him directly or indirectly since they met at the Denver convention. "I don't need any one to tell me what I should do; I'm old enough in politics to be my own guardian," he added.

"Our party is a unit today for you," he wrote, "for no matter how much some may have disagreed before the nomination was made they stand together fighting for the good old cause. I have positive assurance that Senator Smith will warmly support your candidacy."

Mr. Bryan was invited to spend a night while in Jersey at Cedar Brook farm, Martine's home, to which he is no stranger. Three letters received within the last week by the Plainfielder from "prominent and wealthy Plainfield Republicans" promising their vote to the Nebraskan were enclosed in the message. Mr. Martine refused to give out for publication the names of these converts as he termed them.

P. P. A. INVITED TO HELP THE BOROUGH

Endorsing the work of the Plainfield Protective Association, "which keeps a pretty close watch on the affairs of the city and borough," Mayor Samuel Townsend urged at last night's meeting of the North Plainfield Council that the organization be invited to turn its attention more particularly to the borough than heretofore. The Councilmen unanimously voiced their approval of the Mayor's suggestion, authorizing Mr. Townsend to communicate with the officers, inviting them to have a representative at the various Council meetings.

"The P. P. A. has not been devoting much time to our borough affairs," said the Mayor, "and I should like to have its members understand that we "borough fathers" want suggestions and information in connection with the agitation of certain questions. I should welcome representatives of the organization as Mayor of North Plainfield, for I am glad to see the taxpayers take an interest in our work and we would welcome some of the criticism such as has been devoted to the city.

"I recently met the president of this organization, and urged him to devote some attention to borough doings. I wish we might have representatives of the P. P. A. here at all of our meetings."

Upon motion of Councilman Smith, it was decided to extend this invitation to the organization through its secretary.

First Woman to Contribute.

In justice to "M. F. R.," correction is made of the statement in yesterday's issue that "An American Woman," was the first local woman to contribute to the fund being raised by The Daily Press for the monument to be erected by the Cleveland Memorial Association of New Jersey. "M. F. R." is entitled to that honor. The local subscriptions now aggregate $334.20.

Will Sell on Co-operative Plan.

The strip of land known as the McDonough Brothers' tract in the West End of the city has been sold by M. F. Gano to the Co-Operative Land Delevopment Association, of 113 East Front street, and is to be sold off rapidly through a co-operative plan as a residential section.

BOROUGH FATHERS' WORK

Much Routine Business Transacted at Meeting of North Plainfield Councilmen.

NEW FIRE BOX FOR SCHOOL.

Health Board Urges Action On Sanitary Proposal—Sewage System and Other Matters Acted Upon.

The petition for a fire alarm box in front of the Watchung School, presented at last night's meeting of the Borough Council, signed by members of the North Plainfield Board of Education and the parents of many of the pupils who attend the school, was granted, and the box will be immediately purchased the placed in position.

This ruling of the Council marks the culmination of a strongly organized attempt to secure better fire protection at the borough school, and was passed last night without any semblance of opposition. Two months ago, the Board of Education presented a petition for the installation of this box, but without success. After delaying a month, the Council agreed to place a box at the school and maintain it there if the Board would stand for the expense of its purchase.

Since then, the petition has been circulated, and a long list of names was signed to it at its presentation last night. The petition stated that the need of a box at the school was urgent, because the nearest fire box now is at Mountain and Westervelt avenues, and a loss of four minutes was involved if an alarm from the school was sent in from this box.

A communication from Dr. A. H. Dundon, as secretary of the Board of Health, was received at last night's meeting regarding the need of sewers. At their meeting a few nights ago, the members of the Board discussed the need of sewers in the borough and it was the consensus of opinion that the sooner a system was installed, the better it would be for the general health of North Plainfielders. Mayor Townsend endorsed the action of the Board as from a body vitally interested in the matter. "The Board of Health," he said, "is the department which naturally is most directly in contact with the needs for this improvement. As soon as the corporation counsel returns from his trip abroad, I sincerely hope something will be done about sewers, and I hope that before many more meetings pass, we shall have something definite to announce about the installation of a system here in North Plainfield."

Councilman VanArdsdale asked what was going to be done about the extension of Watchung avenue to Somerset street, so strongly agitated several meetings ago. The Mayor replied that, pending the installation of a sewer system, he thought it well to lay over the matter, claiming that there would be considerable damage to the roads anyway, if they have to be torn up to lay a sewer. Mr. VanArdsdale took this to refer to the proposed improvement of Watchung avenue, and quickly asked: "Do you mean that there will be sewers there?" "Well, I hope so," replied Mr. Townsend, "there ought to be."

Permits for two two-story frame houses to be erected in Orchard Park were granted. One was from A. D. Edgar and the other from the Orchard Park Improvement Association. William Trembath was granted a permit for an addition to his printing shop on Chatham street. B. F. Scriven and others presented a petition urging that the borough fix up Rock road, a continuation of Rock avenue above Greenbrook road, which was reported to be in a dangerous condition for traffic. The petition was laid over, for it is believed that but a short stretch of this road, if any, is within the borough limits.

Council Rooms Spick and Span.

Last night's session of the Borough Council was the first since the council chamber has been re-tinted and re-decorated. The walls are now tinted a gray-green and the woodwork has been revarnished. The walls in the sleeping quarters of the firemen have been re-tinted and all woodwork on the second floor of the building has been revarnished. Councilman McGee was the only absentee at last night's meeting.

WELCOME MAJOR MARTIN

Big Celebration at Elizabeth Tonight and Plainfielders Will Join in Celebration.

GETS DAILY PRESS WIRELESS.

On Behalf of the People of Plainfield This Paper Sends Him Congratulations by Wireless—The Program.

Plainfield, Aug. 8, 9:30 a. m.
Major William B. Martin,
Steamship "New York," American Line.
The people of Plainfield, and Company K, extend to you hearty congratulations and welcome.
The Daily Press.

When the American Line S. S. New York was far below Sandy Hook today the above wireless was handed to Major William B. Martin, formerly captain of Co. K, of this city, who with the other members of the victorious American rifle team were homeward bound. The major is a member of the Yankee team which won the world's championship in the Olympic meet at Bisley, England, and when he gets to his home town, Elizabeth, late this afternoon a big celebration will be held in his honor.

Tonight's demonstration will be the greatest reception ever given to a private citizen in this State, and hundreds of Plainfielders will participate in it. The boys of Co. K, who owe their present enviable position in the National Guard of New Jersey to his work as commandant, will be on hand to greet their late captain, and private citizens galore from here will poin with them.

Although the City Council of Elizabeth took prompt action in planning a fitting welcome to Major Martin, Plainfield's city fathers unfortunately have taken no recognition of his great achievements abroad. Consequently, The Daily Press, on behalf of the people of Plainfield, sent him a greeting by wireless, which he read when the big ocean liner was still far out on the ocean.

Not only the city but the State, and perhaps the nation, will join in the expression of appreciation to Major Martin, for Thomas J. Hillery, president of the Senate, will be on hand as the personal representative of Governor Fort, who will send a message of regret, and President Theodore Roosevelt is expected to send a few words of congratulation for the guest of honor.

In the program which has been arranged is included a big parade of State militia and local organizations, a display of fireworks, speeches by State and local officials, and a banquet, at which leading residents of the city will do honor to Major Martin. All the indications are that this is going to be one of the most notable events celebrated hereabouts in many years.

General Dennis F. Collins is chairman of the committee appointed by Mayor Ryan to make arrangements. Last night he sent a message to the Major aboard the New York by wireless notifying him of the intended celebration, as follows:

Elizabeth's Wireless Greeting.

"City of Elizabeth awaits your homecoming. Official celebration planned. Mayor and committee will meet you in the lower bay."

This afternoon at 1 o'clock the committee, with General Collins at its head, went to New York harbor on a tug loaned by the Standard Oil Company, and be taken aboard the Mohawk, which steamed out to take the returning riflemen off the New York. The Mohawk has been secured by the National Rifle Association, which will hold a celebration aboard ship. When the celebration is over the committee will take Major Martin off with them in their tug back home.

The tug will dock at East Jersey

WESTFIELD.

Westfield Council Police Committee has given permission for the bicycle road races this afternoon. All arrangements have been made. A large number of entries will make it necessary to run the one-mile race in two heats, should all who have entered appear at the start.

Arrangements have been made by the Garwood Sewer Committee whereby the borough will have a right to run sewage from the Westfield side of the borough through the Rahway system, which will give Garwood a sewer direct to tidewater at a cost of about $30,000.

Garwood Council finds that it cannot award the contract for constructing the sewers for the next ten days, owing to the fact that the ordinance authorizing the sewer does not become effective until August 15.

Westfield Council is advertising for bids for laying 800 feet of vitrified brick pavement on Broad street.

AMUSEMENTS.

Among the all star contributors to the program that will be offered to the proctor patrons at Newark during the week, commencing August 10, doubtless none will be accorded a more cordial welcome than James Thornton, America's greatest and best monologuists. Violet Dale, the well-known mimetic comedienne, will appear in a picturesque musical comedy in one act entitled "A Mexican Tangle." Another pleasing feature will be a sketch entitled "Shorty," that will serve to introduce Richard Crolius and company. The three Cibelli Bros., seen here for the first time, are the possessors of unusually fine voices. "The Marshall," from the pen of T. H. Davies and presented by Anita Hendrie and company, special effects are carried. Catharine Hayes and Sabel Johnson, two popular comediennes, will surely find favor here. The three La Maze brothers offer a comical acrobatic turn. Lightning Hopper is an artist of considerable ability and gets much merriment out the apparent animation of his pictures. New animated pictures.

Henrietta Crosman in her great success, "Mistress Nell," under the direction of Henry B. Harris in conjunction with Maurice Campbell, will inaugurate her season at the Academy of Music in New York on Thursday night, August 13. The revival of "Mistress Nell" by Miss Crosman comes at a most opportune time, and her friends and admirers are very anxious to see her once more in this swash-buckling part. As everybody knows who has followed theatricals at all, Miss Crosman came into New York several years ago with "Mistress Nell" and scored the greatest success that has ever been recorded on Broadway. Henrietta Crosman and "Mistress Nell" were unknown before the opening night, but in twenty-four hours they were both famous the country over and the play and star enjoyed a run of nearly two years in the different Broadway houses. With Miss Crosman's appearance as "Mistress Nell" at the Academy of Music she will have played the part more than 1,000 times. It is probable that "Mistress Nell" has made more money than any other play that has been produced in years. Certainly no play was as much talked about. Since its original production Miss Crosman has not been seen in the play except on one occasion, so that the revival at the Academy is comparatively an event of importance among the new productions of the year. Miss Crosman will be at the Academy for two weeks and a half, opening in "Mistress Nell" to be followed by Miss Crosman as Rosalind in "As You Like It," a part that has also become identified with her because of a long run at the Balesco theatre. There will be matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

With a typical American drummer as the central figure, James Forbes' comedy, "The Traveling Salesman," opens the Henry B. Harris season at the Liberty theatre on August 10. The new piece is built about the life and doings of one Bob Blake, a traveling salesman, and Mr. Forbes has shown, it is said, in the new comedy the same keen insight into human nature that was evinced by his former play, "The Chorus Lady," the characters being drawn with the same vividness and power which characterized all the roles in the former big success.

Bubbling over with fun and laughter, with the stage crowded to the utmost with pretty girls who dance and sing with an enthusiasm possitively exhilarating, "The Girl Question" opened at Wallack's Monday, August 3, for an indefinite run under the management of the Askin-Singer Co. "The Girl Question" is a musical play with an absorbing story of human heart interest developed in its part yet filled with such humorous types of characters and situations that an audience is kept in an almost continual stream of laughter. It is written by Adams, Hough and Howard, authors of "The Time, The Place and The Girl," and is along the same slangy, funny lines of every day life as that wonderful success. "The Girl Question" has been staged by George Marion universally acknowledged to be a past master of stage direction and who produced "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Merry Widow," "The Stubborn Cinderella," "The College Widow," and dozens of other record breaking hits and Mr. Marion's name is an assurance that the play will be full of dramatic climaxes, beautiful stage pictures of color and ensemble as well as pretty, graceful dancers replete with action.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A Woodbury man counted 205 market teams one night this week on the road between Gloucester and Woodbury.

Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate for President, will speak at a mass-meeting in Taylor Opera House, Trenton, October 14.

Gloucester City Council Thursday night received eight bids for the street cleaning contract and referred them to the Street Committee.

Charged with robbing a melon patch, Dominick Costello and Joseph Laconi, of Buena Vista, were held under $100 bail each at Millville.

A pair of horses hitched to a heavy harrow belonging to Henry Patrick, of Glassboro, became frightened and ran away a distance of two miles without breaking the harness or harrow.

Congressman Loudenslager, accompanied by his family, went to New York Thursday, where they will reside while he is filling the office of secretary of the Republican national committee.

Unable to pay fines of $5 each, imposed by Justice Wright on a charge of driving a horse unfit for use, Frank Niskel and Joseph Nowiki were committed to the Camden county prison Thursday night.

Edward J. Settle, colored, of Glassboro, has had a warrant issued for a farmer's wife who sold him a pound of butter which made his family ill. Analyzed by a doctor, it was found to contain ground glass.

The residence of William Allen, a prominent farmer, a mile and a half from Westfield, was destroyed by fire Thursday afternoon. The origin of the fire is a mystery, as there was no one at home and no fires in the house. Mr. Allen and his family had gone early in the morning to attend a farmers' picnic.

Found unconscious in a boathouse at the foot of Jasper street, Camden, with an empty laudanum bottle by her side, Mrs. Mary Wiley, aged twenty-four, was rushed to Cooper Hospital yesterday afternoon. She was still in a state of coma last night, and the doctors entertain but little hope for her recovery. Neighbors are of the opinion that she was driven insane by the heat.

In farm wagons, automobiles, trains and trolley cars, the farmers of southern Jersey, their wives, children and sweethearts journeyed Thursday to attend the fourteenth annual farmers' picnic, held at Washington Park, on the Delaware. They came from Burlington, Camden, Cumberland, Gloucester and Salem counties. By noon a crowd of over fifty thousand persons had gathered.

While Othmar E. Schmid, of Camden, foreman of the street cleaning corps, was watching the city street cleaners at Fourth street and Kaighn avenue, yesterday, an automobile in turning the corner of the street skidded, struck Mr. Schmid and rolled him over in the mud the cleaners had piled in heaps on the street. Schmid sustained a contused hip and was badly shaken up. He took the number of the auto and allowed the chauffeur to continue on his way to the ferry.

HE FORGAVE HIS WIFE FOR HIS BOY'S SAKE.

Refusing at first to receive the wife who had taken his savings and eloped with a farmhand, Isaac Weinraub, of Milltown, finally relented Thursday. Their three-year-old son refused to leave the mother. The father's efforts to win over the child were unavailing. Finally Weinraub declared that in order to get back the child he would yield to her pleadings. "But I take her back only temporarily," he said to Detective Charles A. Oliver, in whose office at New Brunswick the attempt at reconciliation was made. "I do not know what I shall do in the future."

Charles H. Benson, employed on the Weinraub farm, and Mrs. Weinraub, left Milltown on July 2. The woman took with her the child and $434 of her husband's savings. Weinraub engaged Detective Oliver to trace them. He located the woman and child in New York Thursday. Benson had deserted them. Mrs. Weinraub said the money had all been spent, and she was practically penniless. She was bitterly repentent, and wished to return home if her husband would let her.

The detective brought her and the boy to his office at New Brunswick and sent for Weinraub. Weinraub made every effort to persuade the child to leave the mother and come to him. He paid no attention to her tearful pleadings for forgiveness, but said he wanted only the boy. The child, however, clung to the mother and refused all the father's overtures.

DO YOU CONTEMPLATE A YACHTING TRIP?

Of course, it goes without saying that persons subject to seasickness should not go upon a yachting trip, for not only will they themselves derive no pleasure from the voyage, but they will succeed in spoiling the good time of every other member of the party.

Besides, most yachts do not carry a surgeon, as large vessels do, and if you should become seasick while on one of these little pleasude boats you would be in a very bad fix, indeed. It is unwise to entrust yourself to the mercies of any well meaning, but nevertheless ignorant, person, who will administer remedies that he or she has "heard" are good, but of which he or she has had no actual experience.

If it is your first trip, however, and you consequently do not know how the sea will affect you, then by all means go, for if you have a reasonably strong stomach and sufficient will power there is no reason at all why you should be sick. Half of the mal de mer suffered by voyagers is really caused by a feeling that seasickness is a malady from which there is no escaping, which everybody suffers from, and which without doubt will fall to your lot also.

If, however, all the reasoning in the world does not prevent you from becoming sick, do not make the mistake of dosing yourself up with sleeping potions, for many of these contain such drugs as cocaine, chloral and chloroform, which should never be taken except with the advice of a physician.

Stimulating drinks should also be avoided, for while they likewise have the effect of putting the patient to sleep he will wake up much worse than he was before, for in addition to the pangs of mal de mer he will now be suffering from the effects of the stimulant. An exception might be made in favor of champagne, but, owing to its cost, there is no danger that it will be widely used as a remedy.

The beneficial effect of this wine is largely due to the carbonic acid gas which it contains. Soda water also contains this gas, and so practically the same amount of relief can be obtained by using it instead.

As soon as you feel the slightest degree of discomfort, retire at once to your cabin, and go to bed. Stretch yourself at full length on one side, and if you use any pillow at all, let it be a very low one. Compose yourself to sleep, and if your stomach is really strong you will awake feeling all right.

In case you do not, however, or if you do not sleep at all, then it is best to do nothing for two hours. Just resign yourself to your fate and let the disease take its course.

By the time the stomach should be empty. Now take a glass of warm water, which in most cases will be shortly ejected.

You may then take half a drachm of bromide of potassium in as large a quantity of water as you think you can swallow. If the solution is diluted enough it will stay down, but if it is too concentrated it will have the effect of making you vomit again.

In either case go to bed for another hour or so, and then repeat the dose. It should not be long before you will find yourself able to sleep, and when you awake you will discover that you are prodigiously hungry, and decide that yachting is really not such a bad sport after all.

GREAT CHANCES FOR SPINSTERS IN PANAMA.

One place in this world where women seem to be at a premium is in the canal zone. The women employed in the zone are very few in proportion of the men. Of the total in excess of 6,500 employes of the government, 207 are women. Their salary is about what the average man makes here in our cities, or in actual figures they make $73 a month.

It is not that the government prefers men employes to women, but the expense of quartering women would be so much more expensive than arranging for men that the latter are employed instead.

Many of the women are employed as stenographers, telegraphers, copyists, timekeepers and clerks, although the great majority of them are either teachers or nurses. The chief woman clerk receives a salary of $175, whereas the lowest salary is $25 to a matron. The majority of the women are wives to the men working on the Isthmus, and are provided with married quarters.

It is only in a very few instances that women who apply for positions in the zone are accepted. If they are not accepted as wage earners, however, they are making a good record for being accepted as wives. Girls who go to the zone to visit brothers and uncles seldom return to the United States.

There is such a scarcity of wives on the Isthmus that almost every girl who goes to the zone marries an ambitious young man down there. She has her innings in one way if not in another.

TAKE CARE OF THE FEET.

At this season of the year the feet should be treated with the utmost care. It is at this time that all troubles begin. If the feet do not irritate one at any other time of the year they are apt to become tender and sore now, if not properly treated.

Twice a day they should be bathed in cool water and softened with a cooling toilet powder, which will absorb the perspiration and keep them dry.

All corns and callous places should be carefully removed, if not by a chiropodist, then at home, as soon as they have been well soaked in warm water.

If the feet are inclined to swell during the hot days bathe them frequently in hot salt water.

Wear shoes that are cooling to the feet. The stockings should be of the thinnest lisle.

Every one should keep at least two pairs of shoes for change. If a business woman she should change the shoes which she has worn during the day for another pair in the evening.

This is an important factor in the care of the feet.

THE PICNIC SHELF IN THE PANTRY.

They who go a-picnicking must needs consider the question of lunch, and it greatly helps the preparations for a day's jaunt if all the packing material and all the favorite picnic recipes are kept in one place in the kitchen cupboard, just as one keeps an "emergency shelf" for company, says Delineator. When summer approaches arrange also a "picnic" shelf" and the preparing and packing of a lunch will lose all its terrors.

There should be some big sheets of heavy brown paper, one of which, neatly folded, should be put in the bottom of the basket. This is to be the tablecloth. Then there should be a supply of paper napkins, and also a supply of paraffin paper in which to wrap the eatables. If you do not live near a store which sells paraffin paper, save all the linings from your cracker-boxes. There should be two inexpensive salt and pepper shakers, a corkscrew for the ginger ale bottles, some drinking glasses or cups and a few knives, forks and spoons.

Clinton Avenue vs. High Bridge at Crescent Oval, this afternoon, should be a strong attraction. The contest will be called at 4 o'clock.

Foxen, formerly of the Jersey City Eastern League Club, but now with the Phillies, is rated as one of the Quaker's star twirlers. He helped to defeat Chicago twice on Thursday.

The Cincinnati team is scheduled to play at Elizabethport tomorrow, and Spade is advertised to pitch for them.

Even the most ardent supporter of the Yankees has ceased to root for the Hilltoppers. They are in positive disgrace and experts declare that they should be assigned to a minor league. Thursday they lost their twelfth straight contest and there appears to be no hope for a victory.

Beecher, who is pitching for the Newark Eastern League Club, has not lost a game since joining the Newarkers.

The Giants failed this week to tie Pittsburg for first place and the supporters of the team are still hoping that the Smoky City aggregation may yet be caught and overtaken.

The New York newspapers are putting it up strong to Owner Farrell, of the Yankees, as to the wretched playing of his team and declare that unless immediate action is taken to change the order of things the support of the fans will fade away to such an extent that the team will have to disband. They also declare that no one wants to see the team play the kind of ball being put up during the past few months.

Barry, a hard-hitting and fast fielding player from the West, has been signed by McGraw to play left field in place of Harry McCormick, who is not showing up strong.

GOLF.

There will be an open tournament for professionals, the prizes aggregating $600, at Van Cortlandt Park on September 1 and 2. The opportunity to see the noted experts of the game on the public links has been greatly appreciated by the public. This year it seemed that there would be a break in the sequence of these tournaments, but the Scottish American Golf Club has come forward and will run the tournament. The committee in charge is made up of O'Connell, Craig and MacCarter.

There was an interesting four ball match at the Baltusrol Golf Club Thursday, in which George Low and F. R. Upton, Jr., played against Jack Hutchinson, of St. Andrews, and E. H. McAdoo, Jr. The Baltusrol pair, Low and Upton, won by 2 up and 1 to play.

A. W. Cameron won the president's cup at Ridgewood Golf Club on Saturday in an eighteen hole bogey competition.

As the Herald cup tournament is to be held at Van Cortlandt Park on September 2, 3 and 4 the professional tournament of the Scottish American Golf Club will be held on August 31 and September 1. The first prize will be $150, and all the other prizes of the same value as last year. Entries will close with S. B. MacClinton, secretary of the tournament, 56 Pine street, New York.

The Vermont State golf championship tournament began on the Rutland Country Club links Thursday. In the eighteen hole medal play qualifying round in the morning Frederick Herreshoff, Ekwanok, was tied for first place at 82 with J. D. Woodfin and Dr. E. M. Pond, both of the Rutland Country Club. In the afternoon Herreshoff, who was champion in 1904, defeated C. M. Clark, Ekwanok, 3 up and 2 to play. E. W. Clark, 3d, Ekwanok, champion last year, was 1 down to J. D. Woodfin.

At a meeting of well known golfers this week it was voted to inaugurate an "annual Poland spring championship golf tournament," and August 13, 14 and 15 were selected as the dates for the opening contest. The action is due to the efforts of Dr. W. S. Harban, of the Columbia Golf Club, Washington, D. C., and Isaac B. Johnson, of the Ardsley Golf Club. Two divisions of sixteen each will play for the championship and the Maine State cup, and there will also be trophies for the runner-up in each division.

Organization has been affected by the choice of Dr. W. S. Harban, Columbia Golf Club, as chairman; Herbert L. Jillson, of the Pine Hurst Golf Club, as secretary; Garret A. Hobart, of the North Jersey Country Club, as treasurer, and George W. Elkins, Philadelphia Country Club; Isaac B. Johnson, Ardsley; Frank S. Layng, Garden City, and W. C. Chick, Oakley, as other members of the committee.

TO KEEP THE WHITE SWEATER IMMACULATE.

In summer a girl's sweater is her most important as well as her most useful garment. If her shirt waists are badly made, or shoes shabby, that is a minor consideration, but her sweater must be immaculate and up to date.

Every girl likes to wear nothing but white during the outing season, and great is her disgust when her mother insists upon her having a gray sweater for economy's sake, in the firm belief that the darker shade keeps clean longer and that all woolen goods are impossible to wash.

If proper care is taken sweaters can be washed all the time without hurting their shade and color. Fill a large bowl or basin with warm water and good soapsuds, add a teaspoonful of powdered borax to keep the wool from becoming hard and stiff.

If the sweater is white put a little bluing in the water every time it is rinsed. This will prevent it from turning a deep ivory, as all white wool materials are apt to do.

After washing wring out, then pin to a large bed pillow. Be sure not to stretch the sweater, or it will lose its shape.

"Fowler's next move (just before election, of course) was to announce to the citizens of his home city, the centre of population in his Congress district, that if they would support it by an increase in the already burdensome tax rate he would give a palatial public library built entirely of white marble from his quarry in Vermont. A site was picked out, plans were drawn and exhibited in prominent shop windows and an unsuspecting public whispered: 'How noble and generous he is!' and 'I wonder if he is going to be another Andy Carnegie.' Election day came around; unsuspecting public hopped on; Fowler was elected; no need for a library for another term. The people might get too wise; their ignorance is the soil in which Mr. Fowler hopes to do his ploughing and his planting.

"Now the Hon. Charles N. Fowler plays with finance to keep the balloon of his political hopes afloat on the atmosphere of public opinion. His annual bills, crazy quilts of financial folly, have kept him pretty well advertised, far better than if his face were published at the head of a philanthropic get rich quick advertisement.

"Fowler's folly has had a pretty good run for its money. A persistent rumor whispers that, like Jim Martine, he is to be nominated again because the party has no other horse for the race. Let us hope that the voter's ignorance, in which Fowler 'hopes to do his ploughing and his planting,' will bring forth a crop of lemons this time that the unsuspecting public may have a rest.

"What Is Death"

Fourth of a Series on Heaven by

REV. DR. CHARLES E. HERRING

Some men would define death as extinction of being. In their theory, something that was not, became, lived a few years, and now is no more. In the teaching of our Lord, death is a passing over. He spoke of the "exodus" which He should "accomplish at Jerusalem." What was the exodus? It was the passage of Israel over the Red Sea from Egypt into the Promised Land. Christ's death was a passing over from earth into the heavenly world. Your death will be a similar exodus.

Paul spoke of his death as an "unmooring." He said to Timothy, "The time of my unmooring is at hand." he meant by this picture that the time had come when that which fastened him to earthly conditions would be severed; but the unmooring of a vessel is not the end of it. We can illustrate Paul's thought by the vessel which is on the ways awaiting completion. There enters into the construction of that vessel materials which the land produces; but when it is completed the time comes for its launching. This is the time when it fulfills the purpose for which it was made. It was never designed for the land but for the great sea. Then it is no wonder that Paul said, "to die is gain," and "to be with Christ" in the heavenly world "is far better." Some one has illustrated the relation between this life and the next by the different stages of life through which the dragon fly passes, and the illustration is in perfect accord with the teaching of Christ and Paul.

The dragon fly in the early stages of its life is a little insignificant creature whose living element is water. It knows no other element than water; until by the very instinct of its being it climbs up a stalk in the pond. What is it doing? It is reaching up to some other element. It knows not why. It is simply following some power which was born in it. Let us imagine an intelligent trout in the same pond, calling the aspiration of the dragon fly grub impossible of realization. It was born a grub, and should live a grub, and die a grub. Why pine for another element? But the grub keeps climbing up that stalk until finally the rational trout sees the body of the grub fall back to the bottom of the pond. You can imagine the intelligent trout now saying: "I told you so. That is what comes of foolish aspirations. You see here the evidence of a foolish dream. He lived a grub. He died a grub and that is the end of him."

But what really has happened? Out of that body of the grub, there has emerged a beautiful dragon fly. The old body which was his, when he was a denizen of the water, has perished; but he has not perished. He has simply emerged into another world, and never again can he live in the other element. If you ask why he does not come back and enlighten the trout as to his real condition, the answer is simple. He cannot live in the former condition; and even if the intelligent trout should be brought up into his element; a film would spread over his eyes so that he could not see.

It is a beautiful illustration, and it is true. It is but another picture of the truth Paul illustrated by the unmooring of the vessel. Death is simply th passing over into another element. What of it if the body falls to the ground? The body is not the man. He has emerged. God giveth him a body. Do we wonder why our friends do not come back and tell us something of the glory of the eternal world? Perhaps they cannot. Our Lord came out of that world and He has declared to us its glory. We can believe Him. The dragon fly cannot re-enter the former element of his life, though the water was his first home; but now he is flitting over the pond with his gorgeous colors, and in the glorious sunshine. The dragon fly trusts his instincts. Has not God implanted similar instincts in us? You feel that there must be another world as a compensation for the imperfections, sufferings and failures of this life. Is that longing for another world to be unsatisfied? Is it possible that nature is not true to itself in this particular? It provides prey for the tiger, and pasture for the lamb. What about the unutterable longings of the human heart? Caesar when all the known world was under his power is reported to have said, "and is this all?" "The human heart is but an atom of creation but the whole universe is not able to fill it."

This world does not perfectly satisfy an immortal soul. You were not made for it, any more than a vessel was made for the ways. The launching time comes for the vessel and that is a day of rejoicing and victory. This life, too, is one of preparation. It has its joys but these are nothing in comparison with the real glory which shall be revealed in us. The grub feels in its being that it was made to climb up that stalk. It trusts its instincts and climbs and God does not disappoint it.

A certain philosophical writer thus expressed man's instinct for another life: "All the subtleties of metaphysics will not make me doubt the immortality of the soul for one single moment. I feel it, I wish it, I hope for it, I will defend it with my latest breath." It is instinctive therefore. The heart was not made for the world, nor even for the material universe. It was made to realize the great plan of God. You have instincts for another world. God will make all these hopes real. Simply trust Him, and the God who satisfied the instincts of the dragon fly grub will answer your longings beyond all your expectation.

ASSASSIN SLASHES RICH MAN'S THROAT.

Morristown Contractor Escapes With Life After Desperate Fight In Street.

Nicholas Marinaro, a wealthy contractor of Morristown, while walking through Speedwell avenue, that city, yesterday, was nearly killed by an unknown man.

Armed with a long knife, the man sprang suddenly upon the contractor and slashed at his throat. Mariaro grappled with his assailant, and a desperate struggle followed, during which a long gash was cut in Marinaro's throat. Alarmed by his victim's stubborn resistance and cries for assistance, the would-be assassin fled.

The wounded man's cries soon brought succor. It was found necessary to take seventeen stitches in the cut. The blade missed the important blood vessels, and it is thought Marinora will recover.

Detectives are seeking a man who threatened to kill Marinaro two days ago because the contractor refused to give him employment.

U. S. TROOPS AT SEA GIRT.

Soon after the New Jersey National Guardsmen have deserted Sea Girt the State camp ground will be the scene of important maneuvres by detachments of United States Army troops.

Company E, Thirteenth Cavalry, will make a practice march from Fort Myer, Va., to Sea Girt, a distance of 250 miles. The company will pass through Philadelphia and Camden. Company G, Twelfth Infantry, will journey from Fort Jay, N. Y., to Sea Girt, the two detachments to reach there about Sept. 2.

LIGHTNING KILLS BOY, BADLY BURNS 2 GIRLS.

Walter Cattell's Spine Seared By Bolt That Strikes Shed Where They Sat.

Glassboro, N. J., Aug. 8.—Walter Cattell, seventeen years old, was killed by lightning about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and his sister, Mabel, sixteen years old, and Rebecca Turner, eight, were so badly burned by the bolt that it is doubtful if they will recover from the shock.

The dead boy was a son of Walter Cattell, a prosperous farmer living one mile east of Richwood. When the storm came up the children ran into the house and brought ou three chairs and sat in a row under an open shed, where they could watch the lightning.

There was a blinding flash, a bolt struck the peak of the house and the children fell unconscious to the floor. Walter was picked up dead, the lightning having run down his spine. Rebecca soon recovered consciousness, but Mabel is still in a precarious condition, her left side and stomach being badly burned.

GIFT FROM ITALY'S QUEEN TO PERTH AMBOY CHURCH.

Colombino Galassi, rector of the Church of Our Lady of the Most Holy Rosary, the Italian Catholic church in course of erection in Barclay street, Perth Amboy, was summoned to the office of the Italian Consul in Newark yesterday and was told of a bit of good news.

The information communicated to the local priest was that the Consul had received a letter from the widow Queen Marguerite, stating that she was sending a gift for the new church, to be awarded in a contest for the benefit of the congregation. Father Galassi was overjoyed at the good news, and is anxiously awaiting the arrival of the present. He is not certain as to the character of the gift, but he says he has reason to believe that it is a silver vase.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS DECLINE TO FEDERATE.

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—After referring to the different councils for decision the question of raising a fund of $500,000 for the Catholic University at Washington, D. C., asked for by Archbishop John J. Glennon, the national convention of the Knights of Columbus adjourned Thursday night to meet next year at Mobile, Ala., the date to be determined later. The closing session was attended by 2,000 persons.

One of the important actions taken Thursday was the decision not to affiliate with the National Federation of Catholic Societies.

GIRLS ROB FATHER.

Give Jewels to Boys and All Have High Times.

Upon complaint of Frederick Miskam, the largest jeweler in the northern part of Hudson county, three boys are locked up in the Union Hill jail, charged with receiving stolen jewelry from Miskam's two daughters, Minnie and Pauline. The stolen stuff will amount in value to $1,000, it is said.

The prisoners are Robert Barker, 17 years old, of 148 Spring street, Jersey City, and Nicholas Schmidt, of 428 DuBois street, West Hoboken, and Jacob Malbach, of 411 Jefferson street, Union Hill.

Miskam was puzzled for a long time about the thefts from his jewelry store, as it was well guarded from burglars. At last the mother of one of the boys went to him and told him that her son had recently shown signs of wealth and suggested his store as its source. He asked his daughter about it, and she broke down and confessed. The children used the money realized from the stuff for trips to Coney Island, bulldogs, motorcycles, etc.

ACQUITTED AFTER 24 YEARS.

Slayer Escaped from Insane Asylum and Returns For Trial.

Dr. J. D. Puryear, of Oxford, N. C., on trial for the killing of a negro twenty-four years ago, while alleged to be insane, was acquitted yesterday at Raleigh, N. C. The jury was out only ten minutes. Dr. Puryear was sent to an insane asylum twenty-four years ago, just after the first trial, but escaped to the West and returned twenty years after. He is pronounced entirely sane now, but the jury acquitted on the ground of insanity at the time of the actual crime.

ASSAILANT WIELDS KNIFE.

Nicholas Marinora Painfully Slashed Returning; from Festival.

Morristown, Aug. 8.—Nicholas Marinaro, a contractor living on Anderson street, was painfully stabbed in the neck yesterday morning while returning from a festival.

He was on Speedwell avenue, near his home ,when his assailant stepped up behind him, he says, and struck him a blow. Dr. George Johnson took fourteen stitches in the wound. Marinaro describes his enemy as a short man, dressed in gray clothes. He professed to know no reason why he should be attacked.

MEADOWS DISPOSAL PLANT.

Orange Tells Paterson She Will Try to Bring It About.

A quiet conference was held at the Mayor's office, Paterson, which was attended by Mayor McBride, City Engineer Crane and Frank G. Coughtry, of Orange, City Counsel Merrey, Finance Commissiouer Buckley, Dr. John L. Leal and City Engineer Harold J. Harder.

Though it was only an informal discussion, the representatives from Orange assured the local officials that they are in favor of a dispisal plant on the Newark meadows and that an effort will be made to have the plan adopted by the Passaic Valley Sewage Commission at the next general conference.

Silk Company Assigns.

The Taylor Silk Manufacturing Company, of Paterson, made an assignment yesterday. Anton Schmidt, of New York, was appointed assignee. The liabilities are about $30,000, and the principal creditors are importers of raw silk. The assignee believes that the company will be able to pay all its obligations.

LITERARY

It is safe to say that Edwin L. Sabin's sketch, "Bull-heads," in the August Lippincott's, will arouse tender memories in the breast of many a hard-headed business man. No fishing in later years, whether for tuna, tarpon, salmon, or any other members of the finny tribe, can ever afford quite the interest inspired by the bull-head fishing of boyhood's happy days.

The August American Magazine contains as interesting a chapter of unpublished political history as has appeared anywhere in years. It is the story of how Boss Croker, of Tammany Hall, helped William C. Whitney elect Grover Cleveland in 1892. It is a story of a grateful man and of how he "got even;" for, thirty years before the year 1892, William C. Whitney helped Richard Croker out of as tight a boxx as a man ever found himself in.

Tommy's maiden aunt had called attention to some of that young man's misdemeanors, thereby causing him to be punished. Tommy pondered a while, then asked, "Papa, will little sister Gladys be an aunt to my children when I am a man?"

"Yes, Tommy," answered his father, much interested. "Why do you ask?"

"'Cause she might as well get married and have a home of her own, for I don't intend to 'low any aunts to stay around my house, making trouble for my children."—Woman's Home Companion for August.

In the August number of "Success Magazine," under the title "A Minister's Confession," a prominent clergyman tells of his attempt to be a man and a citizen as well as a minister of the gospel. Emerson Hough discusses America's urgent need for improvements of waterways. William Mailly, who managed teh Soliaclist campaign in 1904, tells what Socialism really is and what it is not. His article is entitled "The Socialist Bugaboo." The subject of Orison Swett Marden's editorial is "New Thought—New Life." David Graham Evans writes instructingly about Industrial Bonds.

A novelette of unusual interest opens the August number of The Smart Set. It is called "The Diary of an Unconscious Eve," and is written by G. Vere Tyler, a writer who probably has as keen an insight into the feminine temperament as any living author. The situation on which the novel is founded is at once unique and daring, and the ending is so absolutely unlooked for that it will surprise even the most clever readers. A more original piece of work has not appeared in this magazine. Numereous well-known writers are represented in the August issue. Particularly interesting is Elizabeth Jordan's story, "Her Letters."

"One who was not afrair, and who spoke the truth." This is the summary that F. Hopkinson Smith makes of the character of Captain Thomas A. Scott, Master Diver, whose life he sketches in the August Everybody's. Captain Scott was a plain American, one of the "common people," with a heart full of the milk of human kindness, a hand ever ready to help and protect the weak. He was a real hero—the record of his life as a wrecker and diver proves this. It is full of instances of his nobility and sacrifice of self, and not only inspires and uplifts, but forces one to be an optimist.

The August number of the Metropolitan Magazine opens with a particularly interesting article, "Our Navy's Great Task," by John R. Winchell, illustrated with spelendid photographs taken in shipboard. John D. Wells writes of "The Scars of War in the Shenandoah," comparing with rare charm and sympathy the battlefields of forty-five years ago to their condition today. This article brings us closely in touch with the stirring and unhappy events in which our fathers played a part. "The Southwest Evolution," by Charles M. Harvey, is timely and valuable and explains how the desert is being made to blossom to make room for American progress.

A story of singular power and effectiveness is "The Forest of His Fathers," which Henry C. Rowland publishes in The Red Book Magazine for August. It is concerned with a great private estate in the north woods and the native wodmen's resentment against the multimillionaire owner.

Ths August number of The Popular Science Monthly contains the following articles: "The Hostory of the Conservation of Energy; the Age of the Earth and the Sun," by Professor Florian Cajori; "Florissant; a Miocene Pompeii," by Professor T. D. A. Cockerell; "Crimes of Violence in Chicago and in Greater New York," by Maynard Shipley; "The Movement towards 'Physiological Psychology," by Professor R. M. Wenley; and "The Nature, Origin and Function of Humor," by Dr. Linus W. Kline.

The August number of the Atlantic Monthly, the first issue to apepar under imprint of The Atlantic Monthly Company, is full of fresh and inviting material. Charles D. Stewart, the well-known author of "The Fugitive Blacksmith," writes "The Story of Bully," a stirring and full-blooded tribute to one of man's most useful servants, the ox. The description of the tug of war in which Bully conquered his rival is as fine a piece of descriptive writing as has appeared for many months.

Unalloyed enjoyment of the water's refreshing coolness is shown on the face of the boy looking out from the front cover of the August American Boy, and the contents of the magazine just fits in with the vacation season. The fine serials of Houston, Tomlinson, and Optic, with Weir's story of his experiences Under the Great White Canvas continue with increasing interest.

The methods of the "shadow theatre" have been subject to many variations. Some shadow plays have been produced with living actors whose profiles have been projected on a screen. This farm is known in the United States. The archaic form, now revived, uses images cut out of card or wood or leather. In Arabia the shadow figures were of colored leather, through which the light behind threw on the screen which faced the spectator a dull glow like stained glass. Baron von Bernus is to take his shadow plays through Germany—in an educational spirit—and perhaps some day they may be seen in the United States.—August Technical World.

As the country had a right to expect, the reversal by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the decision of the District Court against the Standard Oil Company which involved the $29,000,000 fine has had a bracing effect on general trade. The case goes back to the lower court for a new trial, in which hysteria will probably have a smaller part than it had in the suit which has just been set aside. We must prevent prosecution from degenerating into anything which may look like persecution.—James W. Van Cleave, President National Association of Manufacturers, in American Industries for August.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE HAT.

This hot July sun will quickly reduce a colored hat to shabbiness. The ribbon and flowers will fade, and the straw will sunburn in a most unsightly manner. Now it is sometimes possible to rejuvenate the whole without removing the trimming, for to do the later you run the risk of never getting it on again in just that graceful way that the trained fingers do.

The straw may be brushed with sulphur and lemon juice or washed with oxalic acid, and the flowers retined with a water color brush. But it is generally more satisfactory to take the article to pieces and dye the straw foundation.

There are ordinary dye stuffs that can be diluted with water or gasolene and applied with a brush. It is found that gasolene works very well with the paint mixtures, and does not leave the hat so damp or flimsy after the treatment.

If a thin brim is wobbly after it is washed, take a little glue or tracynte and pour over it a cupful of boiling water and brush the hat with a weak solution of it. Tack it to a board and dry it in the sun. A hat stiffened in this manner should afterward be trimmed next to the hair with a bandeau. Gum arabic is equally good for treating Tuscan braids and in many cases will stiffen the brim of a leghorn hat. In washing a leghorn hat never apply much water, as the braid will roll up like dough and be hopelessly destroyed.

It will often be found worth while to buy new flowers; they come so reasonably this year.

If ribbons are punctured badly with hatpins, a band of velvet can be placed next to the brim. Many hats are trimmed in this manner as a convenience. If a flower toque begins to look shabby, the top flowers can be removed and a lace top put on the hat. Of course, a touch of lace must be used with the rosette at the side. Ribbons destroyed by rain must be carefully removed, and if not stained, press the ribbon dry or between a slightly dampened towel. Never color ribbons nor wash them for a hat, says the Philadelphia Press. If completely ruined, use the ribbon for other purposes and purchase new ones.

If the hat shrinks, it can often be worn by making a narrow velvet bandeau, placing it one inch from the edge of the crown. A wide-brimmed picture hat that cannot be restored to its graceful shape should have the wide brim pressed and stiffened with wires. If a straight brim, it can be fashioned into a sailor shape. If an odd shape, it will require a milliner's skill to give it a jaunty appearance.

Excited No Comment.

Tess—Of course, I knew that May and Bess were bitter enemies, but do you mean to tell me they actually engaged in a fist fight?

Jess—Yes.

Tess—Why, what a scandal! I declare I—

Jess—O! nobody noticed it! They went to a bargain store t odo it.—Philadelphia Press.

A Bad Habit.

"What brought you here, my poor man?" inquired the prison visitor.

"Well, lady," replied the prisoner, "I reckon my trouble started in attendin' too many weddin's."

"Ah! You learned to drink there, or steal, perhaps?"

"No, lady; I was always the bridegroom."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

EYE-STRAIN

is directly responsible for the majority of cases of blindness today. If instead of trying to overwork the eyes, one would at once get glasses at the first warning of eye-strain there would be fewer cases of blindness at the present time.

Come to us and have your eyes examined free of charge and we will advise you what to do to save them.

March of the White Guard

By SIR GILBERT PARKER

(Copyright, 1903, by R. F. Fenno & Co.)

CHAPTER II.

At ten o'clock next morning Jaspar Hume presented himself at the Chief Factor's office. He bore with him the letters he had written the night before.

The Factor said: "Well, Hume, I am glad to see you. That woman's letter was on my mind all night. Have you anything to propose? I suppose not," he added, despairingly, as he looked closely into the face of the other.

"Yes, Mr. Field, I propose this: that the expedition shall start at noon to-day."

"Shall—start—at noon—to-day?"

"In two hours."

"But, who are the party?"

"Jeff Hyde, Gaspe Toujours, Late Carscallen and Cloud-in-the-Sky."

"And who leads them, Hume? Who leads?"

"With your permission, sir, I do."

"You, Hume! You! But, man, consider the danger! And then there is—there is your invention!"

"I have considered all. Here are three letters. If we do not come back in three months, you will please send this one, with the box in my room, to the address on the envelope; this is for a solicitor in Montreal, which you will also forward as soon as possible; this last one is for yourself; but you will not open it until the three months have passed. Have I your permission to lead these men? They would not go without me."

"I know that, I know that, Hume. I hate to have you go, but I can't say no. Go, and good luck go with you."

Here the manly old Factor turned away his head. He knew that Jaspar Hume had done right. He knew the possible sacrifice this man was making of all his hopes, of his very life; and his sound Scotch heart appreciated the act to the full. But he did not know all. He did not know that Jaspar Hume was starting to look for the man who had robbed him of youth and hope and genius and home.

"Here is a letter that the wife has written to her husband in the hope that he is alive. You will take it with you, Hume. And the other she wrote to me; shall I keep it?" He held out his hand.

"No, sir, I will keep it, if you will allow me. It is my commission, you know." And the shadow of a smile hovered about Jaspar Hume's lips.

The Factor smiled kindly as he replied: "Ah, yes, your commission—Capt. Jaspar Hume of—of what, Hume?"

Just then the door opened, and there entered the four men whom we saw sat around the Sub-factor's fire the night before. They were dressed in white blanket costumes from head to foot, white woolen capotes covering the gray fur caps they wore. Jaspar Hume ran his eye over them and then answered the Factor's question: "Of the White Guard, sir."

"Good," was the reply. "Men, you are going on a relief expedition—one in which there is danger. You need a good leader. You have one in Jaspar Hume."

Jeff Hyde shook his head at the others with a pleased I-told-you-so expression; Cloud-in-the-Sky grunted his deep approval; and Late Carscallen smacked his lips in a satisfied manner and rubbed his leg with a schoolboy sense of enjoyment. The factor continued: "In the name of the Hudson Bay company I will say that if you come back, having done your duty faithfully, you shall be well rewarded. And I believe you will come back, if it is in human power to do so."

Here Jeff Hyde said, "It isn't for reward we're doin' it, Mr. Field, but because Capt. Hume wished it, because we believed he'd lead us; and for the lost fellow's wife. We wouldn't have said we'd do it, if it wasn't for him that's just called us the White Guard."

Under the bronze of the Sub-factor's face there spread a glow more red than brown, and he said simply, "Thank you, men"—for they had all nodded assent to Jeff Hyde's words—'Come with me to the store. We will start at noon."

And at noon the White Guard stood in front of the store on which the British flag was hoisted with another beneath it bearing the magic letters, H. B. C.; magic, because they have opened to the world regions that seemed destined never to know the touch of civilization. The few inhabitants of the Fort had gathered; the dogs and loaded sleds were at the door. The White Guard were there too—all but their leader. It wanted but two minutes to twelve when Jaspar Hume came from his house, dressed also in the white blanket costume, and followed by his dog, Jacques. In a moment more he had placed Jacques at the head of the first team of dogs. They were to have their leader too; and they testified to the fact by a bark of approval. Punctually at noon, Jaspar Hume shook hands with the Factor, said a quick good-bye to the rest, called out a friendly "How!" to the Indians standing near, and to the sound of a hearty cheer, heartier perhaps because none had a confident hope that the five would come back, the March of the White Guard began.

CHAPTER III.

It is 18 days after. In the shadow of a little island of pines, that lies in a shivering waste of ice and snow, the White Guard camp. They are able to do this night what they have not done for days—dig a great grave of snow, and building a fire of pine wood at each end of this strange house, get protection and something like comfort. They sit close to the fires. Jaspar Hume is writing with his numbed fingers. The extract that follows is taken from his diary. It tells that day's life, and so gives an idea of harder, sterner days that they have spent and will spend, on this weary journey.

"December 25th.—This is Christmas day and Camp 27. We have marched only five miles to-day. We are 80 miles from Great Fish river, and the worst yet to do. We have discovered no signs. Jeff Hyde has had a bad two days with his frozen foot. Gaspe Toujours helps him nobly. One of the dogs died this morning. Jacques is a great leader. This night's shelter is a godsend. Cloud-in-the-Sky has a plan whereby some of us will sleep well. We are in latitude 63 degrees 47 minutes and longitude 112 degrees 32 minutes 14 seconds. Have worked out lunar observations. Have marked a tree JH.—27, and and raised cairn No. 3. We are able to celebrate Christmas Day with a good basin of tea, and our standby of beans cooked in fat. I was right about them; they have great sustaining power. To-morrow we will start at ten o'clock."

The writing done, Jaspar Hume puts his book away and turns toward the rest. Cloud-in-the-Sky and Late Carscallen are smoking. Little can be seen of their faces; they are muffled to the eyes. Gaspe Toujours is drinking a basin of tea, and Jeff Hyde is fitfully dozing by the fire. The dogs are above in the tent, all but Jacques, who to-night is permitted to be near his master. The Sub-factor rises, takes from a knapsack a small tin pail, and puts it near the fire. This operation is watched by the others. Then he takes five little cups that fit snugly into each other, separates them, and puts them also near the fire. None of the party speak. A change seems to pass over the faces of all except Cloud-in-the-Sky. He smokes on unmoved. At length the Sub-factor speaks cheerily: "Now, men, before we turn in we'll do something in honor of the day. Liquor we none of us have touched since we started; but back there in the fort, and maybe in other places, too, they will be thinking to us; so we'll drink a health to them though it's but a spoonful, and to the day when we see them again!"

The cups were passed round. The Sub-factor measured out a very small portion to each. They were not men of uncommon sentiment; their lives were rigid and isolated and severe. Fireside comforts under fortunate conditions they saw but seldom, and they were not given to expressing their feelings demonstratively. But each man then, save Cloud-in-the-Sky, had some memory worth a resurrection, and hearts are hearts even under all uncouthness. Jasper Hume raised his cup; the rest followed his example. "To absent friends and the day when we see them again!" he said; and they all drank. Gaspe Toujours solemnly, and as if no one was near, made the sign of the cross; for his memory was with a dark-eyed, soft-cheeked peasant girl of the parish of Saint Gabrielle, whom he had left behind five years before, and had never seen since. Word had come from the parish priest that she was dying, and though he wrote back in his homely patois of his grief, and begged that the good father would write again, no word had ever come, and he thought of her now as one of whom the candles had been lighted and masses had been said.

But Jeff Hyde's eyes were bright, and suffering as he was, the heart in him was brave and hopeful. He was thinking of a glorious Christmas day upon the Madawaska river three years agone; of Adam Henry, the blind fiddler; of bright, warm-hearted Pattie Chown, the belle of the ball, and the long drive home in the frosty night.

Late Carscallen was thinking of a brother whom he had heard preach his first sermon in Edinburgh ten years before. And Late Carscallen, slow of speech and thought, had been full of pride and love of that brilliant brother. But they, in the natural course of things, drifted apart; the slow and uncouth one to make his home at last not far from the arctic circle, and to be this night on his way to the Barren Grounds. But as he stood with the cup to his lips he recalled the words of a newspaper paragraph of a few months before. It made reference to the fact that "the Rev. James Carscallen, D. D., preached before her majesty on Whitsunday, and had the honor of lunching with her majesty afterward." And Late Carscallen rubbed his left hand joyfully against his blanketed leg and drank.

Cloud-in-the-Sky's thoughts were with the present, and his "Ugh!" of approval was one of the senses purely. Instead of drinking to absent friends he looked at the Sub-factor and said: "How!" He drank to the Sub-factor.

And Jasper Hume, the Sub-factor, what were his thoughts?

His was a memory of childhood; of a house besides a swift-flowing river, where a gentle widowed mother braced her heart against misfortune and denied herself and slaved that her son might be educated. He had said to her that some day he would be a great man, and she would be paid back a hundredfold. And he worked hard at school, very hard. But one cold day of spring a message came to the school, and he sped homeward to the house beside the dark river down which the ice was floating—he would remember that floating ice to his dying day—and entered a quiet room where a white-faced woman was breathing away her life. And he fell at her side and kissed her hand and called to her; and she waked for a moment only and smiled on him, and said: "Be good, my boy, and God will make you great." And then she said she was cold. And some one felt her feet—a kind old soul who shook her head sadly at the mother and looked pityingly at him; and a voice rising out of a strange smiling languor murmured: "I'll away, I'll away to the Promised Land—to the Promised Land! It is cold—so cold—God keep my boy!" And the voice ceased, and the kind old soul who had looked at him pityingly folded her arms about him, and drew his brown head to her breast and kissed him with flowing eyes and whispered: "Come away, dear, come away."

But he came back in the night and sat beside her, and would not go away, but remained there till the sun grew bright, and then through another day and night until they bore her out of the little house by the river to the frozen hillside. And the world was empty and the icy river seemed warmer than his heart.

And sitting here in this winter desolation, Jasper Hume beholds these scenes of 20 years before and follows himself, a poor dispensing clerk in a doctor's office, working for that dream of achievement in which his mother believed; for which she hoped. And following further the boy that was himself, he saw a friendless first-year man at college, soon, however, to make a friend of Varre Lepage, and to see always the best of that friend, being himself so true. And the day come when they both graduated together in science, a bright and happy day, succeeded by one still brighter, when they both entered a great firm as junior partners. Then came the meeting with Rose Varcoe; and he thought of how he praised his friend Varre Lepage to her, and brought that friend to be introduced to her. He recalled all those visions that came to him when, his professional triumphs achieved, he should have a happy home, and a happy face, and faces by his fireside. And the face was to be that of Rose Varcoe, and the others, faces of those who should be like her and like himself. He saw, or rather felt, that face clouded and anxious when he went away ill and blind for health's sake. He did not write. The doctors forbade him that. He did not ask her to write, for his was so strong and steadfast a nature that he did not need letters to keep him true; and he thought if she cared for him she must be the same. He did not understand a woman's heart, how it needs remembrances, and needs to give remembrances.

Looking at Jasper Hume's face in the light of this fire it seems calm and cold, yet behind it is an agony of memory, the memory of the day when he discovered that Varre Lepage was married to Rose Varcoe, and that the trusted friend had grown famous and well-to-do on the offspring of his brain. His first thought had been one of fierce anger and determination to expose this man who had falsified all trust. But then came the thought of the girl, and, most of all there came the words of his dying mother, "Be good, my boy, and God will make you great," and for his mother's sake he had compassion on the girl, and sought no revenge upon her husband. Rare type of man, in a sordid, unchivalric world! And now, ten years later, he did not regret that he had stayed his hand. The world had ceased to call Varre Lepage a genius. He had not fulfilled the hope that was held of him. This Jaspar Hume knew from occasional references in scientific journals.

And he was making this journey to save, if he could, Varre Lepage's life. And he has no regret. Though just on the verge of a new era in his career—to give to the world the fruit of ten years' thought and labor, he had set all behind him that he might be true to the friendship of his youth, that he might be loyal to his manhood, that he might be clear of the strokes of conscience to the last hour of his life.

Looking around him now, the debating look comes again into his eyes. He places his hand in his breast and lets it rest there for a moment. The look becomes certain and steady, the hand is drawn out, and in it is a Book of Common Prayer. Upon the flyleaf is written, "Jane Hume, to her dear son Jaspar, on his twelfth birthday."

These men of the White Guard are not used to religious practices, whatever their past has been in that regard, and at any other time they might have been surprised at this action of Jaspar Hume. Under some circumstances it might have lessened their opinion of him, but his influence over them now was complete. They knew they were getting nearer to him than they had ever done; even Cloud-in-the-Sky appreciated that. He spoke no word to them, but looked at them and stood up. They all did the same. Jeff Hyde leaning on the shoulders of Gaspe Toujours. He read first four verses of the Thirty-first Psalm, then followed the prayer of St. Chrysostom, and the beautiful collect which appeals to the Almighty to mercifully look upon the infirmities of men, and to stetch forth His hand to keep and defend them in all dangers and necessities. Late Carscallen, after a long pause, said "Amen," and Jeff Hyde said in a whisper to Gaspe Toujours, "That's to the point. Infirmities and dangers and necessities is what troubles us."

GOOD NEWS.

Many Plainfield Readers Have Heard It and Profited Thereby.

"Good news travels fast," and the thousands of bad back sufferers in Plainfield are glad to learn that prompt relief is within their reach. Many a lame, weak and aching back is bad no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Our citizens are telling the good neys of their experience with the Old Quaker Remedy. Here is an example worth reading:

G. R. Leland, of 423 West Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I suffered as much as any person on earth from sever backache, pains in my head and limbs, occasional dizzy spells, sensation of all goneness and a general loss of ambition and strength. I doctored but none of the medicines I used seemed to benefit me. On being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I did so, and am glad to say that I met with most satisfactory success, as they drove away all my aches and pains and made me feel like a new man. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills highly and also willingly."

QUALITY and PRICE

The two vital questions in your piano purchase are, first, quality; second, price. An unsatisfactory piano, in tone and action, is the most annoying article you can have in your home. You dislike to be expending money on it continually to keep it in playing condition.

Hallelujah

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D., Pastor of the Chicago Ave. (Moody's) Church, Chicago.

This word, which is translated: "Praise ye the Lord," occurs, as I have counted, 24 times in the Book of Psalms, and four times in the nineteenth chapter of Revelation, making 28 times altogether in the Bible. In the Psalms it is the Hallelujah of earth and in Revelation it is the Hallelujah of heaven. It is a word which cannot be translated by one word into any other language, and is, therefore, transferred.

Hallelujah of Nature.

The first use of the word is at the close of Psalm 104. This Psalm is the finest poem on nature I have ever read. It begins by calling on the soul to bless God, and then ascribes to God the greatness, honor and majesty which a study of nature suggests to a religious mind. The light is God's garment. The heaven is the canopy which he has spread, and the foundations of the ocean he laid. He makes the clouds his chariot and walks upon the wings of the wind. The thunder is his voice. He made the springs which water birds and beast. The grass for the cattle, the trees for the nesting birds, the hills for the wild goats, and the rocks for the conies are the expression of his love and wisdom. He made the laws which govern the sun and moon.

The Hallelujah of Providence.

The One Hundred and Fifth Psalm, which also closes with "Hallelujah," deals with the history of Israel and the Psalmist sees the footprints of God in history as well as in nature. It was God who covenanted with Abraham, "made oath unto Isaac," and confirmed the same to Jacob." It was God who protected his people when they "were but few in number." It was God who "called for a famine upon the land" when prosperity had caused them to forget his laws. It was God who sent Joseph into Egypt and then Moses as the deliverer of his people. It was God who sent the darkness and turned their water into blood. It was God who spread a cloud over them for a covering and gave them "fire to give light in the night." It was God who "opened the rock" and quenched their thirst.

Hallelujah of Grace.

The One Hundred and Sixth Psalm begins and closes with "Hallelujah," and the key-note of its contents is in the first verse: "Give thanks unto the Lord, for his mercy endureth forever." He prays "O visit me with thy salvation," and he makes confession of sin: "We have sinned with our fathers, we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly."

The saved sinner can sing this "Hallelujah" of mercy more loudly and sweetly than any other. And God's mercy fills him with song because his justice has been satisfied in Jesus Christ. Mercy cannot rejoice against judgment because judgment has been met and mercy made possible through the atoning sacrifice of Christ. "Hallelujah for the cross" is the song of the redeemed. It comes to us from heaven and will return with us to heaven.

Hallelujah of Judgment.

This appears in Revelation 19:1-2. "Hallelujah. Salvation and honor and power unto the Lord our God, for true and righteous are his judgments; for he hath judged the great harlot, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication. And again they said Hallelujah. And her smoke rose up for ever and ever." The Hallelujah of judgment seems to shock soft, sentimental natures who cannot endure the thought that God could send one to hell. And yet any one with a spark of nobility of character must rejoice over the apprehension and punishment of certain criminals. There are said to be creatures with the outward resemblance of men in Chicago whose business is to ruin young girls and sell them to houses of prostitution for $50 and $75, and these creatures ought to be in hell, and will certainly go there unless they repent. For such men to escape hell unless they repent would be cause for everlasting regret.

Hallelujah of Sovereignty.

"Hallelujah, for the Lord our God reigneth."

God seems to be dethroned, but he is not. The fact that he does not strike dead monsters of iniquity in human shape is proof that he is merciful. When, therefore, I read in the press of the orgies of those who lie in wait for the innocent and seek their destruction, I say: "Hallelujah: God is merciful." And when I read that some monster has been overtaken by retribution, I say with equal emphasis: "Hallelujah: God is just." When I hear a blasphemer revile God and the Bible, I say: "Hallelujah: God is merciful, or he would be smitten dumb," and when I hear the same man, yet not the same, because he has been transformed by the grace of God, praising God for the redemption through the blood of Christ, as many a one has done, I say: "Hallelujah! Hallelujah for time and eternity!"

Bryan the Brave.

Remember the glories of Bryan the brave! This country for years he's been trying to save; he's talked by the year, and he's talking some more; he's talked when his throat was so frightfully sore that his voice was whiskered and needed a shave—remember the glories of Bryan the brave! Some heroes have fought for their country with swords, and some for their country have squandered their hoards; and sages have written, and poets have sung, but Bryan has fought with his double-dged tongue. Oh, long may that weapon in majesty wave—remember the glories of Bryan the brave! The Western Chautauquas are strewn with his dead; the lyceum circuit, he's painted it red; the jawbone of Samson innocuous was as compared with the tongue that has never known pause; still the hero goes on while his enemies rave—remember the glories of Bryan the brave!—Emporia (Kan.) NEWARK-ORANGE GAME TO BE PLAYED OVER

Manager George L. Listman, chairman of the State league baseball committee, announced today that the disputed Newark-Orange game will be played over, and that the three innings played at Orange three weeks ago will not be counted in the league standing. No date has been set for the game.

Speaking of the matter to a Daily Press reporter today, Mr. Listman said: "I have decided that the only fair way to do is play this game over. I think that this will avoid much bitterness on the part of both teams, and as there was no score in the game, it will give an equal advantage. Of course, Umpire Patten was right in awarding the game to Orange, but his ruling was not official with the league. I have consulted with the managers of both teams, and they agree to my ruling. This gives Newark six victories and two defeats and Orange three victories and three defeats. Plainfield has a good lead now, with seven wins and two games lost, and I hope we'll be able to keep it and land the championship."

PEACOCK TO PITCH FOR Y. M. C. A. AT TRENTON.

The Y. M. C. A. nine left town on the 12:42 train for Trenton, where they will play the Trenton assication team in the State league this afternoon. Manager C. L. Listman, who returned today from his vacation, has gone with the team, and is confident of victory. Peacock will be used in the box.

When Plainfield and Trenton met in league play before, the local nine was victorious by the score of 9-7, but Trenton now has a record of four wins and three defeats, and have won four games straight. Trenton trimmed the Orange team in the league by a score of 12-1 at Orange last week.

Wiring Contract for University.

Princeton, Aug. 8.—The trustees of the Princeton University have let the contract for the electrical work for the biology and geology building in course of erection. The agreement was filed yesterday at the office of the county clerk. The W. B. Foster Electrical Company, of New York, will do the work for $16,000. It is stipulated in the contract that operations are to be completed September 25, 1908.

CLOSED PORTALS.

Trenton Lodge of Elks will hold its annual outing at the Interstate Fair grounds August 26 at Trenton, and elaborate preparations are being made for the occasion. Some of the charter members of the lodge have entered as competitors in an old man's race, and a big program of athletic events is being arranged.

The grand aerie, Fraernal Order of Eagles, will convene in Seattle, Washington, the birthday of the order, next Tuesday. Grand Worthy President Theodore Bell, of Napa, Cal., will arrive on Saturday. The judiciary committee, of which Senator Thomas Grady, of New York, is chairman, met yesterday and reviewed 1,000 proposed amendments offered by subordinate aeries, many of which will be rejected. The ritual committee is considering a new ritual, which will be offered to the convention. About 25,000 Eagles are expected. Frank Hering, of South Bend, will be chosen grand worthy vice-president. Omaha, New Yorky and St. Paul will contend for the grand aerie convention in 1909.

FREIGHT WRECK BLOCKS P. R. R. PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

The wreck of an eastbound freight train at South Elizabeth at an early hour this morning, interrupted traffic for several hours on the Pennsylvania Railroad, necessitating the running of several passenger trains over a portion of the Lehigh Valley Railroad for a short distance.

Five cars, three box freight and two steel gondolas loaded with coal, were involved in the wreck which was caused by the accidental dropping of a brake shoe on one of the cars and catching in a frog in the rails. This loosened the rail and piled the five cars on top of one nother, blocking all but one westbound track. No one was injured. Wrecking crews were summoned and by 9:30 o'clock all the tracks were opened for regular traffic. An investigation showed that the brake shoe must have dropped at a point near Linden, but it was not until South Elizabeth was reached when the shoe caught in the frog that any damage resulted.

THEATRE MERGER DENIAL.

Klaw & Eralnger Merely Admit a "Defensive Alliance."

Denial was made yesterday by the firm of Klaw & Erlanger, of New York, that the meeting Thursday of representatives of local amusement concerns would result in the formation of a great theatrical merger.

It was stated that the meeting was for the purpose of forming a "defensive alliance" to prevent the instrusion of "fly-by-night promoters" into the already well supplied local theatrical field.

They will include Companies C and I, of Elizabeth; K, of Plainfield, and M, of Somerville, besides the Second Regiment Band of sixty-five pieces. Spanish War veterans and a big contingent from the Y. M. C. A., of which Major Martin is a member, will be others in line.

Captain Conrad Hall will be marshal of the parade, which will proceed over First street to Elizabeth avenue, to Reid street, to East Jersey street, to Jefferson street, to East Grand street, to Broad street, to Elizabeth avenue, to City Hall.

General Collins will be master of ceremonies at the City Hall. Senator Hillery will be one of the principal speakers. Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of the Second Brigade Infantry, and Colonel William Libbey, of the Princeton faculty and inspector of rifle practise in the State, will also be heard. Mayor Ryan will present the major with an engrossed set of resolutions adopted by the City Council.

Banquet at Night.

The banquet will follow informal greetings between the guest of honor and everybody who feels so disposed. Aside from those specially invited, the number has been limited to 100 subscribers. A unique menu, containing an engraved photo of Major Martin, will be a souvenir, and it contains printed on one page the resolutions passed by City Council. The committee in charge is composed of General Collins, chairman; Augustus W. Schwartz, secretary; Henry H. Isham, treasurer; Conrad Hall, Chas. H. Moore, F. A. Richters, John A. Kervick, Gharles G. Black, John P. Weber, John P. Whelan and Carl F. Mueller.

Major Martin has long been noted as one of the expert rifle shots of the world. In the International Olympic match at Brisley he tied for the highest score made on the champion American side, both he and Leuchmer making 430 out of 450. This was the high mark of the match. The American's team closest competitor was the English, 35 points behind. Major Martin, like the other Americans, was presented with a gold medal by the Queen of England. Two years ago he helped win the famous Wimbledon trophy for America, but the National Association felt constrained to return it, owing to a dispute.

Major Martin is a leading dentist and has a large practice in Elizabeth.

FIX BOROUGH FIRE LIMIT

Proposed Ordinance Quickly Passed to its Third Reading by North Plainfield Council.

EXTENDS PRESENT BOUNDARIES

Amendment to Ordinance of January 18, 1904, Fathered By E. P. T. Smith Will Go Into Effect Shortly.

An ordinance providing for the extension of the North Plainfield fire limits was proposed by Councilman E. P. T. Smith, chairman of the fire committee, at the meeting of the Borough Council, last night, and was unanimously passed on its first and second readings. The ordinance comes as an amendment to the first section of the ordinance which took effect January 18, 1904.

Fixing the fire limits at more extended points in the northern part of the borough, this ordinance now makes the following fire limit for the borough:

"Beginning in the center line of West End avenue where the same intersects the middle of Green brook; thence with the said center line of West End avenue northwesterly and following the curves of the same to the borough line; thence along the borough line in a northeasterly direction to the intersection of said borough line with the center line of a private drive-way now established through the property of the Union County Investment Company, which drive-way leads to the residences of Francis de L. Hyde, et al.; thence in a general southerly direction along said drive-way and following the curve of the same to the intersection of said center line of said drive-way as now established with the center line of Mountain avenue; thence northeasterly along the center line of Mountain avenue to the intersection of the center line of Belmot avenue; thence southeasterly along the center line of Belmont avenue to the center line of Brook avenue; thence southwesterly along the center line of Brook avenue to the center line of Norwood avenue; thence with the same southeasterly to the middle of Green brook; thence down the middle of said brook to the center of West End avenue, the place of beginning."

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Hudson County Democratic Committee adopted a resolution at a special meeting last night indorsing the candidacy of Bryan and Kern. Representative James A. Hamill and Assemblyman Mark A. Sullivan, who had been slated to make the first Bryan speeches of the county campaign, did not put in an appearance, and Assemblyman Joseph P. Tumulty and James Baker supplied the oratory.

The sub-committee of the Ohio Republican State executive committee at a special session at Cedar Point, O., yesterday afternoon decided to hold the opening of the Republican campaign at Youngstown, O., September 5, and choose as the principal speakers Governor Hughes, of New York; Governor Harris, of Ohio, and Senator Beveridge, of Indiana. Governor Hughes and Senator Beveridge will be slated to talk on the national issues and Governor Harris on the State issues. Senator Benjamin Foraker, of Ohio, twice author of Republican national platforms, the man who named McKinley for President both at Chicago and Philadelphia, and who has had the honor of opening the Republican campaigns for the past fifteen years, was turned down cold by the committee, as was also Senator Dick, of Ohio. All the consideration they got was a special invitation to attend the opening with a seat in the platform.

HERE AND THERE.

A Daily Press reader on a recent trip to his native State, Rhode Island, and visiting Westerly, Watch Hill, Providence, Pawtucket, and other places, made what was to him a new discovery. It was in general use on the various trolley lines, and it struck him as being a fine arrangement for the convenience of all concerned. It is a "nickel in the slot" contrivance with a handle, carried by the conductor and into which each passenger is required to drop his fare. The use of it naturally reminds each one that it is well to have his nickel ready. But if he has a larger piece the conductor makes the change, handing it all back to the passenger and then holds the receptacle for him to put in the proper piece himself. Especially in a crowded car the fares are more readily collected, there being no bell to ring for each fare paid. And what seems better than all else, it takes away a certain sourse of temptation to some, and makes pretty sure that those who pay the bills receive their proper returns.

William J. Bryan has been invited to address the biennial State convention of the Christian Endeavor societies which is to be held in Emanuel Baptist church at Albany, N. Y., the second week of October. Governor Hughes already has accepted an invitation to address the convention.

RAIN LIKE DELUGE AT JERSEY RESORTS

Asbury Park and nearby resorts were yesterday and last night deluged by the heaviest rain ever known to have fallen in that section on a summer day since they were opened. Streets, basements and cellars were flooded. Water entered dining rooms in the basements of hotels and meals had to be served on the main floors.

The floor poured into kitchens and boiler rooms, delaying dinners and bringing darkness to all establishments that maintain their own lighting plants. These were forced to make connection with the public lighting system until the water could be pumped out.

Ocean Grove was like a lake, while Asbury Park resembled an island swept by seas from Wesley to Deal Lake. The Marine Villa at one time had three feet of water in its dining rooms, while the Ocean View, Stafford and other hotels were flooded. The monetary loss will be large Fifty feet of the Deal Lake bulkhead was carried away and boys went swimming in the streets of Ocean Grove. Many street beds were washed out.

The storm turned daylight into darkness, except as bright lightning flashes burst from the heavy clouds. Lightning struck a trolley car at Belmar and one woman was slightly hurt. Another bolt shattered a section of cornice on the Second Methodist church. Many flagpoles were also struck, while the heavy wind twisted limbs from trees. Prayer meetings were started in many hotels while the storm was at its height. Many small boats on the lakes were sunk or otherwise damaged. Hail as large as camphor balls fell during the early part of the storm.

PERSONAL.

James C. Hoff, of Franklin place, has returned after a sojourn in the Catskill mountains.

Miss May Faber, daughter of A. E. Faber, of Mercer avenue, is spending several weeks with friends at Deal Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Larson and family, of Fairview avenue, have gone to Vermont, where they will spend several weeks.

James L. Pope, Jr., the young son of J. L. Pope, of Grant avenue, is critically ill at his home with bronchial pneumonia.

Mrs. John Shultz, of Allendale, Pa., is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Siedel and children, of Jackson avenue.

Miss Agnes Bailey, of Jackson avenue, left today for South Beach, where she will enjoy a few days' outing from home.

Miss Ella Mullen, of Park avenue, leaves today for Long Branch, where she will spend one week at the home of her sister, Mrs. Georges Hughes.

Among the guests yesterday at the eighth annual horse show at Oakwood Driving Park, Bayshore, L. I., was Mrs. Reeves Stockton, of Plainfield.

Eben Bennett, of West Sixth street, left today for Asbury Park, where he will join his family, who are spending several weeks at that popular summer resort.

Miss Mary Smith, of West Fifth street, is spending her summer vacation of two weeks enjoying the sea breezes of Ocean Grove. She is registered at the Ocean House.

Mrs. Charles A. Lee and daughters, the Misses Marguerite, Dorothy and Gladys Lee, of Grove street, returned today after a two weeks' vacation sojourn at Asbury Park.

Miss Sarah Gilligan, of West Fifth street, is spending her summer vacation of two weeks enjoying the ocean breezes at Ocean Grove, where she is registered at the Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. Marinette and children, of Binghamton, N. Y., returned home today after a two weeks' stay at the home of Mrs. Edward Ryan, of Manning avenue.

Miss Margaret Nolan, of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Elizabeth, has returned to the hospital after enjoying a two weeks' vacation which she spent with relatives in the borough.

BOROUGH FATHERS AGAIN AGITATE THEIR ROAD SCHEME.

Because the Borough Council has as yet received no formal reply to its communication to the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, petitioning that body to have the extension of Watchung avenue made a county road, the borough fathers, last night, authorized Mayor Townsend to communicate with the Board to bring the matter again to their attention and to urge a reply. Mr. Townsend said last night that he had not yet received an official reply from the Board, but that several of the members had talked the matter over with him.

The idea of the Council is to have the Board make the extension of Watchung avenue, and of Greenbrook road a county highway, and the borough is willing to stand part of the expense of the improvement.

MRS. FREDERICK WILLS DIED THIS MORNING.

Mrs. Frederick H. Wills, mother of Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, died this morning at her home on East Seventh street, following an illness of two years, during which time she underwent several operations, and her death was not wholly unexpected.

She was sixty-one years of age and had been a resident of Plainfield twenty-two years. She was identified with many charitable works, especially in the parish of Grace church, of which she was a communicant, and regular attendant when health permitted.

Mrs. Wills is survived by a husband, three sons and one daughter, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman. The funeral service will be held from the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, Tuesday morning, owing to the fact that Grace church is undergoing repairs, and it is expected that Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, who has been notified, will officiate. The burial will be in Woodlawn cemetery, New York.

IF YOU DRINK, GET "SOUSED."

Do Not Take a "Nip" Every Day Is a Temperance Lecturer's Advice.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 8.—Addressing the Lincoln Temperance Chautauqua at Austin, John A. Nicholls, of Boston, said he preferred the man who gets on an all night drunk occasionally to the one who takes a nip every day.

"If I wanted to drink," said Mr. Nicholls, "I would get 'soused" good and then cut it out for a month. It is not nearly so bad to roll in the gutter as it is to take a nip every now and then. A man's physique can't stand either one, and especially the latter.

"Three persons suffer for every one who takes a drink, and he should be made to abstain, not only for the self-inflicted injuries, but for the injury he inflicts upon innocent persons."

PAPAL HONORS TO JERSEY DELEGATION.

The Pope yesterday at Rome received in a special audience forty-one members of the Holy Name Society of the Diocese of Newark, N. J., headed by Monsignor John A. Stafford, of Jersey City. They were presented by Monsignor Kennedy, rector of the American college.

Monsignor Stafford delivered an address of greeting to the Pope and presented him with an offering of $110.

The Holy Name Society delegation received yesterday at the Vatican formed part of the pilgrimage of American Catholics that left New York early last month on a specially chartered steamer for Italy. It was understood that the entire New Jersey delegation was to be received, together with the New York pilgrims, at the Vatican yesterday. Rev. Geo. Bennett, of Jersey City, president of the Holy Name Society of the Diocese of Newark, is in the party.

INTRODUCES GRANDSON.

First Hint Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees Had That Son Was Married.

Lester Voorhees, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Voorhees, of French street, New Brunswick, told his parents yesterday that he had been married to Miss Rae Leighton, of Freehold, for more than a year. That was a big surprise for the father and mother, but they had [illegible] a bigger one when they were introduced to one Harvey Bro[illegible], three months old.

Lester Voorh[illegible] known Rae Leighton since [illegible] were children. Their parents knew of their interest in each other and Miss Leighton had often visited the Voorhees home. However, neither suspected "anything."

With Lester and his sweetheart the affair was different, and one fine day they slipped to the parsonage of the Rev. Mr. Foote at Freehold and the knot was tied. Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees are each nineteen years old and the parents of the young husband thought he was not old enough to assume the responsibilities of married life. The young couple have been forgiven and will make their ome with Mr. Voorhees' parents.

PRIZE-WINNING CAT DEAD.

Finest Specimen of Persian Breed, Expires in Elizabeth.

Champion Puritana, perhaps the most famous cat in America, is dead at Miss Pollard's retreat in Elizabeth, from apoplexy, caused by the heat. Champion Puritana, a daughter of Miss Pollard's Champion Purity, was three and a half years old and the winner of more than sixty prizes.

The record of this cat is worthy of notice, for never had she been beaten in exhibitions and she was the only cat ever awarded a hundred points at a cat show. Cats from abroad were matched against Champion Puritana, but every attempt to wrest the blue ribbon from her was futile. Puritana was bred by Miss Pollard and was the most perfect known specimen of long haired Persian known.

Sadie E. Berse.

Sadie E. Berse, the seventeen-months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Berse, of 513 West Third street, died yesterday afternoon following a short illness. The funeral service will be held from the home of the parents tomorrow morning and the burial will be in Washington cemetery, Brooklyn.

"PRINCE" LOWERS RECORD

Charles Brower's Trotter Covers Exhibition Mile in 2:14 on Local Track.

FIVE HUNDRED SEE THE RACES.

Fair Acres Riding and Driving Club's Card On Saturday Comprised Five Events.

More than five hundred people attended the matinee races held at the driving park, Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club, and the card was one of the best offered this season by the club. It was the first time that an admission fee was charged this kind of a race meet and the proceeds were used to purchase prizes, including blankets, whips, sets of harness, etc., offered in the various races.

A feature of the afternoon enjoyed by the horsemen and interested spectators, was the fine exhibition by Charles Brower's Prince, which lowered by two seconds his own track record for a mile, which was 2:16. He covered the mile in 2:14 in one of the best races yet seen on the track and he was handled in fine style by Mr. Brower.

The card comprised five races, including a half-mile running race, and the entries were evenly matched in each class. The judges were Nathan Robbins, Nelson Giles, Dr. Butler and William Lovett and William Hudson and C. E. Bellows were the starters. The summaries:

FUNERAL SERVICES OF WILLIAM J. KIELY.

The funeral service of the late William J. Kiely, who was killed at Asbury Park on Thursday, while returning home with Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus excursion, was held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home in the borough and at 3 o'clock from St. Joseph's church. The attendance was very large, it being impossible for all the friends to gain admission to the church. Mr. Kiely was well-known throughout the city and borough and he had many friends who mourned his sudden death. There was a beautiful display of floral tributes, including several set pieces from relatives and friends.

The services were in charge of Rev. W. H. Miller, pastor of the church. The pall-bearers were Garret Powers, John P. Powers, Joseph Burke, James Burke, William Tyson and Charles Egan. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. Those who were unable to attend the services at the church witnessed the last rites at the cemetery.

Mrs. Hannah McElroy.

Ms. Hannah McEloy, of Chestnut street, the borough, died at her home yesterday from the infirmities of old age. She was seventy-six years old. A husband and brother survive. The funeral services will be held from the late home tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock and at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's church. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Great Moving Pictures.

Moving pictures will be shown at the New Plainfield theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and nights. On Friday afternoon and night pictures of the Gans-Nelson and the Fitzsimmons-Ruhlin fights will be shown. The pictures will be the best ever seen here.

Street Parade.

Lew Dockstader and his seventy minstrels will give a street parade at 5 o'clock this afternoon. They will pass through the principal streets in the business section. The minstrels will give their first performance for the season at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

CHILDREN HOLD FAIR FOR BABY CAMP FUND

The Daily Press fund for the Baby Camp on the mountain conducted by The City Union of King's Daughters now aggregates $141.50, twenty-four dollars having been received today. As the Netherwood Fresh Air Home contributions amount to $18.25, the combined charity subscriptions total $159.75.

Children living on West Seventh street held a fair at the residence of Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor on Thursday. They netted $22 by the sale of ice cream, cake, lemonadte and candy. Those who raised this sum for the baby camp were Julia and Duncan Taylor, Frederic, Alan and Laurence Stevenson, Delano Ladd and Rufus and Harold Atwood.

From Miss M. B. Morgan, The Daily Press has also received $2 for the same fund.

"BIG GUNS" GOING ON DEMOCRATIC OUTING

Congressman Ollie James, of Kentucky, is coming August 20 to deliver a message to the State of New Jersey from his personal friend, William Jennings Bryan. He is going to deliver it through the Democrats of Union county, on board the good ship Sirius, on the occasion of the twelfth annual party outing a week from next Thursday. The Kentucky representative was temporary chairman of the Democratic National convention at Denver, and is an untimate friend of the Presidential nominee chosen on that occasion.

At the outing, which is to be "the greatest ever," will also be present ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., who was an ardent anti-Bryanite before the convention, but has so far reformed that he is spoken of for a place on Norman E. Mack's executive committee to help run the campaign. It wouldn't be at all surprising if the ex-Senator, whom some will persist in denoting as the boss of the Jersey Democracy, and Congressman James take advantage of the opportunity to talk over some things of vital interest to Democrats at large regarding the conduct of the campaign in the East.

Former Senator James Smith, Jr., of Newark, and Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton, who ran for Governor against Franklin Fort, are going to be present, and Robert S. Hudspeth, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, besides State Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex; Mayor Jacob Haussling, of Newark, and, of course, James E. Martine, of this city.

All arrangements for the outing are nearing completion. As usual the big iron steamboat Sirius has been chartered. The boat will be in charge of Captain Tom Wheeler, the oldest pilot in the service of the Iron Steamboat Company, and will put out of the Crescent shipyard dock at Elizabethport at 9 a. m. for Witzel's Point View Grove.

Music is going to be a special feature, Prof. James J. James' Band, of twenty-five pieces having been secured and a special program arranged.

ELIZABETH PASTOR TALKS AT NETHERWOOD FRESH AIR CAMP.

Rev. William B. Hamilton, of Elizabeth, was the speaker at the 4 o'clock meeting in the auditorium at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp yesterday afternoon, and drew forceful lessons from his topic, "Magnets." he speaker had several magnets of various sizes to illustrate his remarks, and held the interest of the 200 mothers and children closely during his entire discourse. Mr. Hamilton is personally very much interested in the work Miss Curry is doing at the camp and among the East Side poor in New York city.

Music was a feature of the service, which was largely attended, and the camp children took part enthusiastically in the various hymns. Mary Miller, one of the New York children, sang the Glory Song, and two other children, Elsie and Nellie Tudor, sang "Sweet Peace." Mrs. Harris, of Elizabeth, presided at the organ and sang two solos. E. H. Guest, of this city, furnished a cornet obligato for all the singing and played "I Shall Know Him by the Nail Prints in His Hands" for the offertory. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Stewart, of Philadelphia, who preached at the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday morning.

—The prudent housewife will arrange to get her supply of tomatoes for canning now. Neuman Brothers have a choice assortment and they are as low now as they will be during the season.

HABERLE CYCLE CHAMPION

WON THE MILE ROAD RACE.

Local Wheelmen Carry Off Bulk of Prizes in Ten-Mile Road Race —Haberle's Fast Time.

Sherman Haberle, of the Plainfield Cycle Club, is champion mile bicycle racer of Union county. He won his title at Westfield, Saturday, when he finished first in the one-mile road race at the meet held there under the auspices of the National Cycling Association. Haberle's time for the road mile was two minutes and eleven seconds, and he has been invited by the association officials to take part in the Vailsburg races. Haberle won his heat in the mile event in 2:02, which is considered excellent road going. He later rode in the ten-mile race, starting from scratch, and got fourth time prize, finishing in 27 minutes and 40 seconds. As winner of the championship, he received a gold title medal. Wally Smith, of Union, finished second, and Henry Surman, of Elizabeth, third. They received silver and bronze medals respectively.

Particularly good time was made in the heats for the mile race, the winners in each of the three heats covering the course in 2:02. R. L. Guttridge a local club rider, won the second heat, and Henry Surman, of Elizabeth, finished ifirst in the third.

Haberle, one of the four scratch riders in the ten-mile, lost a chance to win the race on the seventh mile, when the leading bunch sprinted past him as he fell back after setting the pace for a long stretch. He finished twentieth, his actual time being 27:40.

There were sixteen prizes in the ten-mile handicap. The first prize was a Pierce racing bicycle; second, a pair of Fisk racing tires and third, a 44-calibre revolver. The other prizes were merchandise. The time prizes were as follows: First, Crawford bicycle; second, pair Fisk racing tires; third, Parson's domino saddle, and fourth, pair Standard Motor Cycle pedals and Sager toe clips.

The handicap race results follow:

THROWN FROM HORSE, WOMAN IS BADLY HURT

Mrs. Albin Trojan, of 511 East Front street, was thrown from a saddle horse and badly hurt while riding on West Front street, Saturday night, sustaining bruises about the neck, arms and lower part of the body, beside receiving a severe cut over the forehead. The injured woman was assisted to a nearby house and later removed to her home, where she will be detained for several days.

Mrs. Trojan has been taking lessons in horseback riding and on Saturday night was accompanied by her instructor, Hugh Gormley, proprietor of the Riding Academy in North Plainfield. She was mounted on a spirited horse and the appearance of Dockstader's minstrel band frightened the animal so that he went up in the air on his hind feet, and Mrs. Trojan was thrown with considerable force landing on the ground on her back. Mr. Gormely was close by and he immediately left his horse to assist the woman. The frightened horse started to run away, but was caught by a bystander.

The accident happened at the corner of Front and Grove streets, and Mrs. Trojan was carried to a house nearby where she received temporary treatment. Her injuries are not as serious as at first supposed.

CITY FATHERS DECIDE TONIGHT ON FIRE HOUSE

Realizing the necessity for erecting a new fire-house in the East End of the city and equipping it in a first-class manner, the Councilmanic fire and building committee has issued a call for a meeting of the whole Common Council as a committee of the whole to be held tonight in the Council chamber, when there will be a full discussion of the proposed plans. Several weeks ago the fire and building committee presented plans for the new fire-house, but in the opinion of a majority of the members of the Common Council they were too elaborate and it was decided not to do anything with them at the time.

Since then the committee has had new plans drawn which is believes will meet with the approval of the body and these will be shown tonight. It is known that many of the members are in favor of building the house this year if it can be financed properly and not cost too much money. They do not fancy the idea of the city owning such a valuable piece of property and allowing it to remain idle for a whole year before the proposed improvement is completed. The committee believes that if a reasonable proposition is presented the other members of the Council as well as the Mayor will favor it and vote for it at this time. The result of tonight's conference will be reported at the September meeting of the Common Council.

INSIST ON UNION LABOR ON ALL CONTRACTS HERE

Determining to prevent future sympathetic strikes on local contract jobs, similar to the one which threw 200 plumbers and masons out of work several months ago because union and non-union men were employed on contract work, the Master Builders' Association has decided to put a clause in all estimates on work, which provides that the job figured on shall be given to its members. This proviso is to be printed or stamped on all estimates for work made by members of the association. The clause follows:

"This estimate is submitted with the understanding and proviso that wwork in all branches of this job be given to members of a Master Builders' Association. Also subject to a strike clause."

The strike clause restriction is in connection with an alternative given to architects, which provides that if work on a job is suspended for three days, other workmen may be hired by the architect to complete the work. This right is taken exception to in the proviso above in the case of a strike, when the jobs will be completely tied up, if the contracts are issued under the estimates of the local Master Builders' Association.

Mrs. George Goodwin.

Mrs. George Goodwin, mother of the late John Goodwin, died in New York this morning. The remains will be brought to this city for burial. The son died here early in February last, the result of falling out of his carriage while returning home from the North Avenue station late at night.

G.O.P. HAD A BIG TIME

Union County Republicans Enjoy Their Annual Outing at Witzel's Grove.

CABLE FROM SEN. ACKERMAN.

Plainfielders Defeat Elizabethans at Baseball—Politics Eschewed For the Time—Largest Excursion Yet.

The annual outing of Union County Republicans to Witzel's Grove on Long Island, Saturday, was one of the most successful in the history of the "G. O. P.," the ideal weather conditions combined with perfect details, made the outing one of great enjoyment for all. It was 10:40 o'clock in the morning, when the "Sea Gull" carrying 315, one more than last year, of the faithful ones, left Elizabethport for Witzel's Grove. After a delightful sail up the Sound, the Grove was reached at 1:30, and the party at once adjourned to the large restaurant there where a fine dinner was served.

Immediately afterward, Andrew McCardell read a cablegram, which he had received from State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, who is abroad. He expressed the wish that all would have a good time and that the party would meet with success at the election in November. The reading of the cablegram was followed by hearty cheers. Every member of the Union county party wore a handsome badge, bearing an excellent likeness of Senator Ackerman.

The afternoon was spent in playing all kinds of games, including the annual gaseball game between Plainfield and Elizabeth. The former won the contest by a score of 13 to 0, although the result is still disputed by the county seat contingent. Andrew McCardell announced the score as official, and there was no further argument. Photographer P. F. Stone took several good pictures of the excursionists pictures.

The return trip was begun at 4:45, earlier than usual, because the party was anxious to reach Elizabethport in time to join in the reception to Major W. B. Martin, of the American Rifle Team, who returned that afternoon from England. When the "Sea Gull" reached the 'Port, Major Martin was there to greet the Republicans and the hearty welcome extended was second only to that given by the county seat residents at the banquet later in the evening.

The outing was notable in that politics were the least talked-of subjects. Everyone felt like giving up the entire day to pleasure and so far as known no slates were made or broken during the trip. The Plainfielders who did not remain in Elizabeth for the Major Martin celebration reached home about 8:30 o'clock.

NETHERWOOD CAMPERS AT MONROE AVE. CHURCH.

In the interests of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, a special service was held last night at the Monroe Avenue church, when a delegation of twenty-five New York children now at the camp, drove to the church in a large stage and took part in the service, rendering a program of recitations and gospel hymns. A large congregation greeted the camp children and much enthusiasm was shown in the work. A substantial offering was received for Miss Curry's work at the camp and in New York.

Dr. S. A. Sauerbrey, of New York, who is particularly interested in the work Miss Curry is doing among the New York poor, was the speaker of the evening, and his remarks were explanatory of the work done at the Netherwood camp during the months of July and August, and of the work at the "Little Missionary's Day Nursery" in New York city, of which Miss Curry is manager. Benjamin Hadley, secretary of the Camp association, gave much interesting data about the summer's work and cards containing a condensed financial report were distributed.

Mansfield Smith was the leader of the meeting, and there was special music by the chorus choir of the church. Mrs. James Gilbert and Herbert R. Byard sang solos. Miss Sara Curry, manager of the camp, gave a short address, and at the conclusion of the meeting held an informal reception in the church. Many took the opportunity of meeting her and talking about the work in Netherwood and New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen, of Washington avenue, have gone to Boston to spend a week there and in the vicinity.

Mrs. William J. Cauthers, of Brooklyn, is the guest of Mrs. Wodsworth Parker, of Lane avenue and Rahway road.

Mrs. J. H. Harold, of East Fifth street, left today for Nanuet, Rockland county, N. Y., where she will spend two weeks.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA CELEBRATE A BIRTHDAY

Following the routine business, the members of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, celebrated their twelfth anniversary in Odd Fellows' Hall, Saturday night. There were congratulatory addresses by State Vice Councilor Philip Handschuck, of Elizabeth; State Associate Vice Councilor Mrs. Grace VanTassel, of West Hoboken; State Secretary Mrs. Amelie S. VanSciver and State Outside Sentinel Mrs. Mary Nutter, of Newark, and delegates from Star of Elizabeth Council, No. 37, of Elizabeth; Golden Rod Council, of New Brunswick; Fairview Council, of Galia.

After the speechmaking all adjourned to the banquet hall, where cake and ice cream were served by the good and welfare committee. Martha Washington Council is in a flourishing condition financially and otherwise. The council is now paying $4 a week sick benefits and $500 death benefits.

MRS. HUDSON INJURED IN LIVELY RUNANAY

Falling from her husband's rig as the team of horses were running wildly up Watchung avenue toward the mountain, Mrs. William Hudson, of Fairview avenue, driving with a party of out-of-town friends, sustained injuries Saturday afternoon which will keep her confined to her home for several days. The team, which took fright at an automobile on Fairview avenue, got beyond the control of Charles Doty, the driver, and galloped madly up Watchung avenue and through Codington avenue, where they were finally caught by George Hummer near the corner of Somerset street.

In th carriage, which is a low, two-seated Heely phaeton with a high driver's seat in front, were Mrs. Hudson, her cousin, Miss Alice Patterson, of Boston, and Judge W. B. Wardell and his wife, of Brooklyn. The horses, a lively pair of black cobs, were wearing a bran-new harness and were hitched too close to the rig. When they started to bolt, their heels struck, alarming them the more. Doty swung them into Watchung avenue, where they broke into a gallop. Judge Wardell, seeing that the animals had got beyond control of the man, climbed over the seat to help pull them in. As he did so, they swerved toward the curb near Mountain avenue, and threatened to crash into a telegraph pole. The Judge shouted warning to Doty, and Mrs. Hudson, hearing him shout, stood up in the rig to see what the danger was. The horses swerved and she was thrown to the ground, cutting her forehead severely and sustaining painful abraisions of the hip, shoulder and arms. The other members of the party stayed in the carriage and were whisked away down the road. Mrs. Hudson was assisted to a near-by house from which her fall was seen, and Dr. J. H. Buchanan was summoned. An examination showed that no bones were broken, and she was later removed to her home, where she is still under the physician's care.

Mr. Wardell and the driver swung the horses into Codington avenue and George Hummer, seeing them coming, rushed out and seized one by the bridle, thus bringing them to a stop. Although the women of the party were hysterical, none were injured. The horses' heels were badly cut and their rear shoes were kicked off. The carriage was uninjured.

Seven Cent Festival at Trinity.

Under the auspices of Class No. 30, of Trinity Reformed Sunday-school, a "seven cent festival" is to be held in the Sunday-school room of the church Monday evening, August 18. Horace J. Martin, Sr., is teacher of the class and ice cream and peaches will be served. You are asked to come and see what seven cents will do. The proceeds will be added to the fund being raised for the painting of the church.

Funeral of Isaac S. Stites.

The funeral service of Isaac S. Stites, of Somerset street, was held at 10 o'clock this morning from St. Joseph's church, Rev. William H. Miller officiating. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The pall-bearers were George Rittenhouse, Frank Kenney, John McCarty and Frank Carroll. The burial was in St. May's cemetery.

Funeral of Sadie E. Berse.

The funeral service of Sadie E. Berse, the seventeen-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Berse, of 512 West Third street, was held yesterday morning from the home of the parents, the Rabbi of the local Jewish Synagogue, was in charge. The burial was in Washington cemetery, Brooklyn.

BIG OVATION FOR MARTIN

STATE AND NATION JOIN IN.

Street Parade, Ceremonies at City Hall and a Banquet— City Welcomes Him.

Major William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, formerly captain of Co. K, member of the American rifle team, which won the world's championship in the Olympic meet at Bisley, England, returned home Saturday and received from his native city, perhaps, the greatest reception ever given a private citizen by any municipality in this State. Elizabeth turned out en masse to welcome him home, and 100 of its most prominent residents joined in a notable banquet that concluded a most successful celebration.

On a speedy Standard Oil tug at 12:50 o'clock yesterday afternoon the local committee that had been making arrangements for the affair the past week, headed by General Dennis F Collins and Mayor P. J. Ryan, sailed out to New York bay, where they were transferred aboard the revenue cutter, Mohawk, as guests of the National Rifle Association, which had prepared a reception for the returning champion shots. The New York of the American line, bearing many home-coming Olympic victors, got in about 3 o'clock and the rifle team was quickly spirited aboard the Mohawk and taken up the bay. On board there was some speechmaking and celebrating. Then Major Martin was separated from his comrades by the Elizabeth contingent and taken to the 'Port on the tug.

The vessel got in about 8 o'clock. It was greeted by the roar of artillery of Battery B, and the cheers of many hundreds of persons who lined the shore. A parade in which four companies of militia and many local organizations, headed by the crack Second Regiment Band of sixty-five pieces took part, started from the foot of East Jersey street, with Major Martin and members of the committee, besides Senator Edmund Wakelee, as Governor Fort's personal representative, and other State officers of the barouches. The streets along the route of march were jammed with people, who cheered enthusiastically when the hero of the occasion went by.

The parade made its way to the City Hall, in Elizabeth, where the main exercises took place, General Collins acting as master of ceremonies. Mayor Ryan presented Major Martin with an engrossed set of resolutions adopted by Elizabeth Council congratulating him on his achievement and expressing the city's appreciation of the distinction he had won for it. Senator Wakelee conveyed the congratulations of the State's Chief Executive and the State at large and enthusiastic applause followed the reading of a brief message from President Roosevelt, through his secretary. The President expressed his regret at his inability to be present and added, "but I congratulate through oyu Major Martin on his noteworthy achievement." The tribute was thus given local, State and national significance.

Addresses were made also by Gen. Drain, captain of the rifle team; Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, commander of the Second Regiment; Colonel William Libbey, assistant inspector general of rifle practice, and James E. Martine, of Plainfield. An informal reception followed, everybody taking advantage of the opportunity to shake the hand of a world's champion. The celebration ended with a banquet at Russ'.

PLAINFIELDERS ATTEND ROYCEFIELD HOME DAYS.

A party of local residents who were born at Roycefield, Somerset county, held a reunion at the town Saturday afternoon, when about a hundred persons from all over the State revisited the scenes of their birth and held a most successful reunion. Those who went from here were Mr. and Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Dolliver, Recorder and Mrs. Charles M. Dolliver, Mrs. M. Dunham and Miss M. Van Nuys.

Those who came to the town reunion registered their names and old Roysefield addresses in a large book and spent the day at the old schoolhouse, or walking about, visiting the scenes of their birth. In the afternoon, all gathered at the schoolhouse, where many of the old hymns were sung and addresses were made by G. Q. Dolliver, Rev. P. Beekman, Rev. J. LaFevre, J. Garretson and Judge L. Schenck.

Peterson Frome, of Karrville, is seriously ill.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Manager Ayres, of the Dunellen F. C. football team, has been appointed chairman of the club committee to arrange for a fair to be given within a few weeks by the club. A novel feature of the fair will be the voting for the most popular local ball player. Managers of the various teams here, in Plainfield and in the vicinity have been asked to select a member of this team to represent them in the voting, so that each team may be represented by one player. These representatives will in many cases be decided upon by a vote of the team. At the fair the most popular of all the players voted for will receive a loving cup. The candidates to represent the Dunellen and New Market teams have not yet been decided upon.

The playing of local young men in the ball game Saturday was in a large measure responsible for the big turnout. Dunellenites would rather see "local talent" than turn out for a game where the nine was "padded" by out-of-town players. Much interest is being taken in the league series.

There was an unusually large turnout at the annual Merrill-Dayton family reunion held Saturday at Riverside Park, and a delightful day was spent by the members of the two families and their relatives. Dinner and supper were served at the park, and the return was made late in the evening.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the New Market Baptist church, an ice cream and peach festival will be held on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Pierce's home tomorrow night. The proceeds of the affair will be used for furnishing the lecture room of the church.

William T. Piddington, Jr., has returned after spending the week at Ocean Grove.

BRIDGETON NOT SO "DRY."

Five Men and a "Club" Taken in Anti-liquor Raid.

Officers under the authority of Prosecutor of the Pleas Fithian and upon warrants issued by Mayor Hampton, of Bridgeton, swooped down upon a number of alleged violators of the liquor laws last night. In the raid four beer bottlers who have done a flourishing business, a druggist who has been in the net on former occasions and one "club" went down and out, the principals being placed under bail for a further hearing next week.

The raid is said to be only the forerunner of a general crusade against the sale of liquor in this supposedly "dry" city and that in a few days many more arrests will be made.

One More Week of the ANNIVERSARY SALE.

One more week of the bargains that have created more talk and made us more new friends than our brightest anticipation during all the days of preparation for the event. It was our aim to impress you—at this time particularly—with the advantages in shopping here. A store that is not burdened with the additional expenses of several thousand dollars yearly to the trading stamp "house," nor has the great portion of its capital tied up on its books, can and does offer the most for your money. We have demonstrated this with especial force the past three weeks of our First Anniversary Sale, and are making a strong effort this last week of the sale to have you join the crowds that are praising the Tepper slogan—"no trading stamps nor favors, but more for your money."

"Kid" Walton, who covered third for High Bridge, was given a flattering reception. He was remembered by many of the fans when he played here. He got one good hit off of Randolph and made several good stops at third.

Although Brit. Martin made two mean errors he was in the game all the time and it was great satisfaction for him when he scored the winning run on his brother's drive.

Kraft certainly had the Indian sign on his opponents. For eight innings he continued to make them chop the air, while he stood and simply smiled at the batter. And to think he was not good enough for Somerville!

Morgan was greatly disturbed over several decisions in which he was caught stealing second and was called out on strikes. He made a vigorous protest, but to no purpose.

Although Clinton Avenue was weak with the stick they just managed to connect with the ball when High Bridge was making errors and this helped to make a victory.

The High Bridge team was accompanied by a number of the fair sex and they made lots of fun in the grandstand rooting for their favorites. When the contest was won by Plainfield one of them was heard to say: "I think that Plainfield team is too horrid for anything."

R. D. PARKER IS DIVORCED.

New York, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Eliza Parker was granted a decree of absolute divorce from her husband, Richard Devere Parker, by Spreme Court Justice Blackmar in Special Term in Brooklyn Saturday. Parker is said to be a justice of the peace in a New Jersey town. The marriage took place in England, thirty-five years ago.

The Englishwoman told of a long search for her husband. She was abandoned by him soon after they were married, and it was some time later that she learned that he had gone to America. She followed him and at length located him and also a second Mrs. Parker living in New Jersey.

Parker's New Jersey wife said that her husband had never said a word to her about a previous marriage. She said that her married life had been happy. She left the courtroom with Mr. Parker.

No one connected with the case would say what town Parker resides in.

VOTING MACHINES OUT IN ELIZABETH.

In Only One Out of Eleven Districts Did Citizens Give Majority for It.

The citizens of Elizabeth Saturday put the stamp of disapproval on the voting machine device in all but one of eleven districts. The majorities in the ten districts were emphatic. In the first district of the Fifth ward the advocates of the retention of the machine could only muster five votes out of the 121 cast.

One district by the narrowest of margins registered in favor of the machine's retention. The second district of the Eleventh ward, a Republican stronghold, was the one which, contrary to all expectations, voted against the restoration of the paper ballot, the vote standing 40 for the machine and 35 against.

The big Republican outing, the fact that it was Saturday and a busy day for business men, and the usual apathy that seems to attend special elections, kept the vote down to less than one-third the usual number.

The verdict, however, in the ten districts in which the machines were voted out was none the less positive and decisive.

Miss Mazie Gray, of West Front street, who is in the office of J. O. Osgood, chief engineer of the New Jersey Central, has been given a month's vacation to regain her health.

HARRISON ALMOST "DRY."

Police Were Active, but Only One Excise Arrest Was Made.

Determined to stop Sunday selling in Harrison, Chief of Police Rogers yesterday detailed a squad of policemen to patrol the town and arrest all violators. Only one arrest was made.

Jacob Treutle, of Passaic avenue and Hamilton street, was charged with violating the Bishops law and held in $100 bail, which he furnished, to appear in court this morning.

Patrolmen John Ward and Thos. Dolan were standing at Hamilton street when they noticed men entering and leaving Treutle's place by the side door. After waiting a reasonable length of time Ward and Dolan descended upon the saloon and arrested the proprietor and two witnesses, Martin Crogin and John McCafferty, who both gave their addresses as Bloomfield. About twenty men were in the place at the time, but the police thought only two were necessary for witnesses. Kearny and East Newark were reported as being "tight" and no arrests were made.

GLOVES BETRAYED SECRET.

Man In Whose Trunks Too Many Were Found Is Held For Smuggling.

Vito Licciardo, an Italian who came second cabin on the North German Lloyd steamship Koenigin Luise Thursday afternoon, declared four trunks containing clothing. When Customs Inspectors Siegele and Walker opened one of the trunks they found a pile of soiled clothing on top and were about to pass the trunks when they ran across a pair of long white kid gloves. Then they went to the bottom of the trunk and found seventy pairs of the same kind of gloves. They looked into the other trunks and discovered that they contained merchandise valued at upward of $2,000, so they arrested the Italian for smuggling.

Licciardo was arraigned before Commissioner Russ at Hoboken and was held in $2,000 bail for a hearing. He said he lived at 144 Baxter street, New York, and that he had been in this country for seven years, but he professed to be unable to speak English.

Mrs. Stiles—I do wish you'd try to keep yourself neater.

Mr. Stiles—But, my dear, you're not so carful—

Mrs. Stiles—I'm not? I'm certainly more careful of my clothes than you.

Mr. Stiles—Exactly. Whereas, you should be more careful of me.—The Catholic Standard and Times.

THIS IS AN IDEAL BUSINESS GIRL.

Since women have entered the business world like a tidal wave, there is a good deal of questioning going on as to how they are treated.

Half of them complain that men are rude. The others declare that all men are angels of politeness.

Some clever people have been trying to sum up the situation, and they believe that the girl to whom "hats are off" in the business world, is the one who:

Doesn't wear clothes that attract unpleasant attention.

Doesn't ogle every man she meets when she is asking him a business question.

Doesn't put paint and powder on her face instead of plenty of water and cold cream.

Doesn't think it is clever to use the latest slang.

Doesn't let men call her at any time without the prefix "Miss."

Doesn't make intimates in the commercial world, but is courteous to every one.

Doesn't listen to gossip any private affairs and doesn't tell any of hers.

Doesn't expect every man to wait on her and take the time to listen to her love affairs.

Doesn't say a man is rude merely because he is abrupt.

TUCKS ON LINEN.

Lingerie waists of handkerchiefs linen are most attractive when hemstitched tucks are made in groups of three, with bands of dainty insertion between.

The tucks help to keep the sheer blouse from tearing too easily and the hemstitching gives it a slightly openwork effect, at once beautiful and appropriate to the fine material.

REMEMBERED LAFAYETTE.

Miss Mary Getzendanner Recalled His Second Visit to America in 1824.

Ocean Grove, Aug. 10.—Miss Mary Getzendanner, who died Saturday at this place, was reputed to be the only person in this section of the coast who remembered the second visit of Lafayette to this country, in 1824. She was ninty-six years old, but for the last three Sundays was able to attend religious services in the Auditorium. She was staying with her sister, Mrs. E. A. Beacon, and the latter's daughter and son-in-law, Edgar H. Holbrook, whose summer home is at 78 Mt. Tabor Way.

Miss Getzendanner lived for most of her long life at Uniontown, Pa., and it was there, when twelve years old; she was chosen to be one of the flower girls to scatter roses before General Lafayette in his progress through the town. Her recollection of this event was clear and she often referred to it.

LANDSCAPE ARTIST KILLED.

George Cooke, Who Laid Out Twombly Estate Victim of Accident.

George Cooke, a noted landscape artist and chief engineer of the San Diego City and County Boulevard Commission, was killed in the mountains, near Alpine, in a runaway acciden at San Diego, Cal., Thursday. The harness snapped, and Cooke was thrown from his rig, sustaining injuries from which he died several hours later. He had charge of the park system, laid out at San Diego by Samuel Parsons.

Mr. Cooke was born in England, and had charge of several great estates there. He went to Canada and later to the United States. He laid out a number of private parks near New York, including the estate of H. McK. Twombly, at Madison, N. J.

MANAGER ACCUSED.

James J. Broomfield, of Trenton, who recently resigned as manager of the contract department of the Interstate Telephone Company, was arrested yesterday on the charge of embezzlement. He was taken before Justice of the Peace Manfred Naar, who held him in $300 bail for the Grand Jury. It is alleged that the loss to the company was discovered and Broomfield was requested to resign. After handing in his resignation he was arrested.

Broomfield maintains that if any shortage exists in his accounts it is due to careless handling of the funds and not to embezzlement. He says he stands ready to make good any shortage that may be found.

ROLLS TO DEATH UNDER CAR.

James Fee, of Trenton, a veteran of the Civil War, was killed under the wheels of a Camden and Trenton trolley car, on Adeline street, in the suburbs, late Thursday night. He rolled down an embankment along the tracks and fell under the wheels. It is reported that he was intoxicated. He had just received his pension money.

Motorman Frank Huelings and Conductor Leslie L. Horner, both of Riverside, N. J., were arrested and taken before Justice Harper, who held them in $500 bail each for appearance for a hearing Monday night. Fee's funeral will be held tomorrow morning.

Plainfield, N. J., August 10, 1908.

Col. Bryan should have a fellow feeling for Count Zeppelin.

Many people seem to want Atlantic City shutup tight, except when they are there.

Mr. Hughes appears to be the loudest shouter for a renomination for Governor Hughes.

Bryan declares that he will not accept a second term, but that goes without saying, as he will never get a first.

If those Democrats hope to beat "Joe" Frelinghuysen they will have to do some mighty big political speeding over in Somerset county.

Thaw says that the services of his lawyers and experts weren't worth the prices they charged. No one will question that he wasn't worth spending any money on.

Reliable political forecasters say that Jersey will give Taft 40,000 majority. This may or may not be an accurate guess, but certain it is that Union county will roll up a majority that will be thoroughly in keeping with its reputation in the Republican ranks.

Elizabeth has practically banished the voting machine, one district alone in that city having decided to retain the device. Judging by the reports coming in from all parts of the State, Plainfield will be one of the very few places where the machine will be used on November 3.

It might have been known at the outset that the mosquitoes which are grazing just now on the denizens of the Island of Manhattan came from Long Island of Staten Island. Jersey skeeters are very particular.—Paterson Guardian.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Afloat in the Open Polar Sea" is the title of one of the most wonderful pieces of stage realism that has ever been invented. It is shown exclusively with Lew Dockstader and his company of minstrel entertainers which open the season at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, and keeps every one wondering as to how the effect is produced. The rushing water, the huge cakes of floating ice, all in motion and the enormous ice bergs careening across the stage all heighten one of the most wonderful scenes ever devised.

Manager Counihan offers at the New Plainfield theatre for Saturday matinee and night "The Straight Road," by Clyde Fitch. The play is a simple heart story full of good humor and strong dramatic situation. The New York, as well as the press and public throughout the country have proclaimed this Mr. Fitch's strongest effort. The original production will be used and a company of such well known artists as Minnie Victorson, Joseph Slaytor, Maggie Weston, Cyril Raymond, Lora Rogers, W. M. Syawne, Edward Clement, Charlotte Meyer, Arline Hines, etc.

Minnie Victorsen, Leading Lady in "The Straight Road" company, at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, Matinee and Night.

HERE AND THERE.

As the result of practical jokes played on them, which spoiled the fishing trip they had planned, a party of six would-be followers of Izaak Walton are still pretty "sore" when the piscatorial sport is mentioned. The half-dozen had read of the wonderful catches recently made at New Market pond and determined to try their luck last Friday night. One of the party was delegated to dig the worms and showed up with a bait can full of plump "night-walkers" when starting time came. Another of the party had secured a lantern, and proudly reminded the "bunch" that he had remembered to put a full supply of oil in it. The sextette brought the fishing tackle, and showed up at the appointed time at the pre-arranged meeting place on North avenue.

Everything looked so propitious for a big catch that the party's appetite grew uncontrollable as they talked about the large, fat fish they would bring home, and they decided to go to a North avenue restaurant to have a "feed" before starting out. While they were gone, things happened, for some mischief lovers were left at the meeting place.

Arriving at New Market, it was so dark that they decided to "light up," but at this decision, they encountered the results of the first practical joke. For the wick was entire turned down into the Rockefeller-juice, and oily fingers and a little pile of burnt matches in the road resulted before the lantern could be made to burn.

But the party recovered from their wrath, and howls of joy greeted the first sight of the pond. Rushing to the brink, they "limbered up" their fishing rods and strung their tackle. Then one member of the party dipped into the bait can and drew forth—a large cinder. (Brief imaginative pause).

Instead of the wriggling mass of fat "night-walkers," culled at such at out-lay of time, the can contained ashes—substituted by the jokers while the sextette were lunching. It is authentically reported that no fish were caught, and some say that the "fishermen" did not even bring the can of ashes home with them.

Major Martin Goes West.

Major W. B. Martin, of Elizabeth, a member of the National Rifle Team, who was given a reception in Elizabeth Saturday night, left today for Camp Perry, Toledo, Ohio, where he will be a member of the New Jersey State Rifle Team in the National rifle matches there, which will continue until August 29. He will then go to Sea Girt, where he will take part in the State rifle matches which will extend to September 1. After that he expects to settle down at his home in Elizabeth.

Miss May MacLaughlin, of New York, has returned home after a visit with Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Jr., and Miss Mary Steiner, of the borough.

UNUSUAL ACTIVITY IN REAL ESTATE FIELD

During the past week there has been unusual activity in the local real estate market for this time of the year, and it indicates that the coming fall will be a busy one in the building line. The Central Park Realty Company, represented by Ernest T. Sharpe and Charles Matt, have sold the ten-room dwelling on Prospect avenue, near Kensington, to Franklin L. Groff, president of the Mersereau Metal Bed Company, of Jersey City, the consideration being $10,000.

E. C. Biddle, contractor, of Brooklyn, has decided on plans for the erection of twelve new dwellings to cost from $7,000 to $8,000 each. Five will be erected on Prospect avenue, one on Evergreen avenue, four on Martine avenue and two on Thornton avenue. These are in addition to three new houses being constructed by Mr. Biddle on Prospect avenue, and which are nearing completion.

The L. W. Johnson Construction Company, of New York, has plans perfected for the erection of two reinforced concrete dwellings of the monolithic style, at Hillside and Evergreen avenues. They will cost $8,000 each.

Through the agency of Elston M. French, the dwelling on Evergreen avenue, near Kensington, has been leased to Silas P. Wood, of New York, and one on Martine avenue has been leased to W. J. McCune, of the Otis Elevator Company, while the house at 183 Martine avenue, has been leased to J. G. Saxton, a well-known artist. Armstrong Mulford, the real estate broker, has leased a house on Evergreen avenue, near Kensington, to C. L. Wilson, a New York importer. Possession of all these houses will be taken within a short time.

Borough Court Blotter.

Bert Sherman, of Park avenue, who was found helplessly drunk on Washington avenue late Saturday night by Borough Marshal Reinman was released with suspended sentence after a lecture by Borough Recorder Dolliver today. William Banks, colored, a hack driver, got scrappy in front of a Somerset street saloon late Saturday night and was arrested by Marshal Lemuel Pope. He was fined $5 at his hearing today.

Mrs. M. D. Sweeney and daughter, Miss Evelyn Sweeney, of New York, are spending their vacation at the home of Mrs. Sweeney's brother, George Squires, in Springfield.

NEW STEAMER FOR THE "HOOK" ROUTE

It is reported that the Central Railroad of New Jersey will soon let the contract for a new steamboat to be added to the company's fleet on the "Sandy Hook" route, so called from its former terminus, although it now runs to Atlantic Highlands. To keep pace with the increased traffic the new boat will be ordered at once, it is said, and put in commission next summer.

At present the vessels of the fleet comprise the Asbury Park, Monmouth and Sandy Hook. The Asbury Park, the newest of the fleet, was commissioned four years ago, and proved one of the speediest vessels in the harbor. All of the boats are of the twin screw style.

The new boat may be constructed on the turbine principle. It may be named the Seabright.

PERSONAL.

Misses Bessie and Grace Ten Eyck, of West Fifth street, have gone to the Catskills for their summer vacation.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of West Eighth street, is spending the month at Loon Lake in the Adirondacks.

Miss Elma Hall, of Monroe, is spending the week in Plainfield as the guest of Miss Maud L. Berry, of Leland avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins with their son Paul, of Salem, N. J., spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Knox, of Rockview avenue.

Another "Merry Widow."

The clever girl who knows how to guide her pencil along the canvas, producing duplicates of all the pretty girl pictures, will appreciate her work if she has among her collection the "Merry Widow" cushion. There are many printed ones, showing the "Merry Widow" and lover at her side, but such silly cushions are not pretty, though the artistic little widow alone, in her original dress, is very pretty as a figure on a cushion top. The dress is of black dotted with silver, and a large black hat is covered with large red roses and red strings tied beneath the chubby chin. Red stockings and black slippers are pretty, too. This work can be outlined entirely with wash colors in silk or drawn with colored ink, black and red. A cushion of this kind recently made had a three-inch border made entirely of one-inch blocks of black, edged with a delicate red line.

GOWNS OF ONE WOMAN.

A London letters ays Mrs. John Jacob Astor has just returned from Paris with an exquisite wardrobe designed in the much-discussed directoire style. They fit her to perfection; Worth and Doucet have expended hours upon them, and the result is creations of rare beauty. It is only the people who think evil morning, noon and night who see anything wrong in the "scabbard" gown. It has grace, elegance and art in every line.

Mrs. Astor's frocks are of the modified order—not cut so closely to the lines of the figure as those worn across the channel. She will set hers off to perfection. One is of the Old World blue Roman satin; the color matches her eyes. It is devoid of trimming save for a band of embroidery, jeweled with sapphires, which outlines the front drapery. The dress fastens on the left side with a buckle of the stones. You can imagine what a picture she will make in this, crowned by her mass of white hair. At one of the courts she will wear a white satin directoire gown, cut on the same lines as the blue, with jewels set in the style of the period.

There is no woman in English society with such an enviable capacity for making her fellow-woman look "small" and insignificant as Mrs. Astor. This is the result, not so much of her beauty as of her "style." Whether it is because she is so decorative and so fascinating it is hard to tell. People literally fight to secure her presence at their parties. Duchesses will postpone their festivities in order to give her a chance of appearing. She is often followed about a room in London by a miniature crowd. Yet she is the quietest, demurest of women, with nothing of the "go" and vivacity which make her compatriots popular. The gossips say that Robert Hichens is posing her for the heroine of his forthcoming novel.

The Use of Old Stockings.

It is said that old stocking legs make useful petticoats for children. It would undoubtedly take much careful seaming to keep the unfortunate from resembling an animated patchwork quilt. But if the pieces were carefully sewed together, and if the stockings were originally white wool, a really useful and well-fitting winter skirt might be made.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINFIELD AND FANWOOD.

The crippled locals met their third defeat of the season Saturday, although the mixed teams put up a great game against Westfield, pick of Union and Hudson counties. Frentz is missed at second and Joe Albert at third, although Flannery played a great game at the left corner of the diamond Saturday, but the changing about of the team seems to take some of the life out of the team work. Long, although not signed by Manager Frentz, would make a strong addition to the team. Clair, who played at second, was unfortunate enough to make the one error which lost the game, but he has the right man and will probably be retained by the team.

Mrs. M. Kelley, Mrs. J. Hickey and son, Miss Mary Burns, of Brooklyn; Miss Mary Niedahl, Miss Margaret Niedahl, Miss A. Corley, Mrs. T. Ruddy and daughter, all of New York, are spending a pleasant month on the farm of Mrs. K. Latimer, of Fanwood.

The Board of Deasons of the Baptist church has decided to discontinue the Sunday evening preaching service during the balance of the month. This is in line with the usual custom during the month of August.

Robert Guttridge landed third prize in the one mile bicycle race held at Westfield Saturday. He was also in the 10 mile open but only finished twelfth. A number from here were in atendance.

William Archibald and family, of Westfield, spent Sunday with relatives in Washington Valley.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held in the parlors of the church last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Meyer entertained friends from out of town over Sunday.

Several from here attended the annual outing of the G. O. P. held Saturday.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Spring Lake affords recreation these summer evenings. Every night parties of young people go out in the boats and sing popular songs, accompanied by the splash of oars.

A number of friends surprised George Smith, of Maple avenue, and spent the evening in vocal and instrumental music and in various games.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, of Plainfield, led the Christian Endeavor meeting at the Baptist church on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ward and their daughter, Elsie, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thorne.

Florence Bunting, of Stelton, has returned home after spending a week with Lorena Harris.

Nettie Stover, of Oak Tree, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kellogg.

HENRY J. COCHRAN IS LOCAL TENNIS CHAMPION

Henry J. Cochran, of the Plainfield Country Club, is singles champion of the city and borough in tennis, winning his right to the title by defeating Albert D. Beers, also of the Country Club, at the Country Club courts Saturday afternoon in the final round of the All-Plainfield tennis tournament begun last week. The scores were 6-3, 9-7 and 7-5. As winner of the title, held last year by W. B. Cragin, Jr., Cochran will receive the silver trophy cup offered by T. M. Day in accordance with an annual custom. Beers, as runner-up in the tourney, will receive a cup presented by the club.

Cochran defeated Beers, who was All-Plainfield champion in 1906 and who two weeks ago won the tennis championship of the Sunday School Athletic League, in straight sets, but the scores in the last two ran to deuce games. The players were about evenly matched in the last two sets, but Cochran played the steadier game and finally won out. A good-sized gallery watched the match.

In the semi-final round, the two surviving Park Club players were forced out of the tournament. Beers trimmed Will Barlow, Jr., in straight sets, by scores of 6-3 and 6-0, showing excellent form. Cochran took his match in this round from Monroe H. Long, the other Park Club player, by scores of 6-3 and 6-4.

BETTER OUTLOOK IN THE BUILDING TRADE

Building expenditures in 51 of the larger cities of the United States last month, as reported to Bradstreet's, aggregated $35,236,241, as against $36,231,268 in June and $30,489,274 in July a year ago. There is here shown a decrease of 2.7 per cent from June, but a gain of 15.5 per cent. over July last year. This is the first gain over the corresponding month the year before recorded for more than a year past. Twenty-eight of the fifty-one cities show gains. SOMERSET TO EXPEND $30,000 ON ROAD WORK

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders made a tour of inspection of the road from Finderne to Blackwell's Mills and from Millstone to Auten's corner on Saturday for the purpose of considering the question of improving the same. After the trip the freeholders adjourned to Weaver's Hotel at East Millstone and heard expressions of opinion for and against the improvement. The contingent from Blackwell's Mills said that they could get anywhere from East Millstone if the road was macadamized between these two points.

Director Gibson said that the county would expend about $25,000 or $30,000 for good roads during the year, and no more. Applications for roads which would cost ten times that amount had been filed with the board, and somebody was sure to be disappointed. He declared that North Plainfield is kicking because the county did not spend enough money there, while Warren county wants its road improved from Watchung to South Stirling, and also from Watchung to Warrenville and from that point to Millington and Bound Brook. Bernards had its different roads to be connected and in fact, every township in the county had perfectly legitimate reasons to advance for the expenditure of three times the amount available for the whole county. He added that the board had conscientiously gone over all the proposed routes and would meet at an early date to determine upon the work to be done. The ultimate decision will be subject to the approval of the State Commission of Roads Gylkinson.

SOMERSET'S DEMOCRATS ENDORSE BRYAN AND KERN

The Somerset County Democratic Committee met at Lake's hotel in Somerville on Saturday afternoon. On motion of Walter Linnarger, of North Plainfield, a set of resolutions drawn by him endorsing and eulogizing Bryan and Kern were unanimously passed.

The chairman was authorized to appoint a committee on speakers and another as a steering committee, which will bring to the voters' attention the provisions of the primary law and will map out the campaign generally.

Frank Tomlins, of Rutherford, returned home today after spending a fortnight as the guest of Frank M Rimmer, of Essex street.

BIGAMIST ARRESTED.

Moffit Said He Was Told First Wife Was Dead.

Frank A. Moffit, a horse dealer at Warren Point, adjoining the North Jersey Country Club, near Hackensack, is under $10,000 bail, having been arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with bigamy. Moffitt at first treated the matter as a joke, but later said he was told six years ago by his father that his first wife, Hattie E. Wood, of Middletown, N. Y., had died there.

The second wife, at Paterson girl, 20 years old, married Moffitt a year ago. She has a baby boy and has been living with her parents at 26 Lake street, Paterson. Several days ago her husband called there and kidnapped the baby, and while endeavoring to get her baby back she learned that Moffitt's first wife was still living in Middletown.

OBJECTS TO [illegible]

Vitriolic Writer Fails to See Any Good in Him.

But with the bass ringer it is different. Here we have a normal man, entirely sound in mind, who yet bellows like a bull of Bashan. He stands up, he clears his throat, he throws back his head and his Adam's apple begins to tremble. At once there issues from his glottis a long, sinuous snake of sound. It goes down, down, down, down—a mad jumble of hoots, whoops and howls—leaving civilization and the diatonic scale behind it and entering the undiscovered country of the ultra-violet tones. Beside it the ultimate grunt of a bullfiddle seems like the shrill scream of a piccolo, and the nether blast of a B flat ophicleide like an oboe's jumping-off note. It shakes the building and clouds the heavens. It makes strong men quake with fear and brings sorrow to the home. And all the while the basso profundo is a sane man, who knows what he is doing. For him we urge the knout. Let him be dragged to the courthouse square and flogged. Let him taste the bastinado. —Baltimore Sun.

HOTTEST SPOT ON THE EARTH.

Musendam Peninsula Said to Hold That Unenviable Record.

The hottest place on earth is said to be the Musendam peninsula, at the entrance to the Persian gulf from the Ormuz islands. The scenery of the Elphinstone inlet to the peninsula is grand, but desolate. The native can live in the place only from November to March. A cable station was once established on Telegraph island, but it had to be abandoned. Some of the men died, others went mad and the rest fled. In Malcolm inlet there is no sign of life. The rocks in the foreground are entirely red, the sea the most brilliant and intense blue, the distant mountains purple. The people of the peninsula are of a primitive type, and probably represent an Arab strain mingled with a far earlier stock. They live in rude stone huts, and their principal food is fish.

Better Than Watching Race.

Here is an incident related by an American who visited the great Derby race in England: "I was standing near a booth where a man was selling pork pies, and close by I noticed a spare, cadaverous boy, who was plainly yearning for something to eat. I said to the boy, 'Would you like one of those pies?' 'Would I?' replied the boy. 'Give him a pie,' I said, putting down a half-crown. The boy grabbed the pie, and it quickly disappeared. 'Give him another,' I said, and it rapidly followed the other. 'You must have been hungry,' I said to the boy. 'Yes, it's the first I've had to eat since yesterday.' I gave the boy a sixpence, when I heard a man standing by say, 'Ain't he a brick?' meaning me. 'No, he ain't,' said the boy; 'he's a Yankee.' I accepted the compliment, and was grateful for the opportunity to give one boy a good meal. It really did me more solid good than watching the 'Derby.'"

Looking at the Bright Side.

A lady residing in a quiet village in Suffolk used to take an interest in a very aged couple who were spinning out the last thread of life in "Darby and Joan" fashion, seated on either side of the fireplace. She often paid them a visit to cheer them up. The old man had been ailing, and at last a day came when the visitor found only one chair occupied. Darby was not in his usual place.

"Where is your husband?"

"Well, mum, he be gone at last."

"O, I'm sorry. That is very sad for you," said the lady, seeking to find some words of consolation.

"Yes, mum, it be sad," replied the old woman, "but then, you see, he were fearfully in the way of the oven."—Stray Stories.

The Canny Wooer.

It was fair time in Selkirk, and Sandy and his sweetheart were wandering round arm in arm enjoying the sights. Presently they espied a smart-looking pie-shop, which they promptly entered. Sandy ordered one pie, sat down and commenced to eat it. Meanwhile the girl looked shyly on.

"Is't fine, Sandy?" she timidly asked.

"Ay, 'tis awful fine, Jennie!" he answered. "Ye should buy one!"—Penny Pictorial.

Too Mountainous.

"Yes," said Slangey, "I tramped through Switzerland once."

"Come off!" exclaimed Dowter. "You never did!"

"Sure I did; on the level."

"That proves you're lying. It's simply impossible to tramp through Switzerland on the level."—The Catholic Standard and Times.

Recognition.

"The men who devote their time to the country's service should be recognized," said the official.

"Well," answered Farmer Corntassel, "some of 'em should and others 'ud be more respected if they could approach the pay roll in disguise."

Another Thrust.

Eva (reading novel)—She riveted her eyes.

Dick—You don't say?

Eva—And then she dropped them.

Dick—My! My! Just like a woman. She can never nail or rivet anything securely.—Chicago Daily News.

Sea Snakes Hard to Get.

Collecting sea snakes for the scientific institutions is a difficult process. If the collector is to obtain anything like a fair proportion of the 50 odd species he must cruise through Malayan seas in a small boat and be ever on the watch. The only way to obtain a series of the species is to shoot them. Sea snakes come regularly to the surface for air, but the collector is lucky if he gets one out of every ten snakes he sees.

In Any Case It Was the Cat.

Two Columbia students rooming together cook some of their meals themselves and take turns in doing the marketing. One of them brought home two chops the other night, intending them for breakfast. Some time in the night a cat stole one of the chops. This brought about the first quarrel that had arisen between the young men. They could not decide the question "Whose chop did the cat eat?"

The Basis of Good Society.

"Society," like everything else which is collectively human, is just what its units allow it to be, and this is as true inside the church as anywhere else. The need of the day is no new one—it is for men and women whose example will make them lights and beacons in our politics, our churches, our educational establishments, our "society," and in all our human relations.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Larry's Dig.

Two riveters were working on the big skyscraper. "Do yez think thor'll be a war?" said Larry. "Oi don't know," replied Denny, as he lit his pipe, "but if thor is Oi'll be at th' front." "Thot's what yez will be, me bye. At th' front window watching th' throops pass by." And then Larry dodged a rivet.

She Knew.

"Miss Sharpe—er—Vera," he stammered, "you must know why I've been calling here so much; why I sit here in the parlor with you night after night—" "I suppose, Mr. Kloseman," the girl interrupted, "it's cheaper to do that than take me out anywhere."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Playgrounds.

It's a good scheme to use the school yards as public playgrounds. They are convenient for all sections, and the plan will be indorsed by the people. A few portable swings, an awning with a few benches and a sand pile or two will fill the requirements. —Harrisburg Telegraph.

Sure to Get Some.

"Anything on deposit?" asked the girl's father, brusquely. "Not exactly in my own name," replied the rising young attorney, "but I've just been appointed receiver of a bank." After this the essential "Bless you, my children," was a foregone certainty.

Just a Beginner.

Robbie—"Your Uncle George seems awful young to be a doctor." Elsie—"Yes, but he ain't a real growed-up doctor yet. I guess he's only tendin' to children first, so's to get some practice."—Philadelphia Press.

A By-Product.

A small boy, whose parents believed in the old proverb, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," ran into the house one day exclaiming: "Oh, grandpa, come out here quick! Our switch tree has a peach on it!"—Harper's.

Public Parks in German Cities.

Three German cities—Frankfort, Rostock and Cologne—have public parks covering about half their area. Berlin, on the other hand, has less than six per cent. of its area taken up by parks.

Only Two Kinds.

There are, after all, only two kinds of people in the world—those who are trying to keep their names out of the newspapers and those who are trying to get theirs in.

No Home Complete Without It.

The Thibetan Bible contains 108,000 pages. This leaves plenty of room for mother to hide her money.—Chicago Journal.

Discovered.

Puppy Dog (looking into goldfish globe)—Ha! ha! So you're some of them people what lives in glass houses. —Yale Record.

Daily Thought.

Men cannot live isolated, we are all bound together. No higher man can separate himself from any lowest.—Carlysle.

Belgium Mines Well Looked After.

The death rate among the miners is less in Belgium than in any other country.

Character Shown in Face.

An amiable face is trustworthy. If eyes are shifting and you have discovered insincerity—then beware.

Safe Rule for Guidance.

What one has one ought to use; and whatever he does he should do with all his might.—Cicero.

And Some More on Other Things.

New York spends $2,000,000 a year on grand opera; and more than that on ragtime and fool songs and plays.

Heart Disease Kills Doctors.

In Austria no fewer than 44 out of every 100 doctors die of heart disease.

EYE-STRAIN

is directly responsible for the majority of cases of blindness today. If instead of trying to overwork the eyes, one would at once get glasses at the first warning of eye-strain there would be fewer cases of blindness at the present time.

Come to us and have your eyes examined free of charge and we will advise you what to do to save them.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR THE HOME COOK.

Not every housewife knows that a large bowl of fresh water placed in a room over night will absorb all the smell of tobacco from the evening's pipes and cigars, and prevent that stale smell in the morning which is so difficult to get rid of.

At the same time, all ends of cigars and tobacco ash should be cleared away before closing the room for the night. This simple precaution is quite worth while where a small flat is concerned, and where the dining-room is used in lieu of a smoking room.

Lemons which have become hard and shrunken from being kept too long may be softened by laying them to soak for a few hours in cold water. To keep the yolk of an egg from congealing it is a good plan to pour a little water over it before putting it away. When this is poured off before making use of the yolk the latter will be found perfectly soft and fresh.

The disagreeable odor of cooking "greens" can always be avoided by placing a bag containing a lump of bread the size of a hen's egg in the saucepan with the boiling vegetables. This serves to absorb the gases, which otherwise escape and permeate the entire house. A few pieces of charcoal in the cooking pot are said to serve the same purpose.

If a grinding mill has been used in crushing spices it is seldom easy to rid it of the strong aroma which clings to the working parts. The experiment should, however, be tried of passing a little rice through the grinder, the grains of which effectually clean the machinery.

A clean brick makes an excellent rest for teh hot iron on laundry days, as it holds the heat better than the perforated iron stands generally used for the purpose.

For really palatable milk toast, cut the bread into slices a quarter of an inch thick and toast to a delicate brown. The crust may be removed or not, as preferred.

Put the toast on a plate that can go in teh oven, and cover with a thick layer of butter. Pour over rich milk or cream and put in a hot oven until the liquid has thoroughly heated and soaked through the bread. If preferred, a sprinkling of salt can be added.

FOR THE WOULD-BE BUSINESS GIRL.

If you want to succeed you must dress the part. Don't be wasteful or extravagant in your dress, but keep yourself neat-looking and well groomed. Don't go about with a slipshod, hang-dog air, as though you and success were as far apart as the poles. If you look helpless and incompetent no one will trust you with work of any kind.

When you apply for a post, do so in a modest yet confident manner.

Business men are not looking for helpless, dependent femininity in their employes.

What they want is a well-behaved, capable business woman.

Dress as well as you can afford to, but don't make the mistake of wearing beads and laces and elbow sleeves while on duty.

Many an applicant has failed to win a position because she was untidy or overdressed.

When there is something important to be done your employer will say: "I will put it in the hands of Miss K. She looks trustworthy."

The first steps in the ladder of success are the most difficult ones to climb.

But nothing succeeds like success, you know, and when you have once made yourself known as a capable, successful worker half the battle is won.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Dainty Things for Baby.

An extraordinarily pretty baby's sacque to be worn on occasions is crocheted on the circular kimono style. Afterward narrow wash ribbon is run through the stitches radiating from the collar line. The ribbon bands keep the crocheted fabric from stretching out of shape, and the little bows that finish the ribbon at each end do their part toward decorating the diminutive garment.

One of the beauties of knitted and crocheted garments is that ribbon may be run through any of the stitches without injuring the fabric or pulling the individual parts out of shape.

The Oldest Student.

Miss Sarah Morrison is 75 years old, but she believes that a woman is never too old to learn, and so matriculated at the Wesleyan University of Illinois, at Bloomington, lately, and will make a specialty of Greek during the summer term. She was the first woman graduate of the university in 1869, and majored in Latin and Greek.

Considerate of Him.

"See here," said Mrs. Houskeep, "you told me that work would only cost $13 and here you've sent in a bill for $14."

"Yes'm," replied the carpenter, "you see, when I came to think the thing over afterward I was afraid maybe you might be superstitious about that 13."—Philadelphia Press.

(Copyright, 1908, by R. F. Fenno & Co.)

Immediately after, at a sign from the Sub-factor, Cloud-in-the-Sky began to transfer the burning wood from one fire to the other until only hot ashes were left where a great fire had been. Over these ashes pine twigs and branches were spread, and over them again blankets. The word was then given to turn in, and Jeff Hyde, Gaspe Toujours, and Late Carscallen lay down in this comfortable bed. Each wished to give way to their captain, but he would not consent, and he and Cloud-in-the-Sky wrapped themselves in their blankets like mummies, covering their heads completely, and under the arctic sky they slept alone in an austere and tenantless world. They never know how loftily sardonic Nature can be who have not seen that land where the mercury freezes in the tubes, and there is light but no warmth in the smile of the sun. Not Sturt in the heart of Australia with the mercury bursting the fevered tubes, with the finger-nails breaking like brittle glass, with the ink drying instantly on the pen, with the hair falling off and fading, would, if he could, have exchanged his lot for that of the White Guard. They are in a frozen endlessness that stretches away to a world where never voice of man or clip of wing or tread of animal is heard. It is the threshold to the undiscovered country, to that untouched north whose fields of white are only furrowed by the giant forces of the elements; on whose frigid hearthstone no fire is ever lit; a place where the electric phantoms of a nightless land pass and repass, and are never still; where the magic needle points not toward the north but darkly downward, downward!—where the sun never stretches warm hands to him who dares confront the terrors of eternal snow.

The White Guard sleeps!

CHAPTER IV.

"No, Captain; leave me here and push on to the Manitou Mountain. You ought to make it in two days. I'm just as safe here as on the sleds and less trouble; a blind man's no good. I'll have a good rest while you're gone, and then perhaps my eyes will come out right. My foot is nearly well now."

Yes, Jeff Hyde was snow-blind. This, the giant of the party, had suffered most.

But Jaspar Hume said, "I won't leave you alone, my man. The dogs can carry you, as they've done for the last ten days."

But Jeff replied, "I'm as safe here as marching, and safer. When the dogs are not carrying me, nor any one leading me, you can get on faster; and that means everything to us; now don't it?"

Jaspar Hume met the eyes of Gaspe Toujours. He read them. Then he said to Jeff Hyde, "It shall be as you wish. Late Carscallen, Cloud-in-the-Sky, and myself will push on to Manitou Mountain. You and Gaspe Toujours will remain here."

Jeff Hyde's blind eyes turned toward Gaspe Toujours, and Gaspe Toujours said, "Yes. We have plenty of tabac."

A tent was set up, provisions were put in it, a spirit-lamp and matches were added, and the simple menage was complete. Not quite. Jaspar Hume looked round. There was not a tree in sight. He stooped and cut away a pole that was used for strengthening the runners of the sleds; fastened it firmly in the ground, and tied to it a red woollen scarf, which he had used for tightening his white blankets round him. Then he said: "Be sure and keep that flying, men."

Jeff Hyde's face was turned toward the north. The blind man's instinct was coming to him. Far off white eddying drifts were rising over long hillocks of snow. When Jeff turned round again his face was slightly troubled. It grew more troubled, then it brightened up again, and he said to Jaspar Hume, "Captain, would you leave that book with me till you come back—that about infirmities, dangers, and necessities? I knew a river-boss who used to carry an old spelling-book round with him for luck. It had belonged to a schoolmaster who took him in and did for him when his father and mother went into Kingdom Come. It seems to me as if that book of yours, Captain, would bring luck to this part of the White Guard, that bein' out at the heels like has to stay behind."

Jaspar Hume had borne the sufferings of his life with courage; he had led this terrible tramp with no tremor at his heart for himself; he was seeking to perform a perilous act without any inward shrinking; but Jeff's request was the greatest trial of this momentous period in his life. This book had not left his breast, save when he slept, for twenty years. To give it up was like throwing open the doors of his nature to such weaknesses that assail and conquer most men at some time or other in their lives.

Jeff Hyde felt, if he could not see, the hesitation of his chief. His rough but kind instincts told him something was wrong in his request, and he hastened to add, "Beg your pardon, sir, it ain't no matter; I oughtn't to have asked you for it. But it's just like me; I've been a chain on the leg of the White Guard this whole tramp."

The moment of hesitation had passed before Jeff Hyde had said half a dozen words, and Jaspar Hume put the book in his hands with the words, "No, Jeff Hyde, take it. It will bring luck to the White Guard. Put it where I have carried it, and keep it safe until I come back."

Jeff Hyde placed the book in his bosom, but hearing a guttural "Ugh" behind him he turned round defiantly. The Indian touched his arm and said, "Good! Strong-back book—good!" Jeff was satisfied.

At this point they parted, Jeff Hyde and Gaspe Toujours remaining, and Jaspar Hume and his two followers going on toward Manitou Mountain. There seemed little probability that Varre Lepage would be found. In their progress eastward and northward they had covered wide areas of country, dividing and meeting again after stated hours of travel, but not a sign had been seen; neither cairn nor staff nor any mark of human presence.

Jaspar Hume had noticed Jeff Hyde's face when it was turned to the eddying drifts of the north, and he understood what was in the experienced huntsman's mind. He knew that severe weather was before them, and that the greatest difficulty of the journey was to be encountered. Yet, somehow, the fear that possessed him when the book was taken from his breast had left him, and he reaped in his act of self-sacrifice a larger courage and rarer strength than that which had heretofore stayed him on this cheerless journey.

That night they saw Manitou Mountain, cold, colossal, harshly calm; and jointly with that sight there arose a shrieking, biting, fearful north wind. It blew upon them in cruel menace of conquest, in piercing inclemency. It struck a freezing terror to their hearts, and grew in violent attack until, as if repenting that it had foregone its power to save, the sun suddenly grew red and angry and spread out a shield of blood along the bastions of the west. The wind shrunk back and grew less murderous, and ere the last red arrows shot up behind the lonely western wall of white, the three knew that the worst of the storm had passed and that death had drawn back for a time. What Jaspar Hume thought we shall gather from his diary; for ere he crawled in among the dogs and stretched himself out beside Jacques, he wrote these words with aching fingers:—

"January 10th: Camp 39.—A bitter day. We are facing three fears now: the fate of those we left behind; his fate; and the going back. We are thirty miles from Manitou Mountain. If he is found, I should not fear at all the return journey; success gives hope. We trust in God."

Another day passes and at night, after a hard march, they camp five miles from Manitou Mountain. And not a sign! But Jaspar Hume knows that there is a faint chance of Varre Lepage being found at this mountain. His iron frame has borne the hardships of this journey well; his valiant heart better. But this night an unaccountable weakness possesses him. Mind and body are on the verge of helplessness and faintness. Jacques seems to understand that, and when he is unhitched from the team of dogs, now dwindled to seven, he goes to his master and leaps upon his breast. It was as if some instinct of sympathy, of prescience, was passing between the man and the dog. Jaspar Hume bent his head down to Jacques for an instant and rubbed his side kindly; then he said, with a tired accent, "It's all right, dog; it's all right!"

Jaspar Hume did not sleep well at first that night, but at length oblivion came. He waked to feel Jacques tugging at his blankets. It was noon. Late Carscallen and Cloud-in-the-Sky were still sleeping—inanimate bundles among the dogs. In an hour they were on their way again, and toward sunset they had reached the foot of Manitou Mountain. Abruptly from the plain rose this mighty mound, blue and white upon a black base. A few struggling pines grew near its foot, defying latitude, as the mountain itself defied the calculations of geographers and geologists. A halt was called. Late Carscallen and Cloud-in-the-Sky looked at the chief. His eyes were scanning the mountain closely. Suddenly he paused. Five hundred feet up there is a great round hole in the solid rock, and from this hole there comes a feeble cloud of smoke! Jaspar Hume's hand points where his eyes are fixed. The other two see. Cloud-in-the-Sky gives a wild whoop, such a whoop as only an Indian can give, and from the mountain there comes, a moment after, a faint replica of the sound. It is not an echo, for there appears at the mouth of the cave an Indian who sees them and makes feeble signs for them to come. In a few moments they are at the cave. As Jaspar Hume enters, Cloud-in-the-Sky and the stalwart but emaciated Indian who had beckoned to them speak to each other in the Chinook language, the jargon common to all Indians of the West.

Jaspar Hume saw a form reclining on a great bundle of pine branches, and he knew what Rose Lepage had prayed for had come to pass. By the flickering light of a handful of fire he saw Varre Lepage—rather what was left of him—a shadow of energy, a heap of nerveless bones. His eyes were shut, but as Jaspar Hume, with a quiver of memory and sympathy at his heart, stood for an instant and looked at the man whom he had cherished as a friend and found an enemy, the pale lips of Varre Lepage moved and a weak voice said, "Who—is there?"

"A friend."

"A friend! Come—near—me,—friend!"

Jaspar Hume made a motion to Late Carscallen, who was heating some liquor at the fire, and he came near and stooped and lifted up the sick man's head, and took his hand.

"You have come—to save me—to save me!" said the weak voice again.

"Yes; I have come to save you." This voice was strong and clear and true.

"I seem—to have—heard—your voice before—somewhere before—I seem to—have—" But he had fainted.

Jaspar Hume poured a little liquor down the sick man's throat, and Late Carscallen chafed the delicate hand—delicate in health, it was like that of a little child now. When breath came again Jaspar Hume whispered to his helper. "Take Cloud-in-the-Sky and get wood; bring fresh branches; clear one of the sleds, and we will start back with him in the early morning."

"Yes," said Jaspar Hume; "he will get there."

"But he is dying."

"He goes with me to Fort Providence."

"Ay, to Providence he goes, but not with you," said Late Carscallen, sadly but doggedly.

Anger flashed in Jaspar Hume's eye, but he said quietly, "I shall take him to his wife; get the wood, Carscallen."

And Jaspar Hume was left alone with the starving Indian, who sat beside the fire eating voraciously, and the sufferer, who now mechanically was taking a little biscuit sopped in brandy. For a few moments thus, and his sunken eyes opened and he looked dazedly at the man bending above him. Suddenly there came into them a look of terror. "You—you—are Jaspar Hume," the voice said in an awed whisper.

"Yes," and the hands of the Sub-factor chafed those of the other.

"But you said you were a—friend and come to save me."

"I am come to save you."

There was a shiver of the sufferer's body. This discovery would either make him stronger or kill him altogether. Jaspar Hume knew this, and said: "Varre Lepage, the past is past and dead to me; let it be so to you."

There was a pause.

"How—did you know—about me?"

"I was at Fort Providence; there came letters from the Hudson Bay Company, and from your wife, saying that you were making this journey, and were six months behind—"

"My wife, my wife! Rose!"

"Yes, I have a letter for you from her. She is on her way to Canada. We are to take you to her."

"To take me—to her!" He shook his head sadly, but he pressed the letter that Jaspar Hume had just given him to his lips.

"To take you to her, Varre Lepage."

"No, I shall never—see her—again."

"I tell you, you shall. You can live if you will. You owe that to her—to me—to God!"

"To her—to—you—to God. But I have been true—to none. To win her I wronged you doubly—and wronged her too; and wronging—both of you, I wronged That Other One. I have been punished. I shall die here."

"You shall go to Fort Providence. Do that in payment of your debt to me, Varre Lepage. I demand that."

In this sinning man there was a latent spark of honor, a sense of justice that might have been developed to great causes, to noble ends, if some strong nature, seeing his weaknesses had not condoned them, but had appealed to the natural chivalry of an impressionable, vain, and weak character. He struggled to meet the eyes of Jaspar Hume, and doing so he gained confidence and said, "I will try to live. I will do you justice—yet. But, oh, my wife!"

"Your first duty is to eat and drink. We start for Fort Providence to-morrow morning."

The sick man stretched out his hand: "Food! Food!" he said.

In little bits food and drink were given to him, and his strength sensibly increased. The cave was soon aglow with the fire that was kindled by Late Carscallen and Cloud-in-the-Sky. There was little speaking, for the sick man soon fell asleep. Varre Lepage's Indian told Cloud-in-the-Sky the tale of their march—how the other Indian and the dogs died; how his master became ill as they were starting toward Fort Providence from Manitou Mountain in the summer weather; how they turned back and took refuge in this cave; how month by month they had lived on what would hardly keep a rabbit alive; and how at last his master urged him to press on with his papers; but he would not, and stayed until this day, when the last bit of food had been eaten, and they were found!

PLAGUE OF SOUTHERN RIVERS.

Water Hyacinth a Menace and Hard to Exterminate.

In the battle which has been waged against the water hyacinth which chokes up many of the rivers of the southern part of the United States, the matter has been complicated to a serious degree by the fondness which cattle exhibit for this plant. It is almost without food value, but there is something about it which attracts the animals, and they have been known to be lured to death in their efforts to secure the hyacinth. Only one method has been discovered to eradicate it, and that was by the use of powerful acids, which were sprayed upon the plants and which were very effective in killing it, but this application was the means of killing a great number of animals, and the practice was discontinued by act of congress. In the last two years investigations have been conducted by the government in the effort to discover some means of making this application in such a manner as to overcome the danger to cattle, but it has been without success. It was found that the cattle could not be prevented from eating the sprayed plants, and that all effective compounds for the purpose were deadly to the cattle. Under the existing circumstances the only manner in which the growth is combated is by cutting it out in blocks by the use of special machinery and boats and towing the tangled mass to the open water and setting it adrift. There is known to exist a parasitic fungus growth which attacks the hyacinth leaves from beneath, forming concentric circles, and in time completely kills the leaves. It would seem that further investigation along this line should be considered.

YEW TREES IN CHURCHYARDS.

Two in England of Which Records Have Been Kept.

Now and again a record may be found in old church accounts, or in some other parish document, of the planting of trees in the English churchyards. When Thomas Ken, the author of "Morning and Evening Hymns," afterward bishop of Bath and Wells, was rector of East Woodhay, near Newbury, Eng., he planted, we learn, a yew tree in the churchyard. The tree stands on the north side of the church, and though planted over 200 years ago, its trunk only now measures in circumference some seven feet seven inches. At Portchester, on the north side of the Norman church which is situated within the castle walls, there stands a yew with an interesting history. It appears that the tree which formerly stood there was killed by the smoke from the kitchens of the French prisoners, some 8,000 of whom were confined in the castle during the war with Napoleon at the beginning of the last century. The church warden's book records the fact that on the departure of the French prisoners a new tree was planted in the place of the one that had been destroyed. The trunk of this yew tree, at the height of four feet from the ground, now measures seven feet two inches in circumference.

Some Animal Woe.

All nature fakers will rejoice at the latest from Bloody Neck, Wyo. A rancher set out some poisoned cabbage which attracted a jack rabbit and he ate of the bait and died. Along came a wolf and a bob cat, and finding the carcass they had a most terrific wild west scrap over the remains. The wolf put old Mr. Bob Cat wrong and ate the rabbit. He died in a few hours and the bob cat came back, began a feast on his late unlamented enemy and also the rabbit and he too promptly died. The rancher found all three the next day and came into Thompson's place at Bloody Neck with a story that should stir all the prevention of cruelty to animals societies to earnest protests against such practices as caused this Wyoming tragedy.

Girls Taught Life-Saving.

A course in life-saving has been instituted among the women students of Columbia university for the purpose of making them as adept as men in rescuing drowning persons, says Popular Mechanics. They receive the regular life-saving drill, including the grips and breaks, towing to shore, and artificial respiration. A fully dressed girl is thrown into the water at one end of the swimming tank and other girls are obliged to rescue her from the opposite end and take her back, which is already done in 57 seconds. This new departure in co-education has become immensely popular.

Chinese Students Abroad.

The board of education has asked the throne to order the Chinese students abroad, who are now maintained at the government expense for a short course of study, to further pursue their studies for another five years and then they will be duly examined, and if they pass they may be granted a suitable title and appointments. Imperial sanction has been given to the memorial.—Shanghai Mercury.

Self-Contained Family.

As he was the only man with young children in a district of Lane county, Oregon, Mr. John Larkin formed a school committee, of which he was elected chairman and his wife clerk. Mrs. Larkin was installed as teacher by the chairman, and the five little Larkins now go to school to their own mother, who is remunerated by the state.

FEATS OF RAPID COMPOSITION.

Quick Work of Some Writers of Popular Music.

M. Bompard, a French musician who for a wager composed the music to a song in ten minutes, is a formidable rival to Mr. H. Trotere, of whose feats of rapid composition some remarkable stories are told.

His beautiful song "Asthore" was, it is said, both written and composed within 40 minutes in Blanchard's restaurant; the famous melody of "In Old Madrid" was jotted down in a few minutes on a biscuit bag in a little public house in Rochester row, into which the composer rushed on his way from the Aquarium lest the air should escape him before he could reach home; "Go to Sea" was composed under similar conditions in a West End music shop; and—crowning feat of all—it is actually said that Mr. Trotere composed "The Brow of the Hill," wrote a letter and ran 400 yards to catch the post all inside of eight minutes.

After this one learns without surprise that Sir Arthur Sullivan completed the overture to "Iolanthe" between 9 p. m. and 7 the next morning, and that to "The Yeomen of the Guard" within 12 hours.—Westminster Gazette.

OLIVE THAT SHELTERED SAGE.

Plato's Tree Still Standing Near Site of Athens' Academy.

It is well known that olive trees will live to an extreme age, and trees are known which are many centuries old. What is known as Plato's olive tree is one of the oldest upon record. It stands near Athens and on the spot where the Academy formerly existed. In spite of its great age it still appears to be in a flourishing condition and has a vigorous foliage. Although somewhat damaged by the combats of the insurrection it will do doubt live for a long time to come. The proprietor of the ground, M. Vamvacks, had the tree examined by the naturalist, Miliarakis, in order to be assured whether the popular legend dating it from the time of Plato could be correct, and it was found that its age was sufficient to bear out the legend. As to popular belief, M. Camburoglus, conservator of the National library of Athens, states that tradition has it that the tree was no doubt already old when Plato sat under its shade.—Scientific American.

Chrome Mining in Asia.

For many years past chrome mining has been pursued as an industry in Asia Minor. The chrome is usually found on mountains from 4,000 to 5,000 feet high, and is removed from the pits to the railway station or market on the backs of camels.

But while the chrome in the neighborhood of Smyrna brought £20 a ton, it now commands a very small price, being in this respect like antimony, so that it scarcely pays to mine it, and certainly not in districts remote from railways. As the chrome of other countries comes on the world's markets that of Turkey, whose mines have never been worked on a scientific basis with up-to-date machinery, must necessarily decline in value.

The Irishman's Prayer.

An Irish member of a gang of strike-breakers who were passing their first night in one of the buildings of a certain Chicago beef company, not long ago, had knelt in prayer at the side of one of the long line of cots just before retiring for the night, when suddenly a shoe sailed through the air and landed on the bed in front of him.

Raising his eyes until they rested on this leather missile, the religious Celt broke off praying long enough to reach out and draw the shoe to him. Then in loud, fervent tones he concluded his prayer:

"O Lord, Oi'll bother Ye no more if ye'll sind me th' mate to this wan!"

A Yoga's Feat.

For 14 years Bava Luchman Dass received from the priests of the Black Caves of central India the necessary education in order to become a yoga, as a yoga must be capable of taking the 48 postures of the Hindoo idols.

Perhaps his greatest trick consists in balancing himself on the ends of his fingers while the whole of his body is in the air. Bava stated that in order to obtain the rank of yoga in the Black Caves of India he had to continue in this position on the ends of his fingers under the eyes of the judges, without a second's interval, for seven days and nights!—Strand Magazine.

Dignity of Authorship.

One of the abler modern writers made this confession the other day: "I am so devoted to my wife that I allow her to break in upon me whenever she pleases. Naturally, she cuts into my line of thought and often destroys the continuity of genius. The only way for me to do a good day's work is to quarrel with her, to make her so angry that she will cry, fuss, break a few dishes, smash a kitten, scald a puppy or two, then go to her room and stay there. By the time I have done a day's work she is in excellent humor and tired of being alone. Then we make up."

Trouble.

Nan—So you like Archie, do you? I always thought him just the least bit effeminate.

CLINTON AVE.'S VICTORY

"Brit" Martin's Ponies Put Up Fine Exhibition, Defeating High Bridge.

SOME BRILLIANT PITCHING.

Local Aggregation Wins In the Tenth Inning the Result Being Four to Three—The Box Score.

The Clinton Avenues won a well-earned victory over their rivals, the High Bridge club, on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, when they defeated the Hunterdon county boys by a score of 4 to 3 in ten innings. While the home team played good ball, it was not up to their usual standard and several times throughout the contest it looked as though they were doomed to defeat. Two errors by Brit. Martin, one by Jack Martin and another by Moffett, all made at critical stages, were almost enough to lose the game, but fortune smiled on Plainfield and a victory resulted.

Honors were about even between Randolph and Kraft, the latter having a shade the best of the argument in pitching. He fanned twelve men, while Randolph got seven strikeouts to his credit. Clinton Avenue scored three runs in the first inning, and it was well that they did, for they certainly did need them later, when their opponents tied the score in the seventh inning. Kraft completely mystified his opponents for eight innings, having wonderful control of the ball and working a drop with a constant change of pace that made his opponents fan the braeeze helplessly. One after another would walk up to the plate and receive their medicine with disgust.

In the eighth inning Plainfield through a combination of hits and errors filled the bases, but then Kraft shut the gates, put on steam and retired the side without a tally. The crowd felt sure that the locals had lost their last chance to win, but in the tenth fortune against smiled, and by a streak of the greatest luck the one necessary tally was made with only one out.

In the tenth Barnes led off with a Texas leaguer to left field, Brit Martin followed with a clean hit to the same territory, and Emery put the ball in Walton's hands, forcing Barnes out at third. With Martin on second and Emery on first, and only one out, Jack Martin came along with a scorching drive along third base line to left field, bringing his brother home with the winning run. Walton made a frantic effort to stop Martin's drive, but failed to reach it. It was then all over but the shouting and the Plainfield contingent went wild with excitement in cheering the home team.

The contest was marked by a number of brilliant plays and not a few miserable errors. Brit. Martin let an easy grounder go through him, much to his disgust, but he made up for this later when he caught a scorching line drive, which would have been good for two bases at least. Another time in taking a throw of Boelzley to catch a man running from first to second, he caught the ball, but the base-runner struck him full force, knocked him off his feet and made him drop it.

High Bridge hit Randolph pretty hard throughout the contest, but luck was with the locals. The one run scored in the sixth and the two in the seventh were presented to the visitors and were not deserved. Rightfully, Plainfield should have won the game by a score of 3 to 0 in nine innings. However, the team was glad of a victory, which practically made up for the stinging defeat at High Bridge a week ago.

High Bridge was accompanied by a large crowd of loyal rooters and throughout the contest they made things lively with their cheering. It was keen satisfaction to the Plainfielders to see the Hunterdon county boys go down to defeat and the visitors although hard losers, took the result as gracefully as possible. While in a few instances the work of Umpire Moynihan seemed to be a little off, his decisions generally were fair and impartial.

The work of Boelzley behind the rubber for Clinton Avenue is deserving of special mention. His throwing to bases and the clever way in which he caught Randolph was largely responsible for the victory.

West Ends Blank Hopewell.

The West Ends, of Somerville, scored another shutout on Saturday, when they defeated Hopewell by a score of 1 to 0 in one of the prettiest contests witnessed at Somerville this season. The one tally was made on an error by Wilcox in the ninth inning. Hopewell had a chance to tie the score, but a fast double-play nipped their ambition. "Smiling Jimmie" Montross pitched for Somerville, and he allowed but three hits. He displayed his old-time form and will probably continue as a fixture with Manager Conklin's colts.

East Millstone Defeats Bound Brook.

East Millstone defeated its old rivals, Bound Brook, at the latter place Saturday afternoon, by a score of 4 to 1. The contest was witnessed by one of the largest crowds of the season, the East Millstone contingent being accompanied by more than two hundred friends. Bound Brook hired a league pitcher from Brooklyn for the game, but his work was not equal to that of Skillman, of Princeton University, who held the opponents safe throughout.

Y.M.C.A. WINS LAST GAME

Local Team Finishes League Schedule by Defeating Trenton, 9 to 1.

WILL FINISH IN FIRST PLACE.

Best Newark Can Do Will Be to Tie the Local Association Ballplayers—Saturday's Game.

The Y. M. C. A. nine clinched first place in the State league Saturday afternoon by defeating the Trenton association team at Trenton by a score of 9-1. It was the last league game of the season for the local nine, and the record of eight wins tnd two defeats makes it impossible for Newark, the team next in line for pennant honors, to beat out the local boys. If Newark plays 1,000 per cent. ball for the rest of the league schedule, the Plainfielders will be tied with them for first place and a post-season series will be necessary to decide the title. No other league games were played Saturday, and the standing to date is as follows:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Plainfield	8	2	.800
Newark	6	2	.750
Orange	3	3	.500
Trenton	3	4	.429
Summit	2	5	.286

The Plainfielders nailed down the game in the first inning, when four hits scored three earned runs. R. Schoonmaker, Craig, Peacock and Loizeaux crossed the plate in this session, when Penrose proved easy. In the next inning it was the same story, for three hits brought in two earned runs, Schoonmaker, Craig and Peacock scoring again. After this, however, Penrose tightened up, and the locals could cop no more runs until the eighth. Singles by Peacock and Conway started this inning, and Loizeaux cracked out a two-bagger when he came to bat, scoring both of them.

Trenton's lone run came in the seventh. Fossett drew a pass, and stole second and third. Schermerhorn, who is a nephew of Charles Schermerhorn, the veteran telegraph operator of this city, clipped a short single, and Fossett scored. The local nine played fast ball through the entire game, and four times robbed the Trenton players of hits by long running catches. In the second Loizeaux slapped down a hot one traveling past first after a quick dive and passed it to Jacot, retiring Penrose. "Dave" Pond ran up on a short fly behind Craig in the third and retired Schermerhorn on what everybody thought was a safe hit. In the fourth, Scott made a long run for Welling's deep fly and Truesdale robbed Bradley of a hit by a similar play in the ninth. The Plainfielders were particularly clever on the bases and Craig and Jacot shared the batting honors by each getting three hits.

DUNELLEN TROUNCES NEW MARKET, 9 TO 3

The Dunellen F. C. team nine made a good start in the five game series with New Market begun at Dunellen Saturday afternoon by winning from the village nine by a score of 9-3. Miller, who slabbed it for Dunellen, would have shut ou the New Market aggregation had it not been for the fact that the Dunellenites made three of their five errors in the fifth and allowed Claude Penrose, Giles and Fulton to score. Aside from this bad support, he had the village batters at his mercy, fanning seven and giving but two passes.

The Dunellenites did some first-class stick work, solving Wunderlich's delivery for fifteen hits, including two two-baggers by Garretson, and one each by Dodwell, Gardner and Miller. Fulton's three-bagger was the longest hit of the game, but the New Market players only got three other hits. The score:

HIGHLAND A. C., FOUR AND CLIMAX A. C., ONE

The Highland A. C. and the Climax A. C. played a five inning game on Hope Common, Saturday afternoon, after the Monroe A. C. and Junior contest, the Highlands winning by a score of 4 to 1. Higgins, of the winning team, made two sensational catches of hard line drives in the outfield and Kyle nailed a hard fly and threw a base-runner out at home plate from the field. Winters, catching for the Highlands, was invincible on throwing to bases, while Coon and Mullen pulled off several fine plays. The score:

WESTFIELDERS DEFEAT SCOTCH PLAINS NINE, 1-0

Scotch Plains' team met its third defeat of the season Saturday afternoon, when the Westfield club won out by a score of 1 to 0. The contest was considered by far the best of the season and should have been won by the home team. Baseball luck gave it to the visitors on the only error made by the 'Plains. The pitching of Long, who was in the box for the home team, was gilt-edge, but two scattering hits by Doolin being made off his delivery. Ortleib twirled a fine game for Westfield, and the excellent support by his team pulled him out of several dangerous holes. The home team gathered five hits off his delivery and a two bagger.

In the ninth inning there were men on bases when Allen made a two-bagger, but poor base running lost the 'Plains a fine chance to score the necessary tally. Ortleib fanned seven men and Long six. Westfield obtained its one run in the fifth inning. Carlstrom drew a pass, went to second on a foul tip which the umpire called a strike and allowed the man to hold the bag. Ortleib then went out at first on a hit to third base, Carlstron taking third. Glacknor hit an easy one to Claire, who allowed it to go through him to the outfield, Carlstron scoring the winning run. The contest was one of the quickest played this season, lasting one hour and fifteen minutes.

JUNIORS DEFEATED BY MONROE A. C., 7 TO 4

Al. Squires pitched fine ball for the Monroe A. C. against the Juniors on Hope Common, Saturday afternoon, defeating the latter by a score of 7 to 4. He was given great support throughout. Eleven safeties off Perry's delivery were too much for the Juniors to overcome. The features of the game were three clean singles by Apgar and three fine catches by Weber, both of the Monroes, and the fine work of Lorton, of the Juniors, who has been made captain of his team in the reorganization, succeeding Walters. PLAINFIELD A. C., 15; AND CRESCENT A. C., 3

The Plainfield A. C. defeated the Crescent F. C. on the Clinton avenue grounds, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 15 to 3. The winning club batted heavily, making fifteen hits, including four two-baggers. Slocum pitched his usual good game, his elusive slants fooling the opposing batters. A feature was the fine playing of McFadden at first base and the batting of Coriell. The score:

PLAY FOR THREE CUPS AT PARK GOLF CLUB

Notwithstanding that a great many members are away from town there was a good sized field out at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, to take part in the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club trophies, as well as the challenge cups. It was an ideal day for golfing and the course was never in better condition, materially benefitted by the recent rains.

In the play for the challenge trophies, Charles B. Morse, challenger, beat Walter C. McNaughton, holder, for the Hydewood cup, by 3 up, and W. R. Faber, challenger, beat Miss Lydie Loizeaux, holder, by 2 up for trophy number three.

Charles B. Morse and E. E. Gano returned the best score, an 84, for the President's cup, while W. V. Gano's gross score was the lowest for the scratch cup. These scores were posted for the two cups:

Charles B. Morse, 98, 14-84; E. E. Gano, 90, 6-84; Dr. A. W. Anderson, 96, 11-85; W. V. Gano, 86, 0-86; J. B. Betts, 111, 23-88; W. R. Faber, 99, 9-90; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 99, 6-93; R. V. Carpenter, 113, 19-94; Walter C. McNaughton, 100, 6-94; W. E. Lough, 114, 19-95; Miss Lydie E. Loizeaux, 110, 13-97; W. V. Byard, 105, 7-98; A. W. Kenworthy, 105, 6-99.

There was only one event at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, and that was a two-ball foursome. The absence of so many members on their vacation was noticeable and but few players competed. The event was won by Mrs. A. W. Opp and Henry D. Hibbard with a score of 94, 17-77, while Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Stockton were second with a score of 100, 19-81. Following the play, as well as during the afternoon the social features at the clubhouse were greatly enjoyed and the weekly dinner-dance in the evening attracted many members and friends. After September 1 there will be more activity on the links as da number of fine competitions have been arranged for the fall months.

Miss Mabel Grant, daughter of Robert Grant, of Grove street, is spending several weeks out of town.

CORDOVA FREE FRIDAY

Unfrocked Pastor, Who Eloped With Julia Bowne, Serving Last Days of Sentence.

HIS PLANS ARE KEPT SECRET.

South River Man Insists He Has Been Harshly Dealt With By a Prejudiced Public—May Go to Mexico.

J. Frank Cordova, the unfrocked Methodist Episcopal clergyman, who twice deserted his wife and their little children and as many times eloped with Miss Julia Bowne, his South River choir girl, is spending the last days of his four-years' term in the State prison at Trenton. He will leave the prison next Friday morning and what he intends to do only he himself knows, unless he has in some way unknown to his keepers transmitted his plans to Miss Bowne, who, with her child, is now living with her parents in Ocean Grove.

It has been freely reported that the disgraced clergyman will go at once to Newark where he will be joined by Miss Bowne and that he will marry her as soon as he can be divorced by his wife, who is now keeping a boarding house along the coast. But of this report Cordova has nothing to say to anyone. He refuses absolutely to see any one from the outside. The head keeper, George O. Osborne, has made it a rule not to allow convicts to be approached against their will. To such of the prison guards who have ventured to question him on his plans for the future the unfrocked pastor has either turned a deaf ear or told them that what he intended to do after his sentence was none of the public's business.

"I have been harshly dealt with by a prejudiced and unsympathetic public and I have paid the penalty which the law exacted," he said some time ago, "and now I want the public to leave me and my life alone. I expect to attend to my business and I want other people to do the same."

The prison authorities expect, however, that Cordova will get out of New Jersey territory as speedily as a railroad train will take him after he leaves the prison doors on Friday. It is believed that he will go to New York and then probably to Mexico, where he formerly lived and where he is said to have a brother and other relatives.

He is equally uncommunicative regarding the financing of his immediate future, but it is thought that his brother will advance him funds to enable him to reach Mexico and begin life anew. When the prison doors close behind him he will have less than $25 in his possession, including the five dollar bill which is to be given to each discharged convict by the State.

During the four years Cordova has been confined in the prison he has worked almost steadily in the contract handkerchief shops, and his industry there has netted him considerable money, but the bulk of this he has expended for a correspondence school course in stenography and typewriting. He is able to take dictation at a fairly rapid rate and is a skillful manipulator of the typewriting machine.

In his studies and work Cordova has received the encouragement of the keeper and his deputies, but to them he has given only the merest thanks for their friendly interest. His one desire has always been to be left alone as much as possible. The one bitter disappointment of Cordova's prison career has been the refusal of the Court of Pardons to grant him restoration to citizenship. He wanted a parole or pardon at first, but later was willing to forego any reduction of his prison time if he could only leave the institution free from the sting of disfranchisement. But this was refused him by the State authorities, in view of the seriousness of his offence.

Cordova's only recent request of his keepers is that he shall be kept at work until the night before his liberation. He says he wants no favors of any kind.

Injured on a Visit to Relative.

Miss Edith Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nelson, of 1026 West Third street, who has been visiting her cousin, Mrs. Mount, of Jersey City, met with an accident on Saturday which will detain her to her room for several days. She was going down the cellar stairs, when she accidentally slipped and fell the entire distance to the bottom, severely spraining her wrist and receiving several cuts about the head. She was picked up in a partially helpless condition and assisted to the first floor after which a physician was summoned. The young woman's parents were notified of the accident Saturday night and they went to Jersey City. Mrs. Nelson is still there with her daughter. The injuries are not of a serious nature.

ABODES OF TWO ARTISTS

G. W. Edwards at Bungalow on Mohegan Island, Maine, and Jonas Lie Nearby.

ARE LIVING CLOSE TO NATURE.

Mr. Edwards' Summer Home Is "Onarock," On a "Blessed Isle"—Mr. Lie's "Hut" Among the Hills in Middlesex Co.

Under the caption "Artists Near and Far Afield," Sunday's New York Herald devotes the best part of a page to the description of the work and pleasure of two well-knowns local artists, George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, and Jonas Lie. The former is spending the summer with Mrs. Edwards at his charming home, "Onarock," Mohegan Island, Maine, while Mr. and Mrs. Lie have chosen the mountains back of Plainfield as a place to spend the season. There they have had erected a very comfortable hut, where they find comfort and a delightful place to study nature.

The Herald publishes fine pictures of the summer home of Mr. Edwards, as well as that of Mr. Lie, also one of Mr. Lie iny a characteristic attitude while at work. Concerning Mr. Edwards the Herald says:

"Summer hardly would seem summer to George Wharton Edwards if he could not pass it in his breezy studio on Monhegan Island, off the coast of Maine. He has dubbed Monhegan 'the blessed isle,' and otherwise waxes enthusiastic over his favorite haunt during the warm summer months.

"It lies majestically on the bosom of the sea about ten miles from the nearest land," he said before leaving for the "blessed isle" this year. "Eastward it is rock bound, and its cliffs are bold, high and crowned with sparse pine and spruce rtees. Westward it slopes to the tiny harbor, and I discovered it twenty-odd years ago, bought one of the houses, which I fitted over, and built a studio, which I rarely use, my work being done out of doors. Here I live as long as I am permitted to be away from New York. For years I enjoyed its privileges alone, but now, alas, rusticators, as the fishing population styles all strangers, have discovered its blessings and attractions, and, sad to say, are building cottages and studios.

"But Onarock, my blest acre, is large enough for me and my friends, and we are not troubled by the aliens. I work when the mood is on, and I hope to show the result in the coming winter. When the sun shines, or when it doesn't, is all the same at old Monhegan. It is ever beautiful from early dawn to purple eve, when the great revolving light on the hill above us afishes its jewelled prism seaward and in one's ears is the boom of the ever moving sea on the sunken ledges."

Judging from the picture of Mr. Edwards' summer home on Monhegan, Onarock is aptly named. From it the artist must command superb views of the island reaches and of the sea. Mr. Edwards has made a study of the sea and of fisher folk, and among the pictures which he contributed to the last American Water Color Society exhibition was a deep sea fisherman in a dory. By contrast his other objects were the sparkling "Fair Amalfi" and an attractive Dutch interior.

In describing the summer life of Mr. and Mrs. Lie, the following from the New York Herald will be of interest:

"Out on the hills in New Jersey, where the winds blow fresh and free, overlooking the flat land where towns slumber peacefully below, Plainfield, Westfield and Elizabeth to the left, the church spires rising above the roofs of the old town of New Brunswick to the right, hidden in the deep, shady woods, lies my summer camp," said Mrs. Jonas Lie. "It is a hut built by myself, with low overhanging eaves after the style of the mountain huts of my own country, Norway.

"Not a sound of the busy life below reaches this secluded little hut; smoke curls from the fireplace outside, built between the rocks, on which a kettle sings. Near by I work in the open, at present, upon a large canvas called 'The Hour of Sunset.' It depicts the last rays of the sun gliding the branches of a cedar on a hill."

Within the hut hangs a just completed picture of a thunderstorm, with rolling cumulus clouds half hidden by the vapor; another, called "Summer Evening," a tender gray daisy field stretching away in the distance, and a "Fog" in the woods; while against the wall stands a large unfinished picture of "Mackerel Clouds at Sunset."

"But it is not what is but that which is to come that delights my soul," resumed the artist. "When

33 BABES AT THE CAMP

Institution Conducted by City Union of King's Daughters is Well Patronized.

FINANCIAL AID IS SOLICITED.

Plainfielders Are Contributing Liberally Through The Daily Press to This Most Worthy Charity.

There are at present thirty-three little ones and several at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the mountains and the accommodations are taxed to the limit. Several babies are quite ill, requiring constant attention, one child three weeks old being a particular care. Last month one hundred babies were entertained and this represented lots of hard work as well as a generous supply of foor stuffs.

The children and mothers all belong to needy families and in not a few instances where the wage-earning ones have been out of work for many months and unable to provide a living. Those in charge of the camp are doing all in their power to provide for all who need assistance in this way and they hope that the contributions of money and provisions will continue while the camp is kept open. These may be sent through The Daily Press, as is the annual custom, which will make prompt acknowledgment.

Additional contributions were received today for The Daily Press fund being raised for the Baby Camp on the mountain, being conducted by The City Union of King's Daughters. From Silver Bay, Lake eGorge, in New York State, comes $2.63. This amount is sent by "W. D. M." who writes this note to The Daily Press:

"At our little Sunday-school up here, we made an offering on Sunday for the Baby Camp and the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. I send you the enclosed check for $5.25. One-half of it for each, viz., $2.63 and $2.62; credit to "Silver Bay Sunday-school, per W. D. M."

Concealing his name from publication, a Christian young man sent a $5.00 bill for the two funds today. He wishes it divided between the two funds being raised by this paper, and wishes it credited to "A Sympathizer."

Funeral of Mrs. Frederick F. Wills.

The funeral service of Mrs. Frederick F. Wills, of East Seventh street, who died on Saturday, was held at 11 o'clock this morning from the Church of the Holy Cross. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and there were a great many floral tributes. The services were conducted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Mrs. Wills was a communicant; assisted by Rev. Mr. Rockwell, who is acting rector during the absence of Mr. Stevenson from the city. The burial will be in Woodlawn cemetery, New York, this afternoon at the convenience of the family.

One-Legged Vagrant Arrested.

Charles Smith, who says he comes from Bloomsbury, was picked up by Patrolman Flynn last night as he was soliciting funds from pedestrians. He is a one-legged man and told Judge Runyon he wanted to get some money to have his shoe repaired before going home. Sentence was suspended and he was put aboard a car for Somerville.

COASTING ON HIS BIKE; BOY IS BADLY HURT

While coasting down the Watchung avenue hill last night on his bicycle, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Johnson, of that avenue, lost control of the wheel and was thrown with great force on the hard macadam pavement, receiving cuts and bruises about the head, face and hands. An automobile party of Plainfielders happening along at the time, the lad was picked up, suffering from his injuries and his face was covered with blood, placed in the machine and taken to his home. While his condition is not considered serious, the injuries are exceedingly painful and the boy will be detained at home a few days. This morning it was reported that he had rested comfortably during the night and that the chances for speedy recovery are good.

Young Johnson, accompanied by a companion, it is said, had been coasting down the hill on their wheels and were enjoying the sport greatly without any mishap. It is thought that on the last trip, the injured boy must have struck a stone or rut in the road which caused him to lose control of his wheel.

JEROLOMAN BEER PARTY LANDED FOUR IN JAIL

Uproarously drunk as the result of too freely partaking of sundry "buckets of suds," "rushed" to William Jeroloman's house at 38 Chatham street last night, four boroughites made such a disturbance in connection with a "growler party" that residents in the vicinity complained to the police and Borough Marshals Pope and Kiernan "pinched the house," and landed the quartet in cells at about midnight. The four lined up before Borough Recorder Dolliver at the session of court today, headed by Jeroloman, who has a considerable police court record. They were William Morrison, George Gardner and William Miner.

Jeroloman, the instigator of the affair by being the host at the "growler party," told the judge that there had been some liquid refreshments, "just for a few friends" at his house. The others couldn't give any excuse for being there except that they knew the "stuff" was going to be passed out. North Plainfield has somewhat tired of the frequency of complaints against Jeroloman, so Borough Recorder Dolliver gave him his choice of $40 or forty days at Somerville. "Bill" had no money. Each of the others was fined $2 or two days, but Miner was the only member of the party who had money. He paid to secure his freedom, but Morrison and Gardner were led back to their cells.

MANY SALES REPORTED AT "HIGHLAND PARK."

The P. S. C. is laying gas mains through "Highland Park" and Leland avenue and will have the work finished before the macadam is laid. The sewers and city water mains are already laid, where the macadamizing is to be done.

While this is a dull season for real estate, these lots have been sold:

Frank S. Buswell, three lots at East Second street and Leland avenue; Mary E. Smiddy, two lots at East Second street and Emerson avenue; Julia E. Mackey, two lots on Emerson avenue between East Front street and East Second street, on which she is about to build a house; W. J. Cleary, four lots at East Second street and Sumner avenue; Antonio Boltas, two lots on Emerson avenue, between Midway avenue and George street.

George D. Merkel is building a handsome home on his lots at George street and Sumner avenue. George and Peter Felmley have bought eight more lots adjoining their tract on Emerson avenue, between Midway avenue and George street, and will build four or five more houses there within a year. James Gibb has purchased two lots on Leland avenue, between Midway avenue and George street, and has erected a dwelling house there. Peter N. Layton has purchased eight lots on Emerson avenue, and eight lots on Sumner avenue.

Great Demand for Office Help.

Regardless of the apparent depression in business, there is still a scarcity of typewriters and stenographers in New York city at the present time and there are constant calls for such help, some temporary and some permanent positions. Miss Anna Giddes, of the Plainfield Buriness College, has taken a position with Charles Scribner's Sons, of Fifth avenue.

J. A. Staats, of the borough, returned yesterday from a plasant stay at Budd's Lake.

He Is Asked To Succeed Rev. T. Moore-Smith, Who Resigned Some Months Ago and Is a Temporary Supply.

Rev. Franklin Matthews, who has been pastor of a Baptist church in Chattanooga, Tenn., for two years, and who has been supplying the pulpit of the Scotch Plains Baptist church the past two Sundays, has been called to the pastorate of the latter church, formal action being taken by the church on Sunday, following the services. At present Mr. Matthews is sojourning in New York State and he will preach at the Plains church on Sunday, when it is expected he will publicly announce his acceptance of the call.

Mr. Matthews prior to going to Tennessee was pastor of the Baptist church at Ridgewood, this State, where he had great success. During his pastorate in Chattanooga he has been successful and large accessions have been made to the church. His only reason for leaving that city is that last winter he suffered an attack of pneumonia and his physician has informed him that the climate in Tennessee is not suited to his health and that he must not spend another winter there. His flock deeply regret his enforced change. The church of which he is pastor has a membership of nearly five hundred.

A native of Orange county, New York, where he was born thirty-five years ago, Mr. Matthews spent the greater part of his life in this part of the country, the only exception being the two years he has been in the South. He made a strong and favorable impression on the people at Scotch Plains as a forciful preacher. He is married and has two children.

If Mr. Matthews accepts the call, he will succeed Rev. T. Moore-Smith, who resigned several months ago and at present has no regular charge. He is a dog fancier and the owner of a large number of thoroughbred dogs which have taken notable prizes at prominent bench shows in this part of the country. Because, it is said, he devoted so much time to his dogs, his people became dissatisfied with his work as pastor and preacher and this led to his resignation. He is now living at Lincoln and occasionally supplies pulpits in nearby churches.

NORTH AND SOUTH WILL BATTLE FOR $10 A SIDE.

Representatives of the north and south will battle for honors on Hope Common, tomorrow afternoon, when teams captained by John Taylor and "Aus" Nelson, will play for a money stake. There has been "bad blood" between the "dusky braves" for some time and it was finally decided that the only way to settle the doubt of supremacy was by a ball game. The contest will be called at 3:30 o'clock and it is sure to be one of the best of the season. The teams will line-up as follows:

North—Nelson, c-capt.; Mason, p; Vail, 1b; Brown, lf; Hackett, 3b; W. Kline, 2b; Johnson, ss; Howard, cf; Somerset, rf. South—Smith, c; Brittin, p; Perkins, 1b; Taylor, lf-capt.; Warick, 3b; Jones, 2b; Jackson, ss; Williams, cf; Gardner, rf. The umpires will be Charles Kline and James Babbitt.

Funeral of Mrs. M. A. Goodwin.

The funeral services of Mrs. Martha A. Goodwin, who died in New York yesterday, will be held from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Martin, 731 Amsterdam avenue, New York city, at 8 o'clock tonight, and from the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, on Park avenue, this city, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Friends and relatives are invited to attend. Mrs. Goodwin was a resident of this city for a great many years and was the mother of the late John Goodwin, well-known here as a hackman. She was seventy-seven years of age.

Alarm Sounded for Trolley Afire.

The fuse on west-bound main line trolley car No. 1936 blew out at about 6:30 last night as the car was on the East Fifth street switch, and the flames set fire to the platform. Sydney Frazee, a volunteer fireman, raced up to box 23 at Franklin place and sounded the alarm. The apparatus made a quick run, but the blaze had been extinguished with sand by the time the alarm sounded, so the firemen had no work. The car, which was in charge of Motorman Walsh and Conductor Weber, was able to proceed.

'PROPHET' CROWDY BURIED

What, "Elijah Dead?, No He Just Sleeps" Say the Negro Saints of God.

INSIST HE'S IN THE FLESH.

"Bishop," Who Visited Plainfield Two Years Ago and Whose Followers Have a Church Here, Has Passed Away.

"Prophet" William S. Crowdy, the negro founder of the colored Church of God and Saints of Christ, who visited Plainfield two years ago with a large band of followers, holding forth here for a week, died on Tuesday of last week at the home of Sister Morris on Livingston street in Newark. It was through the visitation of the "prophet" that a local branch of the denomination was established in this city and an edifice has since been erected by the members of the faith.

When "Prophet" Crowdy was laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery, Newark, Sunday afternoon, amid "Alleluias" mingled with tears of a thousand followers, the "faithful" said they found consolation in the thought that there great leader was not dead, but sleeping. That the mourners were sincere in their belief is not doubted, for they said yesterday that the "prophet" was still with them and that they had conversed with him in the Church of God Cash Grocery Store, 82 Livingston street.

"Bishop" Crowdy, who was none other than Elijah of old, it is alleged, is credited by his believers with having predicted the Spanish-American war, the assassination of President McKinley and the death of Queen Victoria. He was sixty-four years old when he died Tuesday last in the home of "St. Malinda," otherwise known as Sister Morris, who conducts the Livingston street store.

When she was asked yesterday morning if "Elijah" had died at her home, "St. Malinda" promptly made denial, declaring that "the man of God" was "only asleep."

"He's here in the spirit," she said, "and if you had the faith yould could see him. We that believe in him can see him and we can talk to him. He can't die."

"Where was Bishop Crowdy born?" was asked.

"For heaven's sake, man, did you never read the Bible? You didn't think he was born in Hoboken, did you?" asked St. Malinda. "Why, this man was Elijah, the prophet, and you know where he was born."

"Where has he been since the Bible was written?"

"Why, haven't you read how God lifted him up to heaven in a chariot of fire? Well, he came back again twelve years ago, just as he said he would. He said he would come before Christ, and he did. Just as soon as he got back he set to work and called us together and former this here church. His last prophecy, which was made in Plainfield a short time ago, was that he would soon pass from us and that we should expect Christ soon."

Just who or what Bishop Crowdy was is not very clearly understood by those outside the pale of the church. He came before the public's view in New York twelve years ago, declaring himself to be the prophet Elijah. He began by holding open-air meetings and later engaged hals, where he taught his doctrines, which are similar to those of the Adventists, only that he professed to be on the inside track. Soon his preaching was extended to other States and he ordained others to carry on his work. A branch of the church was established in Newark, about seven years ago and now has a congregation of about 100 souls. Sister Morris is head of the work there and conducts the meetings, which are held at Broome and Baldwin streets.

Used Oak Club Too Freely.

John Stewart, who lives in the West End, was given his choice of $10 or twenty days by Judge Runyon at the city court today, when he was arraigned on the charge of "beating up" William McGrath, a neighbor, with a club on West Second street last night. Stewart said that he might have had a few drinks in him. An oaken club was displayed in the court room as his weapon, but he couldn't remember ever having seen it before. Roundsman Vanderweg made the arrest.

Full Day at the Seashore.

The next excursion from Plainfield to Asbury Park will be that of Hope chapel Sunday-school on Saturday. This is an annual event looked forward to by hundreds of Plainfielders and the usual good time is promised all who go to the shore that day. The train will leave Grant Avenue at 7:55 in the morning, 8:15 from North Avenue station, and returning will leave the shore at 7:55 o'clock in the evening, giving the excursionists a full day at the Park.

TRIED TO KILL HIMSELF

Despondent Because Out of Work, Adam Dunham Made an Attempt at Suicide.

HE GASHED HIS THROAT.

Found In Pool of Blood In Bath-tub, Doctor Saves His Life—Is Now In Muhlenberg Hospital.

Despondent because he has been unable to find work and growing tired of life, Adam Dunham, aged 22 years, tried to commit suicide yesterday afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. Arthur Jeffery, 675 West Third street, where he had been living for sometime. The instrument used was a razor belonging to his brother-in-law, Mr. Jeffery, and after locking himself in the bath-room and taking a position full length in the bath-tub, he gave himself an ugly gash in the throat, severing the windpipe. He did not go deep enough, however, to accomplish his purpose, and at the hospital, where he was taken, it is said he will recover.

Dunham was engaged in doing an odd job of painting yesterday morning, and when he returned home at noon for dinner, complained of not feeling well. His sister advised him not to return to work but to go to his room and lie down for awhile. After having his dinner he went to his room.

Two or three hours elapsed and not hearing anything from him, a member of the family went to the second floor, but did not find him in his room. Fearing that something had happened an attempt was made to open the bath-room door. This was found locked and repeated calls failed to bring any response until threats were made to break the door. Then a voice was heard coming from the room: "It's too late. I have done it."

There being no other man in the house a neighbor was summoned and he broke open the door and found Dunham stretched out in the tub, with blood flowing from the gash in the throat and the razor clutched in one hand. When questioned as to why he had attempted to take his life, Dunham replied, "I'm tired of living. There is nothing in this world for me."

In the meantime, Dr. A. K. Brennan and the ambulance were summoned. The physician arrived promptly and gave temporary treatment until the man could be removed to the hospital. Upon his arrival at the latter place he was immediately taken to the operating room and prompt action undoubtedly saved his life.

Dunham has had frequent fits of melancholia for several months and has often hinted about taking his life. One time he asked a relative whether a quarter's worth of gas in an automatic meter would kill a person. In view of this his relatives have constantly watched him, believing that while in a despondent mood he might make way with himself.

Surprise Party for Miss Terry.

A birthday surprise party was given to Miss Amanda Terry by Miss Rose Wilson, last night, at the home of the former in honor of the sixteenth anniversary of her birthday. Miss Terry received a number of useful gifts. The evening was spent playing games and listening to vocal and instrumental music, and refreshments were served at a late hour. Those present were the Misses Rose Wilson, Florence Long, Helen Bernard, Margaret Bernard, Ruth Hall, Dorcas Benson, Marguerite Walsh, Carrie Powson, Mabel Perry, Bessie Greeter, Beatrice Muldowney, Mary Mohan, Margaret Whyte and Mrs. A. A. Wilson and Raymond Terry, John McGarrigle, Jr., Frank Mowhart, Herman Klinsman, Charles Bremmer, William Walsh, Thomas Whyte, Thomas Pigmette, Richard Cooper, Harry Stewart, George Gage and Charles Smith.

Mrs. Charlotte E. Wright.

Ms. Charlotte E. Wright, widow of the late Charles L. Wright, formerly of this city, but late of New York, where she died on Sunday, was buried this afternoon in Hillside cemetery, the remains being brought to this city on the 1:50 o'clock train from New York. Mrs. Wright lived for a great many years on the farm adjoining the Plainfield Country Club property, it being her custom to spend the winters in New York. One son, Howard Wright, who was well-known here in golfing circles, survives.

Funeral of Mrs. Hannah McElroy.

The funeral service of Mrs. Hannah McElroy, of Chestnut street, the borough, was held this morning from St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. W. H. Miller, pastor of the church, officiated. The pall-bearers were Patrick Gunning, James Begley, Vincent Lubeck and James Golding. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Owing to lack of support, Manager Frentz has been obliged to arrange a number of games this season with teams out of town. Saturday the team plays at Somerville and the following week at Crescent Oval. Saturday's game was fast enough to satisfy the most ardent fan, but the team lost money, only about 150 people being out and many of these refusing to pay to witness the game. Even amateur baseball cannot survive without money, as there are guarantees to pay as well as baseballs to buy and grounds to be kept in condition. Still the public kick because the team plays away from home.

The Ladies' Circle of the Baptist church meets tomorrow afternoon at the home of its president, Mrs. James H. Parks.

Garwood Council will hold a meeting tomorrow evening to act on sidewalk ordinances.

SCOURING THE FIELDS FOR A NEGRO FIEND.

Stella Lawrence, a pretty 12-year-old girl, daughter of Oscar Lawrence, a prosperous farmer on the Salem and Woodstown pike, ten miles from Salem, is in a critical condition at her home as the result of a felonious assault committed upon her at 11 a. m. Saturday by an unknown negro. The assault was in a lane leading from the farmhouse to a letter box a half mile from the house, whither she had gone to mail a letter. Her assailant sprang upon her from a cornfield and choked her into insensibility.

She was found lated by her father unconscious and remained so until Sunday. She was so dazed she could give only a meagre description of the man. Sheriff Allen has sent out posses to scour Salem county and thinks he has traced the negro to Yorkstown, where his movements are lost. If caught, the incensed farmers will probably try to lynch him, but the sheriff is taking precautions to prevent such action.

The office of dog catcher, which "went a-begging" in Millville for a month before it was accepted by William Ford, netted the incumbent during his first three weeks' work $122.75. City Council thought this rather expensive, and as soon as the bill was presented discharged the office-holder.

One More Week of the ANNIVERSARY SALE.

One more week of the bargains that have created more talk and made us more new friends than our brightest anticipation during all the days of preparation for the event. It was our aim to impress you—at this time particularly—with the advantages in shopping here. A store that is not burdened with the additional expenses of several thousand dollars yearly to the trading stamp "house," nor has the great portion of its capital tied up on its books, can and does offer the most for your money. We have demonstrated this with especial force the past three weeks of our First Anniversary Sale, and are making a strong effort this last week of the sale to have you join the crowds that are praising the Tepper slogan—"no trading stamps nor favors, but more for your money."

George Wilson has been chosen manager of the Jr. O. U. A. M. team and Victor Lorton is the new captain. The team has been reorganized and is now looking for games.

The New York Harlem Branch of the Y. M. C. A. will play the local association nine on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon.

The Cardinals made a total of seven hits in three games off the Brooklyn pitchers.

According to the latest baseball slang, when a batter makes a clean, solid base hit he "pickles it."

Mickey Doolan, of the Philadelphias, has been putting through some wizardlike fielding feats of late.

Ferguson, the former New York pitcher, has been doing good work in the box for the Bostons lately.

Charles Hickman, late of Boston, New York, Washington, Chicago and Cleveland, is now with Toledo.

Barry made his first hit for the New York Nationals last Saturday, a twenty foot bunt along the left foul line.

The New York Nationals have been in two tie games and two extra inning games against the Westerners in the present series.

Thirty runs were scored against the Washingtons in two different games last week, twelve by the Clevelands and eighteen by the Detroits.

The Pittsburgs have been showing pretty even strength against all seven opponents. They are ahead in all of their series except two and are tied in those two.

The cranks are on the qui vive to see whether Mack or McAleer got worsted on the Blue-Smith trade. Maybe both will be better off. Trades sometimes turn out that way.

At no time this season have the Cubs shown the speed and dash of the two previous seasons and haven't equalled the quality of play of the Pittsburgs and New Yorks.

"He throws like a seal," was the description a spectator made of the flinging of Reilly, the St. Louis recruit, the other day when Reilly flipped one across with his elbow close to his body.

"Wagner forgot to cover third when Lord raced in for White's bunt," says an account. Needless to say it wasn't Honus Wagner. Honus is so broad he is covering third when he is standing at shortstop.

The language said to have been used by Delehanty and Clymer in Cleveland the other day prompted the Cleveland club to say in a letter to Ban Johnson: "We feel as though we should never allow either of these players to play at League Park again, but we are willing to abide by your decision in the matter."

Clark Griffith thinks there should be some exceptions to the rule regarding the batter being out on a third strike, whether the ball is held or not, when there is a runner on first. If the third strike happens to be a passed ball he doesn't think the rule should apply, for in such cases there is an actual misplay by the catcher and obviously nothing can be done in the way of a double play.

Plainfield, N. J., August 11, 1908.

THE DUST NUISANCE.

Newark seems to have had the same experience as Plainfield in attempting to solve the street dust problem by sprinkling the thoroughfares. The idea is antiquated and should be abandoned here as speedily as possible. More modern methods are needed and it behooves the Common Council to lose no time in arranging for a more satisfactory sytem to be put in use early next year. Street sprinkling, here as elsewhere, has been found to be a wasteless expenditure of the public funds, and the average taxpayer will fully agree with the Newark Morning Star when it says:

"As a means of laying the dust of streets the sprinkling cart is at once the most expensive and the least satisfactory method to be employed. The sun quickly dries out the water and the dust returns. Boston has sixteen miles of streets under oil, sixteen miles under calcium chloride and a mile treated with tarvia, which is also largely used in the suburbs of Boston. Oil has been objected to by women, but the objection arises from its improper use. There appears to be no cause for objection in Boston. The macadam roads about Newark should all be regularly treated with oil or calcium chloride or tarvia, and the expense divided between the county and the trolley company on the roads traversed by the company's cars, which kick up most of the dust."

DANGER AHEAD!

Will the Republicans of the Fifth district commit the folly of again nominating Charles N. Fowler for Congress and thereby place Union county, the G. O. P. stronghold of New Jersey, in the "doubtful column?" We think not. It is well to remember before making huch a blunder that three years ago, his radical Democratic opponent swept this Republican stronghold and came within approximately 250 votes of election. The normal Republican majority in the Fifth district is above 5,000, but should the tickets in Union, Morris and Warren be burdened down by "The Absentee" Congressman, what should be expected on November 3?

THREE WORTHY OBJECTS.

Approximately $500 has been contributed by our readers to three worthy causes this summer and before the end of the season it is not improbable that the grand total will reach double that amount. Here is our report to date: Grover Cleveland monument fund, $334.20; King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the Mountain, $141.63; Netherwood Fresh Air Home For New York Children, $23.37.

It does not require eloquence to convince an interested hearer that New Brunswick presents every inducement that a home-seeker x x x x could ask for.—New Brunswick Times.

Not eloquence, only a little fibbing.

It is said by scientists that the warship of the future is to be propelled by gas.—Exchange.

When that time arrives, why not make William Jennings Bryan Secretary of the Navy?

Despatch from Lincoln, Neb., says that the Prohibition party's candidate for President was nearly drowned while swimming in a pool out there. Paragraphers get busy.

the trees turn red and brown and yellow and glow in the October sunlight, and autumn winds strip the branches of their leaves and carry them up beyond the hurrying clouds, then will I try in a measure to express my joy in ot all and in the majesty of life."

After returning to Plainfield and arranging for some exhibitions Mr. and Mrs. Lie will depart for their home country, Norway, where Mr. Lie will paint the life in the north, exhibiting in Christiania before returning. "After the Snowfall," exhibited last year in the National Academy, has been invited to the autumn exhibition of the Chicago Art Institute, and "The Heart of the Woods," now in the exhibition of the one hundred selected American paintings in Buffalo, will go from there to the St. Louis Museum.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Women's clubs and mission settlements are not usually considered good dramatic material, but "The Straight Road," which will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre for Saturday, matinee and night, has for its central figure a girl of the slums and for its theme the development of her soul through the influence of a mission worker.

In Moll O'Hara, Mr. Fitch has placed upon the stage a unique character. Moll is not immoral, she is simply unmoral. Stupefied by living in a terrible atmosphere of evil, she has never acquired a sense of discrimination between wrong and right. She hates the world, her feeling being based on the supposition that the whole world hates her. Man as the agent of the downfall of most of the women she has known, she hates with a passion that permeates her entire being. With no refinement in her nature she lives out her sullen existence. Her degradation by her outspoken antipathy for everything tending toward good arouses the interest of a young woman who has volunteered for settlement work in the slum district. By her kindness, her sweetness of disposition, and her Christian charity she arouses a sort of interest in Moll's heart and at last she is made the subject of a worship that is accorded easily by that type of a woman when her heart is won. To what extent a woman is a woman first and a philanthropic worker afterwards is shown in the progress of the play. And also how far the spiritual evolution of such a woman as Moll can be carried.

Unsurpassed moving pictures, such as have never been seen here before, will be shown every afternoon and night this week until Saturday at the New Plainfield theatre. On Friday afternoon and night, the greatest moving picture bill yet will be on the boards. Splendid pictures of the Gans-Nelson fight and the Fitzsimmons-Ruhlin fight.

Seats for the engagement next Monday night in the New Plainfield theatre of Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, in Rupert Hughes' new society play called "All for a Girl," will be ready next Thursday morning. This engagement, coming thus early in the season, is not likely to be duplicated in importance for many months to come, inasmuch as interest in Mr. Fairbanks' appearance as a star is general, and he has long been a favorite in the kind of a role Mr. Hughes has written for him—that of a handsome young idler who is stung into action by his love for the "one woman."

Sentence Suspended.

A young man named William Tunison, arrested for disorderly conduct, when arraigned before Recorder Dolliver in the North Plainfield court yesterday, was given a suspended sentence.

TAILOR AND HIS BOSS SCRAP OVER BACK PAY

Yiddish and Russian jargon agitated the air of the city court room today in the long-winded hearing of a complaint brought by R. Zagroia, a young tailor, against Simon Hersh his "boss," in a Watchung avenue tailoring establishment, and the testimony, though lengthy, showed such complication that City Judge Runyon has reserved his decision for a week.

Zagroia came to court with the assertion that Hersh short-paid him by four hours time—nearly eighty cents when he got paid off last Thursday, and that he had told him at the time that he would bring suit unless settlement was made. This was an unfortunate remark, for a fight resulted in the Watchung avenue shop, and the young Russian says he was cut and bruised about the face before he got away. Zagroia had H. C. Runyon for his counsel.

Hersh had his bookkeeper, Herman Richards, an Italian cutter in his employ, and his eleven-year-old son Aaron as witnesses that the Russian was in the wrong, having called him vile names and attacked him when urged to leave the place. The tailor got real excited in telling the court about the fight, stating that he was hit with a chair so that he was "knocked off his eye-glasses by the force of the blow." But he bore no marks. Furthermore, he said that had it not been for the hindrance by his little children, who "hung" about his waist to protect him, he would have given Zagroia all that was coming to him.

Richards, the book-keeper, suave and smiling, told the court that he had tried to protect his "boss" from the Russian's onslaught. He said that he was confident he could "lick" Zagroia, were it not for the fact that he fights "Russian style." He said that the young tailor would first grab his man by the hands and then rain blows upon his face. Swelling with pride, he said that he knew he could trim Zagroia, if he would fight "American style," and offered to prove his statement right in the court room. "Bob" Fitzsimmons, who strolled into court at about that time, seemed interested and amused at the assertion, but said afterwards that he would not take Richards on as a sparring partner.

After Richards had said that Zagroia had tried to hit him "in the chair with an ankle," after little Aaron had testified, after Zagroia had told his story through an interpreter, and after Harry Runyon had summed up the case, the judge stated that he felt the case to be a complicated one and would reserve decision.

TYPOS MEET AT BOSTON.

Boston, Aug. 11. An important gathering of organized labor was begun yesterday with the opening of the fifty-fourth annual convention of the International Typographical Union and the seventh annual convention of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union of North America. The Mailers' Trades District Union, a subordinate organization, and the Woman's Auxiliary of the I. T. U. also convened yesterday.

The Typographical convention did little more than organize at the opening session yesterday. The reports of the officers of the union had already been printed and circulated among the delegates. The report of the president was a lengthy one, taking up in detail the work of the organization during the past year.

He said in part: "The membership today is but a trifle less than at the time the eight-hour difficulty occurred, when it was about 47,000. Today the membership is about 46,000."

According to the report of Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Bramwood of Indianapolis, Ind., the regular funds of the union amounted to a total of $198,310.35. The report showed a decrease in funds of $85,642.18 during the fiscal year.

Matinee Races at Morristown.

Morristown, Aug. 11.—Sport of the most exciting kind was witnessed at the matinee races of the Morris County Road Drivers' Association here on Saturday. In the 2:50 event on the program F. W. Compton's Prince A. captured the first honors. In the 2:30 class Thomas Holmes' Emeral was the winner. There were also several exhibitions. William Draggoo drove his Fancy Spot one mile in 2:38. J. B. Gougherty's Tommy Anderson teamed with M. Guerin's Shylo Boy, driven by Gougherty, traveled a mile in 2:44¼.

POW-WOW, NO. 57, ON EAST END FIRE HOUSE

President R. I. Toiles and Councilmen H. D. Hibbard, H. S. Saydam, W. L. Gloak and Frederick E. Mygatt were the only members of the Common Council to respond to the call for a special conference last night to consider the question of erecting a new fire-house in the Netherwood district of the city. As there was not even a majority of the members of the fire and building committee at whose request the meeting was held, practically nothing could be done, and another attempt will be made to hold a meeting Monday night.

Several new sketches were presented last night for the proposed building, but while there appears to be a sentiment in favor of the improvement, the members differ to a considerable extent as to the amount of money to be expended. Amounts varying from $6,000 to $10,000 are suggested. It is said that while the West End house was built for $4,500, it would cost almost twice that sum for a similar building in the East End.

There is opposition in the Council to building the house this year, but just how much weight this will have when a vote is taken, remains to be seen. Chairman Hibbard, of the fire and building committee, is enthusiastic about the matter, but he has no definite ideas as to the cost or what the city should pay for the building. Then there is the cost of equipment, considered to be quite an expense. In the opinion of some of the members the fire department is costing the citizens enough money at present and they are slow to advocate any further expense at present. As one member expressed himself today: "Our fire department is now costing the city about $25,000 a year and one thing is sure as the years go by and the city grows it will not cost any less. If we could erect a house in the East End for about the same amount of money as the West End house I would be in favor of the improvement, but other members say that a more pretentious house should be erected, considering the site and the character of the neighborhood, one that will meet the requirements for years to come and that means a big additional expense toward the maintenance of the department."

The members are not a unit on the proposed improvement and it is not at all likely that the matter will go through without a lively debate, pro and con. The only question being considered now is the erection of a house, no thought having been given to the matter of equipping it, and that is likely to provoke further discussion.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Mrs. Elizabeth McClelland, 102 years old, died Sunday evening at the home of Mrs. Sarah Franz, 12 Corbin avenue, Jersey City, after an illness of four weeks. She was born in Ireland in 1806, and came to America at the age of twenty.

The ladies of Pitman, headed by Mrs. Theodore Read, Mrs. Pimm, Mrs. Briggs, Miss Elsie Thompson and Miss Cuteo, presented a "Tom Thumb Wedding" and cleared $70 for the M. E. church parsonage building fund Saturday night.

Teachers and members of the historical Cooperstown Union church, two miles from Beverly, gave a fair and festival on the lawn Saturday evening in celebration of its one hundred and fourth anniversary. The grounds were beautifully lighted with lanterns and covered with artistically decorated booths.

A movement is on foot at Gloucester to make a public demonstration of the 100th anniversary on September 1 of the birth of "Aunt Mary" Powell, the city's oldest inhabitant, who resides with her son Aden in the old Colonial house, at Sussex and Market streets. Five generations of the family will be present at the celebration.

One of the largest gatherings of the Junior Mechanics in that section will be held in the rooms of Ocean Council at New Egypt Thursday evening. Delegations from Mt. Holly, Toms River, Manahawkin, Tuckerton, Burlington, Trenton and many other towns will be present, and prominent State officers will participate in the program.

Within a few feet of where he met death, the body of Allen Hayes, twenty years old, of 338 Chestnut street, came to the surface of the Line Ditch in Camden Saturday night. Incidentally, it gave something of a fright to William Stalter, Walter Schell, John Tomlin, Edward Daniels and Samuel T. Jones, all of whom were in a rowboat almost directly over the spot from which the body came.

Rev. Robert A. Elwood, the preacher whose sensational sermon was believed to have aroused the lynching spirit of the people of Wilmington, Del., who burned the negro murderer of Helen Bishop at the stake, preached in the Collingswood Presbyterian church Sunday night, and incidentally gave out the information that he had received a letter threatening him with death if he preached. The latter bore no signature, and was contained in an envelope postmarked Mt. Pocono, Pa., he said.

Target practise by the members of the Forty-fifth and 112th companies Coast Artillery, at Fort Dupont, on the Delaware shore, recently terrorized the people of Salem. Two immense projectiles fell within a quarter of a mile of the city and several persons narrowly escaped injury. One projectile struck on Town Bank and tore a hole in the earth about eight feet deep. Two children who were crabbing along shore were besmeared with mud. The other shot landed in a field in the rear of Sinnickson's Landing, a summer resort, with many cottages.

THE FORUM.

Baseball Dispute.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The Climax A. C. won the game from the Highlanders on Hope Common on Saturday. In the fifth inning with the score 4 to 1 in their favor, the Highlanders left the field, claiming the game, giving as an excuse that Conshay and two or three other members of the team had to work that evening. John Terry, manager for the Climax A. C., refused to accept this excuse and tried to get Winters to put other players in the places of those who left, and continue the game. This he refused to do and Mr. Walters, who umpired, awarded the game to the Climax A. C. 9 to 0. The large crowd of fans who attended the game left the grounds very much disappointed at its sudden termination.

ATLANTIC CITY WAS WIDE OPEN SUNDAY.

Cafe proprietors and saloon keepers ran wide open at Atlantic City yesterday, without the least molestation by the authorities. To add to the wide openness of the day amupsement men fell into line with the saloon keepers and on two of the big ocean piers noisy amusements, heretofore closed tight on the Sabbath, ran in full swing and catered to thousands of excursionists.

It is believed that the action of the uier authorities is the opening gun of a battle between the amusement men and the saloons, which will add another interesting phase to the fight presaged by the admissions to the State Excise Commissioners that they intend to recommend some move to force absolute compliance with Sunday liquor laws in this district.

The piers opened were the Steeplechase and Young's $1,000,000 pier. Managers of the piers refused to make any statement but their defiance of the law was taken to mean that they have as much right to do a Sunday business as the saloons. The conservative element of the resort is in a panic as they fear that the continued violations of the Sunday ordinances will turn the boardwalk into a replica of the Coney Island Bowery. Local officials are reticent about the matter, but it was hinted last night that warrants are to be issued today for the offending pier operators.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 6.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the House of Assembly concurring). That the following amendments to the constitution of this State be and the same are hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly, the said amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

First—Strike out Paragraph 10 of Section VII of Article IV, and change the numbers of the following paragraphs to correspond:

Second—Change Paragraph 10 of Section V so to to read as follows:

10. The Governor or person administering the government, and four citizens of the State appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall constitute the Board of Pardons. The members of said Board, or any three of them, of whom the Governor or person administering the government shall be one, may remit fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves, commutations, pardons and paroles, after conviction in all cases except impeachment. The four members specially appointed shall hold office for five years, and receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during the term of their appointment.

Third—Change Section 1 of Article VI so as to read as follows:

SECTION I.

The judicial power shall be vested in a Court for the trial of impeachments, a Supreme Court, County Courts and such other Courts inferior to the Supreme Court, as may be established by law, in which inferior Courts the Legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require.

Fourth—Strike out all of Section II, IV, V, VI and VII, of Article VI, change the number of Section III of Article VI to Section II, and insert the following sections in Article VI:

SECTION III.

Any judge of any of the Courts of the State may be removed for disability continuing for one year, or for refusal to perform the duties of his office, by a vote of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate, and of two-thirds of all the members of the House of Assembly voting separately, after a hearing before both Houses in joint session.

SECTION IV.

1. The Supreme Court shall be organized in three divisions, namely: the Appeals Division, the Law Division, and the Chancery Division. It shall consist of a Presiding Justice of the Appeals Division who shall be styled the Chief Justice, a Presiding Justice of the Law Division who shall be styled the President Justice, and a Presiding Justice of the Chancery Division, who shall be styled the Chancellor, and eighteen Associate Justices, which number may be increased by law.

2. The Appeals Division shall consist of the Chief Justice, and six other Justices of the Supreme Court to be assigned by the Governor. A Justice of the Supreme Court assigned by the Governor to the Appeals Division shall serve in said Division until the end of his term.

The remaining Justices shall be assigned by the Supreme Court to the Law or Chancery Division, as the business of the Court may require.

3. Whenever the number of causes before the Appeals Division shall be so great that the Division cannot promptly hear and determine them, the Governor shall, when authorized by statute, temporarily assign five of the Justices of the other Divisions to sit in the Appeals Division, which shall thereupon sit in two Divisions for the hearing and decision of causes pending at the time of such assignment.

4. Four Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum on the final hearing of any cause in the Appeals Division, but the Supreme Court may provide by rule for the making of interlocutory orders by a lesser number of justices, or by one justice; such orders to be subject to revision by the Appeals Division.

On the hearing of a cause in the Appeals Division, no Justice who has given a judicial opinion in the cause in favor of or against the judgment, order or decree under review shall sit at the hearing to review such judgment, order or decree, but the reasons for such opinion shall be assigned to the Court in writing.

5. A majority of all the members of the Supreme Court, to be presided over by the Chief Justice, shall constitute a quorum for the assignment of justices, and for the appointment of officers, and the enactment of rules.

6. The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters, not exceeding three, to report the decisions of the Court, and shall by rule define his or their duties and powers. The reporters shall hold office for five years, subject, however, to removal at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION V.

1. The Appeals Division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court on writ of error, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court on appeal, and by the Ordinary on appeal, and such further appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred upon it by law, together with such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review, saving, however, the right of trial by jury.

2. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court and the Justices thereof not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Circuit Courts and the Judges thereof, and such further original jurisdiction not of an equitable nature, and such further appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, as may be conferred by statute, shall be exercised by the Law Division of the Supreme Court and by the several justices thereof, in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court.

3. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court and the Ordinary, not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Chancery and the Chancellor, and such further original equity jurisdiction as may be conferred by statute, and such further original jurisdiction as is now conferrable on the Prerogative Court shall be exercised by the Chancery Division and by the Chancellor and the several justices of said Division in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court, but the Justices of that Division shall be under such control and supervision by the Chancellor as shall be provided by the Supreme Court.

4. Terms of the Supreme Court presided over by a single Justice of the Law Division for the trial of issues joined in or brought to the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be held in the several counties at times fixed by the Supreme Court. Until so fixed, such trial terms shall be held at the places and times now fixed by law for the holding of the Courts of Common Pleas in the several counties.

5. The Supreme Court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issue from the Law Division to the Chancery Division, or from the Chancery Division to the Law Division of the Supreme Court, and from the County Court to the Law Division or the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the Court or Division where it may be pending.

6. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the alteration, by law of any statutory power or jurisdiction conferred upon any Court or Judge since the adoption of the Constitution in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and nothing herein contained shall prevent the Legislature from conferring upon any inferior Court which may hereafter be established such power or jurisdiction as was exercised by or which may now be conferred upon the inferior Courts mentioned in Section I of Article VI. of the Constitution of 1844.

SECTION VI.

The County Courts shall have and exercise, in all cases within the county such original common law jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court, and such other jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts inferior to the Supreme Court and the Prerogative Court as may be provided by law. The final judgments of the County Courts may be brought for review before the Supreme Court in the Appeals Division. Until otherwise provided, the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Courts of Quarter Sessions, or by the Judges thereof, shall be exercised by the County Courts pursuant to rules prescribed by the Supreme Court. The justices of the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be ex officio Judges of the County Courts. All other jurisdiction or authority now vested in any Court, Judge, or magistrate with jurisdiction inferior to the Courts in this section mentioned, and not superseded by this article, shall continue to be exercised by such Court, Judge or magistrate until the Legislature shall otherwise provide.

SECTION VII.

This amendment to the Contitution shall not cause the abatement of any suit or proceeding pending when it takes effect. The Supreme Court shall make such general and special rules and orders as may be necessary for the transfer of all suits and proceedings to the appropriate Division or Court created by this amendment. Matters pending when this amendment takes effect shall be decided by the judge or judges to whom they were submitted, and the order, judgment or decree made or advised by said judge shall be entered as that of the Division or Court to which the suit or proceeding shall have been transferred.

Fifth—Strike out Paragraphs 1, 2, 5 and 8 of Section II of Article VII; and substitute the following paragraphs in place of Paragraphs 1 and 2, and change the numbers of the paragraphs following 5 to correspond:

1. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the President Justice of the Law Division, the Chancellor and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the Senate. They shall not be less than thirty-five years of age and shall have been practicing attorneys at the State for at least ten years. They shall hold office for the term of seven years; shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their term of office, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State, or of the United States, and shall not engage in the practice of law during their term of office. The Chancellor and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Vice Chancellors and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, in office when this amendment takes effect, shall be Justices of the Supreme Court until the expiration of their respective terms.

The Circuit Court Judges in office when this amendment takes effect shall be continued in office with the powers of the Justices of the Supreme Court at the Circuit until the expiration of their respective terms. They may hold the County Courts, subject to assignment by the Law Division of the Supreme Court.

2. The Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint one Judge of the County Court in each county, and such additional County Judge or Judges in any county as may be authorized by law. The County Judges may hold court in any county subject to the control of the Supreme Court. The County Judges shall not be less than thirty years of age, and shall have been practicing attorneys in this State for at least five years. They shall hold office for the term of five years; shall at stated times receive for their services such compensation, which shall not be diminished during their term of office, as the Legislature in its discretion shall fix for each county, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State or of the United States, and shall not engage in practice of the law in the courts of the county where they hold court during their term of office. The judges of the Common Pleas, in office when this amendment takes effect shall be the judges of the County Courts until the expiration of their present terms.

3. This amendment shall take effect on the first Monday in February, in the year next following its adoption by the people.

4. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution and this amendment thereof.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 4.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved, (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the Constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and to the House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months previous to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

5. A majority of all the members of the Supreme Court, to be presided over by the Chief Justice, shall constitute a quorum for the assignment of justices, and for the appointment of officers, and the enactment of rules.

6. The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters, not exceeding three, to report the decisions of the Court, and shall by rule define his or their duties and powers. The reporters shall hold office for five years, subject, however, to removal at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION V.

1. The Appeals Division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court on writ of error, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court on appeal, and by the Ordinary on appeal, and such further appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred upon it by law, together with such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review, saving, however, the right of trial by jury.

2. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court and the Justices thereof not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Circuit Courts and the Judges thereof, and such further original jurisdiction not of an equitable nature, and such further appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, as may be conferred by statute, shall be exercised by the Law Division of the Supreme Court and by the several justices thereof, in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court.

3. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court and the Ordinary, not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Chancery and the Chancellor, and such further original equity jurisdiction as may be conferred by statute, and such further original jurisdiction as is now conferrable on the Prerogative Court shall be exercised by the Chancery Division and by the Chancellor and the several justices of said Division in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court, but the Justices of that Division shall be under such control and supervision by the Chancellor as shall be provided by the Supreme Court.

4. Terms of the Supreme Court presided over by a single Justice of the Law Division for the trial of issues joined in or brought to the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be held in the several counties at times fixed by the Supreme Court. Until so fixed, such trial terms shall be held at the places and times now fixed by law for the holding of the Courts of Common Pleas in the several counties.

5. The Supreme Court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issue from the Law Division to the Chancery Division, or from the Chancery Division to the Law Division of the Supreme Court, and from the County Court to the Law Division or the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the Court or Division where it may be pending.

6. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the alteration, by law of any statutory power or jurisdiction conferred upon any Court or Judge since the adoption of the Constitution in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and nothing herein contained shall prevent the Legislature from conferring upon any inferior Court which may hereafter be established such power or jurisdiction as was exercised by or which may now be conferred upon the inferior Courts mentioned in Section I of Article VI. of the Constitution of 1844.

SECTION VI.

The County Courts shall have and exercise, in all cases within the county such original common law jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court, and such other jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts inferior to the Supreme Court and the Prerogative Court as may be provided by law. The final judgments of the County Courts may be brought for review before the Supreme Court in the Appeals Division. Until otherwise provided, the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Courts of Quarter Sessions, or by the Judges thereof, shall be exercised by the County Courts pursuant to rules prescribed by the Supreme Court. The justices of the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be ex officio Judges of the County Courts. All other jurisdiction or authority now vested in any Court, Judge, or magistrate with jurisdiction inferior to the Courts in this section mentioned, and not superseded by this article, shall continue to be exercised by such Court, Judge or magistrate until the Legislature shall otherwise provide.

SECTION VII.

This amendment to the Contitution shall not cause the abatement of any suit or proceeding pending when it takes effect. The Supreme Court shall make such general and special rules and orders as may be necessary for the transfer of all suits and proceedings to the appropriate Division or Court created by this amendment. Matters pending when this amendment takes effect shall be decided by the judge or judges to whom they were submitted, and the order, judgment or decree made or advised by said judge shall be entered as that of the Division or Court to which the suit or proceeding shall have been transferred.

Fifth—Strike out Paragraphs 1, 2, 5 and 8 of Section II of Article VII; and substitute the following paragraphs in place of Paragraphs 1 and 2, and change the numbers of the paragraphs following 5 to correspond:

1. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the President Justice of the Law Division, the Chancellor and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the Senate. March of the White Guard

(Copyright, 1902, by R. F. Fenno & Co.)

CHAPTER V.

The next morning Varre Lepage was placed upon a sled and they started back, Jacques barking joyfully as he led off, with Cloud-in-the-Sky beside him. There was light in the faces of all, though the light could not be seen by reason of their being muffled so. All day they traveled, scarcely halting, Varre Lepage's Indian being strong again and marching well. Often the corpse-like bundle on the sled was disturbed and biscuits wet in brandy and bits of preserved venison were given.

That night Jaspar Hume said to Late Carscallen: "I am going to start at the first light of the morning to get to Gaspe Toujours and Jeff Hyde as soon as possible. Follow as fast as you can. He will be safe if you give him food and drink often. I shall get to the place where we left them about noon; you should reach there at night or early the next morning."

"Hadn't you better take Jacques with you?" said Late Carscallen.

The Sub-factor thought a moment, and then said, "No, he is needed most where he is."

At noon the next day Jaspar Hume looks round upon a billowy plain of sun and ice, but he sees no staff, no signal, no tent, no sign of human life; of Gaspe Toujours or of Jeff Hyde. His strong heart quails. Has he lost his way? He looks at the sun. He is not sure. He consults his compass, but it quivers hesitatingly, and then points downward. For a while wild bewilderment which seizes upon the minds of the strongest, when lost, masters him, in spite of his struggles against it. He moves in a maze of half-blindness, half-delirium. He is lost in it, is swayed by it. He begins to wander about; and there grow upon his senses strange delights and reeling agonies. He hears church bells, he catches at butterflies, he tumbles in new-mown hay, he wanders in a tropic garden. But in the hay a wasp stings him, and the butterfly changes to a curling black snake that strikes at him and glides to a dark flowing river full of floating ice, and up from the river a white hand is thrust, and it beckons him—beckons him! He shuts his eyes and moves toward it, but a voice stops him, and it says, "Come away! come away!" and two arms fold him round, and as he goes back from the shore he stumbles and falls, and . . . . . What is this? A yielding mass at his feet! A mass that stirs! He clutches at it, he tears away the snow, he calls aloud—and his voice has a far-away unnatural sound—"Gaspe Toujours! Gaspe Toujours!" Yes, it is Gaspe Toujours! And beside him lies Jeff Hyde, and alive! ay, alive! Thank God!

Jaspar Hume's mind is itself again. It has but suffered for a moment what comes to most men when they recognize first that they are being shadowed by the awful ban of "Lost."

Gaspe Toujours and Jeff Hyde had lain down in the tent the night of the great wind and had gone to sleep at once. The staff had been blown down, the tent had fallen over them, the drift had covered them, and for three days they had slept beneath the snow; never waking.

Jeff Hyde's sight was come again to him. "You've come back for the book," he said; "you couldn't go on without it. You ought to have taken it yesterday;" and he drew it from his bosom.

"No, Jeff, I've not come back for that; and I did not leave you yesterday; it is three days and more since we parted. The book has brought us luck, and the best! We have found him: and they'll be here to-night with him. I came on ahead to see how you fared."

In that frost-bitten world Jeff Hyde uncovered his head for a moment. "Gaspe Toujours is a Papist," he said; "but he read me some of that book the day you left, and one thing we went to sleep on; it was that about 'Lightenin' the darkness, and defendin' us from all the perils and dangers of this night.'" Here Gaspe Toujours made the sign of the cross. Jeff Hyde continued half apologetically for his comrade, "It comes natural to Gaspe Toujours—I guess it always does to Papists. But I never had any trainin' that way, and I had to turn the thing over and over, and I fell asleep on it. And when I wake up three days after, here's my eyes as fresh as daisies, and you back, Captain, and the thing done that we come to do!"

He put the book into the hands of Jaspar Hume, and Gaspe Toujours at that moment said, "See!" And far off, against the eastern horizon, appeared a group of moving figures.

That night the broken segments of the White Guard were reunited, and Varre Lepage slept by the side of Jaspar Hume.

CHAPTER VI.

To conquer is to gain courage and unusual powers of endurance. Napoleon might have marched back from Moscow with undecimated legions safely enough, if the heart of those legions had not been crushed. The White Guard, with their faces turned homeward and the man they had sought for in their care, seemed to have acquired new strength. Through days of dreadful cold, through nights of appalling fierceness, through storm upon the plains that made for them paralyzing coverlets, they marched. And if Varre Lepage did not grow stronger, life at least was kept in him, and he had once more the desire to live.

There was little speech among them, but once in a while Gaspe Toujours sang snatches of the songs of the voyagers of the great rivers; and the hearts of all were strong. Between Jacques and his master there was occasional demonstration. Jacques seemed to know that a load was being lifted from the heart of Jaspar Hume, and Jaspar Hume, on the twentieth day homeward, said with his hand on the dog's head, "It had to be done, Jacques; even a dog could see that!"

And so it was "all right" for the White Guard. One day when the sun was warmer than usual over Fort Providence, and just sixty-five days since that cheer had gone up from apprehensive hearts for brave men going out into the Barren Grounds, Sergeant Gosse, who every day and of late many times a day, had swept the northeast with a field-glass, rushed into the Chief Factor's office, and with a broken voice cried, "The White Guard! The White Guard!" and pointed toward the northeast. And then he leaned his arm and head against the wall and sobbed. And the old Factor rose from his chair tremblingly, and said, "Thank God," and went hurriedly into the square. But he did not go steadily—the joyous news had shaken him, sturdy old pioneer as he was. As he passes out one can see that a tinge of white has grown about his temples in the last two months. The people of the Fort had said, they had never seen him so irascible, yet so gentle; so uneasy, yet so reserved; so stern about the mouth, yet so kind about the eyes as he had been since Jaspar Hume had gone with his brave companions on this desperate errand.

Already the handful of people at the Fort had gathered. Indians left the store and joined the rest; the Factor and Sergeant Gosse set out to meet the little army of relief. God knows what was in the hearts of the Chief Factor and Jaspar Hume when they shook hands. To the Factor's "In the name of the Hudson Bay Company, Mr. Hume," there came "By the help of God, sir," and he pointed to the sled whereon Varre Lepage lay. A feeble hand was clasped in the hearty hand of the Factor, and then they fell into line again, Cloud-in-the-Sky running ahead of the dogs. Snow had fallen on them, and as they entered the stockade, man and dogs were white from head to foot.

The White Guard had come back! They were met with cries of praise, broken by an occasional choking sound from men like Sergeant Gosse. Jaspar Hume has simply acknowledged his welcome as he had done the Godspeed two months and more ago. He with the Factor bore the sick man in, and laid him on his own bed. Then he came outside, and when they cheered him again, he said, "We have come safely through and I am thankful. But remember that my comrades in this march deserve your cheers in this as much as I. Without them I could have done nothing in the perils that lay between here and the Barren Grounds."

"In our infirmities and in all our dangers and necessities," added Jeff Hyde, "the luck of the world was in the book!"

In another half hour the White Guard was at ease, and four of them were gathered about the great stove in the store, Cloud-in-the-Sky smoking placidly, and full of guttural emphasis; Late Carscallen moving his animal-like jaws with a sense of satisfaction; Gaspe Toujours talking in Chinook to the Indians, in patois to the French clerk, and in broken English to them all; and Jeff Hyde exclaiming on the wonders of the march, the finding of Varre Lepage at Manitou Mountain, and of himself and Gaspe Toujours buried in the snow.

CHAPTER VII.

In Jaspar Hume's house at midnight Varre Lepage lay asleep with his wife's letters—received through the Factor—clasped to his breast. The firelight played upon a face prematurely old—a dark, disappointed face—a doomed face, as it seemed to the Factor.

"You knew him, then," the Factor said, after a long silence.

"Yes; I knew him well, years ago," replied Jaspar Hume.

Just then the sick man stirred in his sleep, and said disjointedly, "I'll make it all right to you, Jaspar." Then came a pause and a quicker utterance. "Rose—I—love you—Forgive—forgive!"

The Factor rose and turned to go, and Jaspar Hume, with a despairing, sorrowful gesture, went over to the bed.

Again the voice said, "Ten years—I have repented ten years—My wife—Don't, don't!—I dare not speak—Jaspar forgives me, oh, Rose!"

The Factor touched Jaspar Hume's arm. "This is delirium," he said. "He has fever. You and I must nurse him, Hume. You can trust me—you understand."

"Yes, I can trust you," was the reply. "But I can tell you nothing."

"I do not want to know anything. If you can watch till two o'clock I will relieve you. I'll send the medicine chest over. You know how to treat him."

The Factor passed out and the other was left alone with the man who had wronged him. The feeling most active in his mind was pity, and as he prepared a draught from his own stock of medicines, he thought the past and the present all over. He knew that however much he had suffered, this man had suffered more. And in this silent night there was broken down any slight barrier that may have stood between Varre Lepage and his complete compassion. Having effaced himself from the [illegible] justice became forgiveness.

He moistened the sick man's lips and bathed his forehead, and roused him once to take a quieting powder. Then he sat down and wrote to Rose Lepage. But he tore the letter up again and said to the dog: "No, Jacques, I cannot; the Factor must do it. She needn't know yet that it was I with the White Guard who saved him. It doesn't make any burden of gratitude for her, if my name is kept out of it. And the Factor mustn't mention me, Jacques—not yet. And when he is well we will go to London with it, Jacques, and we needn't meet her; and it will be all right, Jacques, all right!"

And the dog seemed to understand; for he went over to the box that held it; and looked at his master. And Jaspar Hume rose and broke the seal and unlocked the box and opened it; but he heard the sick man moan and he closed it again and went over to the bed. The feeble voice said, "I must speak—I cannot die so—not so—Jaspar."

And Jaspar Hume murmured, "God help him." And he moistened the lips once again, and put a cold cloth on the fevered head, and then sat down by the fire again. And Varre Lepage slept. As if some charm had been in that "Gold help him," the restless hands grew quiet, the breath became more regular, and the tortured mind found a short peace. With the old debating look in his eyes, Jaspar Hume sat until the Factor relieved him.

CHAPTER VIII.

February and March and April were past and May was come. Varre Lepage had had a [illegible] struggle for life, but he had survived. For weeks every night there was a repetition of that first night after the return, delirious self-condemnation, entreaty, and love of his wife, and Jaspar Hume's name mentioned now and again in shuddering remorse. With the help of the Indian who had shared the sick man's sufferings in the Barren Grounds, the Factor and Jaspar Hume nursed him back to life. Between the two watchers, no word had passed after the first night regarding the substance of Varre Lepage's delirium. But one evening the Factor was watching alone, and the convalescent man from his feverish sleep cried out, "Hush, hush, don't let them know! I stole them both from him—and the baby died because of that; God took it—and Rose did not know! She did not know!"

The Factor rose and walked away. The dog was watching him. He said to Jacques: "You have a good master, Jacques, too good and great for the [illegible]."

DOCKSTADER'S SHOW IS SIMPLY IMMENSE

Lew Dockstader, king of minstrel men, and his troupe of black-faced artists, came as premier attraction of the season to the New Plainfield theatre, last night, and kept a "big house" in a good humor by a two-hour rapid fire of peppery jokes, some superb honey-voiced singing and a lot of brand new minstrel features. The show started the eighteenth annual tour of the black-faced Dockstader company with such perpetual hand-rattles that the minstrels may well be said to be the most successful the famous minstrel-man has ever staged.

The program presented "an innovation in minstrelsy, but not a departure from this popular style of entretainment," and of the black-faced bunch behind the foot-lights, Lew Dockstader and Al Jolson got the biggest hand in the "rustic spectacle entitled 'The Possum Hunt Club,'" which formed the first half of the show. Jolson, as one of the stewards of the club, made a big hit with his song, "I'm Glad I'm Married Now,' and Dockstader was given a big reception in his two songs, "It Looks Like a Big Night Tonight," and "Bull Durham." Lots of merriment was produced by Jolson in the role of "Acie" in the sketch, "The Left Hind Foot of a Welsh Rabbit," which followed the opening number. Neil O'Brien, as Bob Brewster, William H. Hallett and Eddie Mazier got the hand in "The House of Rest" and every one contributed some jarry smiles in the scenic sketch, "Politics Under Water," where "the two Bills" appear, searching for campaign contributions.

Jolson came in for more applause by his work in an entre act, where he came on with some good monologue, whistling and singing, and rang in some good local "cracks" which helped his reception. The show followed the adventures and pass-times of the minstrel party who set out to look for the North Pole, and there was an excellent concluding triumphant dance and march, a la cake-walk, when the pole is finally found, and the explorers are seen victorious at last, just before the curtain fell.

—Dr. N. H. Probasco's new home on West Seventh street, is nearing completion. He expects to occupy it during the fall.

—Rockdale creamery and print butter can be had at all times at Neuman Brothers. There is no better butter on the market and it is always of the same excellence.

Dr. and Mrs. Harold D. Corbusier, of Park avenue, are the parents of an eight and three-quarters' pound daughter, born to them this morning.

POLITICAL NOTES.

There are now seven full-fledged Presidential tickets in the field. They are:

Republican—William H. Taft.
Democratic—William J. Bryan.
People's Party—Thomas E. Watson.
Socialist—Eugene V. Debs.
Prohibition—Eugene W. Chafin.
Socialist Labor—Martin R. Preston.
Independence—Thomas L. Hisgen.

R. Henry Depew, the president, and Walter Linbarger, the secretary attended a meeting of the New Jersey People's Lobby at Newark yesterday afternoon, when it was decided to publish the record of the State legislators.

Ex-United States Senator James Smith, Jr., will not become vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee, according to one of his close friends, who said: "The Senator will not under any circumstances undertake the management of the Eastern campaign. He will do whatever he can for the head of the national ticket, but the business interests he has at stake are too pressing and too important to permit of acceptance of the vice-chairmanship, with all it implies. He has his dtuies as president of a bank, he is in effect business manager of two papers, he is at the head of the largest patent leather enterprise in the world and he has large real estate interests to look out for. Few men there are who could successfully assume such burdens, let alone active interest in politics."

With such Republicans as William Carman, William T. Stacey, William Oberman, H. B. Zimmerman and George J. Haney available, it may be presumed that the nomination for sheriff next fall will not go into unworthy hands.—New Brunswick Home News.

The approaching campaign in Union county promises to be a lively one. Apart from the national and State issues the county will have many contests of a local character. There will be chosen a sheriff, a Senator, three Assemblymen and eighteen freeholders. As the board now stands, politically, a gain of one member by the Democrats would give them the coutrol of that body.

Governor Fort is looking for the right man to name as State editor of official reports. He has offered the place to John J. Liedy, of Newark, it is understood, and when he declined it, to Matthias Ely, of Hudson Observer, who also refused it.

In the reorganization of the State Republican committee the members of that body went back to the custom that prevailed prior to the last campaign, of confining the management of party affairs to the regularly elevated members of the committee. This action did nt affect the statute of a single member of the body, including the members-at-large, but it did eliminate from active participation in the committee's affairs five non-members who were pressed into service during the last gubernatorial campaign at the request of the then candidate and present Governor. The five are Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, and Joseph McDermott, of Monmouth, who served with the executive committee, and General Edward Murray, of Mercer; Joseph W. Congdon, of Passaic, and James A. McGraw, of Morris, members of last year's executive committee.

The Bloomfield Republican Club, made up of all fractions, will smoke the pipe of peace and take part in a clambake at Bayonne on August 26. At this time slates will be made and every effort bent to agree, as far as local politics are concerned. The mayoralty is the leading topic among Bloomfield Republicans today.

"I have been a Democrat all my life," remarked Anderson Price, of Rutherford, the other day to a commuter, "but I cannot see my way to give any support to Bryan at the approaching election. Twice defeated for the high office should be sufficient proof that the people do not want him." Peter W. Stagg, former Prosecutor of Bergen county, it is said, will not lend his help in aid of the Democratic nominees. Mr. Price is one of the recognized leaders of the Democracy in South Bergen and Mr. Stagg at the county seat, where he is given recognition as being a leader of the party in that section.

One of the most vigorous campaigns ever held in the Arlington and Kearny sections of West Hudson is promised by the advocacy of Mrs. Pamela M. Eakins as school commissioner from the Third ward. She starts off with the backing of the Woman's Literary and Civic clubs, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Women's Associations of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches. It is probable that the Third Ward Republican Club will bolt her candidacy and nominate George W. McClintock, who will oppse her at the primaries.

State Senator Everett Colby, of Essex county, was in Plainfield today.

WITH THE CITY'S FATHERS

Some Matters of Importance are Deferred Until the Regular Meeting in Sept.

ALL COMMITTEES ARE ACTIVE.

Another Fire House and Joint Sewage Disposal to Be Considered By the Common Council at Next Meeting.

Realizing the impossibility of holding two or more meetings during the month to take up several matters of importance now pending, the members of the Common Council are devoting their time to committee meetings with a view to getting the various matters in shape for presentation at the regular meeting on September 7, when fall and winter activities will be resumed. Some of the members are now out of the city and are unable to attend Council meetings should it be decided to hold them.

The fire and building committee is busily engaged in getting the East End fire-house proposition in such shape that favorable action will be taken in the fall. Mayor Fisk stated sometime ago that he would oppose the improvement unless the committee decided definitely on the amount to be expended for the building and equipment and the committee is now trying to reach that conclusion, bringing the probable cost down to the lowest figure. The committee will endeavor to hold a conference on Monday night, all of the members of the Council having been invited to attend.

Another very important matter to be decided this fall will be that in reference to the proposition to allow North Plainfield to join the Plainfield system of sanitary sewers. There is considerable opposition in the City Council to the plan and the Fourth ward members, especially, are expected to do all in their power to defeat the plan. One member said today that he was in favor of letting the borough take care of its own sewage, as Plainfield is doing, believing that the proposed merger is too much of an undertaking. It would necessitate a large bond issue to make improvements at the city disposal plant so that North Plainfield could connect with it and he opposed such an issue at this time. It is known that other members feel the same way about the question.

Those members of the Council who favor the plan feel that something must be done to harmonize matters and bring about the greatest good to the greatest number under the least possible friction. There will be a meeting of Mayor Fisk's special commission next week when the matter will be discussed thoroughly. It is possible that the report may not be ready for the regular meeting of the Council in September, but it is sure to be presented early in the fall. Those in North Plainfield who are interested in having the merger go through, are using their best effort to obtain favorable action.

If the borough is forced to establish its own disposal plant it may meet opposition on the part of the State Board of Health, however, Mayor Samuel Townsend stated at the public hearing on the question, that the State would give the borough considerable power and he did not apprehend any difficulty should the borough decide to have its own plant. There are said to be sites suitable for sewage beds in the far western corner of the borough or township, where there would practically be no objection. This was hinted at by Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley in his remarks at the public hearing.

There is still another proposition that seems to meet with the approval of all the interested municiplities, and that is the establishment of a trunk line sewer that will take in all of the towns adjacent to Plainfield. This plan was suggested by Mayor C. J. Fisk and efforts were made to communicate with the authorities in Fanwood, Scotch Plains, North Plainfield, Dunellen, Lincoln, Bound Brook and New Market for the purpose of holding a conference. This is still in the air and it is possible that such a meeting may be held in the fall and the matter then taken up with the State authorities. Of course, such a sewer would not be possible this year. It would probable take a couple of years before it could be completed.

EXCISE COMMISSIONERS INVADE SOUTH JERSEY

The State Excise Commission spent yesterday at Millville. Mayor Frederick J. Melvin, of Cape May City, was the first witness. He declared there is nothing wrong in his town, which caused Chairman Charles J. Fisk to read to him a list of Sunday violations. The Grand Jury last September, he acknowledged, ignored a number of excise violations and no indictments were found.

Chief of Police George F. Hickey, of Cape May, who followed, said his force comprised nine men. He confessed there were some violations in his section, but insisted he was doing his best to prevent them. "Some people call a closed town one where you can get a drink once in a while," commented the chief, as he said Cape May was closed. "We keep the front doors closed Sundays. The most complaints I've had have been visitors who kick because they can't get a drink."

Anglesea and Wildwood, the chief said, are clean towns, and he asserted he was positive no Sunday sales could be detected in either. As for the Hotel Stockton, Cape May, he averred it can't be beat, adding: "Of course, I mean the new million-dollar hotel."

Sea Isle City's Police Chief Charles S. Whitaker, who heads a force of one, made the same favorable report regarding his town. He had never read the bishops law, because he never had to do anything with saloons.

Prosecutor J. Hampton Fithian, of Cumberland, said there are but five licensed places in the county, in remote parts, where licenses have been granted from time immemorial as accommodations for the public. They are run carefully, he stated, and no complaints have ever been made. There has been some trouble about beer, he said, though this is gradually being overcome. The principal complaint in this connection has been with sales made in other counties for delivery in Cumberland. He added he had made several raids on unlicensed places in Bridgeton, but declared violations have been few of late. He admitted there were some clubs in Bridgeton where liquor is dispensed by the locker route.

Replying to Peter Backes, the prosecutor said there was but little drunkenness except from the "ginger fiends," who he declared are the outgrowth of prohibition. By ginger fiends he said he meant those who consumed Jamacia ginger in lieu of other alcoholic stimulants.

Joseph F. Smith, Mayor of Millville, began by saying there are a dozen or so social clubs in his town.

"Are they newspaper reading clubs?" asked President Fisk, to which the Mayor said he could not tell, as he did not visit them.

"Well, isn't it a fact there are such a large number of clubs here because there are no saloons?" kueried Mr. Fisk.

"That's right, I guess," was the reply.

"But don't the boys go home late sometimes unable to navigate?" continued the commissioner.

"I've seen some," said the Mayor, who added he also did not think there was any prohibition in Millville. Prohibition, he said, he did not think was of much benefit to any town.

Charles Bates, Millville's city marshal, testified: "We have a pretty good town here, but we capture a drunk once in a while."

Mayor Waldo F. Swayer, of Vineland, testified that his town would be prohibition if it wasn't for speakeasies.

"I don't think we have any prohibition in Vineland," said the Mayor as he referred to sales by beer arks. "As long as the State makes it lawful to deliver in our town we can't have any sort of prohibition," he added. For forty-seven years, he said, Vineland has been known as a temperance town, but the only temperance sentiment is against licensed places.

This closed the inquiry and the commissioners adjourned to meet in Trenton next Monday.

"Salome" Dance Barred in Newark.

Carola, a Spanish dancer, who was billed to give the "Salome" dance at the German Hospital ten lays' carnival at Newark, was prevented from appearing last night. Acting Captain Brown, of the 4th Precinct, who witnessed the dance at the matinee, warned the management that if Carola attempted to repeat the dance at the night performance she would be arrested. The captain was on hand with several men to see that his order was obeyed. It was the first time the dance had been attempted in New Jersey.

Chris Bock, of the borough, who spent several days last week at Barnegat on a fishing trip with a party of friends, returned Monday with about 300 fine weak fish, part of the "luck" of the party.

HURT BY CLEAVER IN BUTCHER SHOP SCRAP

Personal enmity on the part of Franz Seidler, a butcher employed at Herman Theis' market on South Second street, threw him into a frenzy of rage against Joseph Hoezel, who got his job at the beginning of the week, and on meeting the latter in the shop on Monday, he hurled a butcher's cleaver at his head. Hoezel dodged the weapon, but it struck him in the right leg, inflicting an ugly gash. The injured man swore out a warrant against his assailant the same day, and last night Patrolman Saffron nabbed him at his home on South Second street. At his hearing today, Judge Runyon held him under $200 bond to keep the peace. He furnished his own bond.

Hoezel retained W. G. DeMeza as his counsel. At the session of court today, it developed that Seidler had been discharged Monday, and Hoezel had his job. Seidler came to Theis' market early Monday morning and remonstrated with the "boss" about his discharge. As the two were talking the matter over, Hoezel entered. Seidler, it is said, seized a heavy cleaver from the chopping block and with an outburst of vile language, hurled it at his rival's head. The blade dug an ugly gash in Hoezel's leg, and he sank to the floor. Hoezel lives with Theis on South Second street, and still has his job. Seidler is a neighbor

GEBHARDT AND MARTINE HAVE A 'CONFAB' HERE

Dropping into town quietly today, State Senator William Gebhardt, of Hunterdon county, held a long conference with "Farmer-orator" James E. Martine. The situation in the State, in the Fifth congressional district and in the Senator's own county were discussed from a Democratic viewpoint.

The principal object of Mr. Gebhardt's visit, it is said, was to talk over affairs in Hunterdon but he argued long and zealously with Martine to announce himself as a candidate for Congress in this district. He told the Plainfielder that he had consulted with many leaders and had found that it was generally believed that he would give the Republican nominee a hard fight with almost even chances of winning. Martine told him that he had positively decided not to get in the race; that he had been made poor by serving thhe party as a perennial candidate and tat he believed that the Democrats were tired of voting for him. "It makes it look too much like a one man party," he declared.

Both Gebbhardt and Martine held the opinion that there is a probability of the Democrats carrying the State this fall.

ARRAIGNED A DAY LATE, GETS 20 DAYS FOR ASSAULT.

William Ryder, of Stebbins place, who, with John Stewart, attacked William McGrath with a club on West Second street Saturday night, was given his choice of $10 or twenty days at his hearing before Judge Runyon today. He was led back to the cell.

Ryder was supposed to have showed up at court yesterday morning, but he works on a water wagon and couldn't get off, he claimed. Detective-Sergeant Flynn took Stewart to Elizabeth to serve his time yesterday.

FIGHT FOR LOCAL OPTION.

Saloon Men and Leaguers to Make It from Trenton.

According to E. H. Curtis, State organizer for the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League, who is lecturing at Trenton, both that organizations will soon establish State headquarters in Trenton and wage a great temperance fight throughout New Jersey.

He declares that another local option bill will be presented to the next Legislature and that the fight will be continued until the measure becomes a law. And when that is accomplished, he declares, the people will speedily abolish the saloons at the rate of thirty a day.

HURLED TO DEATH.

Every Bone in Dynamo Station Employe's Body Crushed.

Harry Souder, twenty years old, employed by the Atlantic City electric light company, was caught in the belting yesterday and killed. Every bone in his body was broken. Nobody knows how the accident happened. Souder was one of the oilers in the engine room.

An inquest will be held for the purpose of ascertaining whether the company has provided proper safeguards about the machinery for safety of employes.

CROWDY HAD MANY WIVES

Many "Sisters" Claim a Share in Colored "Prophet's" Large Estates.

CHOOSING HIS SUCCESSOR.

"Elder Joe," Nephew of Dead Founder of Local Foot-Washers, Calls Meeting of Colored "Saints" at Philadelphia.

Assertions by several "sisters" of "Prophet" William S. Crowdy, founder of the "Church of God and Saints of Christ," negro "Foot-washers," who died suddenly last week in Newark, and who founded a congregation in this city at the time of his visit here two years ago, show that the "prophet" was a bigamist many times over. About a half dozen "sisters" are accordingly claiming shares in his estate, which is known to be a large one. So far as can be learned, no Plainfield "sisters" claim any part of the estate of the inventor of the "Holy Kiss," but the local congregation is much interested in the question of who is to be his successor.

Hardly had the fact that the "Prophet" was dead been made known when there bobbed up from various sections women claimants for a share of the leader's estate, which is known to be a large one. There are several lawsuits already pending among some of the leaders of the queer sect, who demand a legal adjustment of the "Prophet's" affairs; and the controversy over the claims of the numerous "wives" has led almost to a disruption of the "Foot Washers."

It developed yesterday that "Prophet" Crowdy had been dead several days before his followers or the police officials of Newark were aware of the fact. His nephew, "Elder Joe," whom the followers of Crowdy in this city desire shall succeed the "Prophet," arrived at Newark yesterday, but he declared he "could not, if he would," and "would not, if he could," throw any light on the sudden death of his "all-wise uncle."

"Elder Joe" will not discuss the appointment of a successor to the dead "Prophet" further than to say he has called a meeting of the "Presbytery of Elders" for next month, when the new "Elijah" is to be chosen.

While the "faithful ones" at Philadelphia are enthusiastic for "Elder Joe," the majority of the elders are not so longingly inclined. "Elder Joe's" age is against him, as he is a young man, while the elders say there are "Bishop" John Dickerson, "Evangelist" Dickerson and "Elder" Plummer, of Boston, as well as an "elder" who comes from Africa, and who has a name none of the "faithful" have ever been able to rightly pronounce, all of whom are eligible for election.

"Elder Joe" has ordered all of the stores of the church at Philadelphia closed for thirty days in honor of the dead "prophet." While the front doors of the "Church of Christ Grocery Store," "The Daughters of Jerusalem's Nor's Ark Dressmaking Department" and "The God-be-With-You Restaurant" at Philadelphia were closed yesterday, there was a side-door business going on that would have done credit to an Atlantic City saloon on Sunday.

The elders have determined that the death of the "prophet" shall not put a damper on the yearly march that is to be held in Philadelphia next month. "The Daughters of Jerusalem" will not abandon the gorgeous robes they are having made for the occasion, but in connection with them will wear some emblem of mourning for the dead "prophet."

BEHEADED BY CAR.

One man was beheaded and another's arm was crushed by a trolley car at Maywood early this morning. The man who was killed was William Schultz, 35 years old, who worked as a farmhand for H. F. Lydecker, of Maywood. The injured man is Edward Below, employed on the farm of P. J. Brinkerhoff, which adjoins that of Lydecker.

Schultz and Below went to Hackensack last evening and, it was said, drank a good deal of liquor before they started on their return home. They boarded the midnight car on the Hudson River trolley line and rode to Maywood avenue, where they alighted. It is supposed that they were overcome by the drink they had taken and lay down on the track to sleep. Some time afterward they were hit by a car, the motorman having failed to see them lying on the track owing to the darkness.

The wheels of the car passed over Schultz's neck and he was decapitated. Below's left arm was smashed so badly that it had to be amputated when he was taken to the Hackensack Hospital.

ITALIAN QUARRYMAN HURT BY FLYING MACADAM CHIP

Struck in the left side of the head by a chip of macadam stone glancing from under the hammer of a fellow workman at Smalley's stone crusher, Dominick Cazetta, of the quarry gang, was seriously injured early today. He was felled by the blow, and the chip tore an ugly gash behind his ear, grazing the jugular vein. Terrified at the sight of the blood, members of the gang crowded around the injured man as he lay in the quarry and others ran to tell of the accident.

Clarence Smalley hustled Cazetta into his rig and drove at top speed to the borough physician's office, where the bleeding was soon checked and the wound cleaned. Several stitches were taken by the physician, but the wound was so deep and jagged that it would require fifteen stitches to close it. It was left partially open so that it can be treated, and the other stitches will be taken later.

The injured man was very weak from loss of blood, but after resting in the doctor's office, was removed to his home, where he will be confined for several days under the physicians' care. Accidents of this kind are frequent at the local quarries, where the men are employed with heavy sledges. There was a similar accident about two weeks ago. The quarrymen say that it is impossible to determine which way the chips of macadam will fly.

DEMOCRATS TELL BRYAN HE IS THEIR CANDIDATE

The Democratic notification ceremonies were held at the home of the Presidential nominee, W. J. Bryan, at Fairview, this afternoon, and were attended by thousands of people, including visitors from all parts of the country. As predicted by the notification reception committee, a larger crowd attended the ceremonies than greetd Bryan when he returned home from his around the world tour.

The formal notification speech was delivered at 2 o'clock this afternoon by Congressman Clayton, after which Mr. Bryan replied. A reception then followed in the State Capitol building, when Bryan and Kern greeted all who could get into the building. This concluded the formal ceremonies, but tonight Mr. Bryan will entertain the entire notification committee at dinner, which will be served on the nominee's lawn, Fairview.

Although the official band concerts were not scheduled to begin until 10 o'clock this morning, almost every special train arriving during the morning brought one or more bands, and they paraded the streets, playing national airs. The stand from which the speeches were made were finished early this morning, and all arrangements were completed before 10 o'clock. At noon a luncheon was given at the Lincoln Hotel to the notification committee, Mr. Bryan and Mr. Kern being the hosts. At 1:30 the procession, consisting of Bryan and Kern, the notification committee, a platoon of police and a single band, moved toward the State Capitol ground for the notification exercises.

FOX TERRIER BITES BOROUGH PEDESTRIAN.

Bitten in the left ankle by a small fox terrier belonging to William H. Emmons, of Jackson avenue, yesterday afternoon, Augustus Moore, of Jackson avenue, is confined to his home today as a result of the attack by the vicious animal. Chief Marshal Weiss is waiting to see if the dog develops any symptoms of rabies.

According to Moore's story, he was passing Emmons' house late yesterday afternoon when the dog rushed down from the piazza barking and seized him by the ankle. He shook the snapping animal off, but not before its teeth had painfully lacerated the flesh. He reported the attack to Chief Marshal Weiss of the borough force, who went with him to the borough physician's office where the lacerations were cauterized and the ankle bandaged. Aside from a slight swelling which keeps Moore from walking, there are no tetanic complications today.

Funeral of Mrs. M. A. Goodwin.

Funeral services of Mrs. Martha A. Goodwin, who died on Monday, were held last night at 8 o'clock from the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Martin, 731 Amsterdam avenue, New York, and the remains were brought to this city today, where services were held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, on Park avenue. Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city, officiated. The burial was in Evergreen cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

FEAR DUNHAM MAY REPEAT RASH ACT

Adam Dunham, the young man who attempted to commit suicide at the home of his sister, Mrs. Arthur Jeffery, on West Third street, Monday afternoon, is improving at Muhlenberg Hospital and there is now no doubt of his recovery. He has not referred to his rash act since being taken to the hospital, and while he did not succeed this time in taking his life, his relatives still fear that he may make another attempt if he gets the opportunity. Every effort, however, will be made to prevent him from taking his life.

It is customary in the case of an attempted suicide to place the offender under arrest, but inquiry at police headquarters shows that no action has been taken by the police regarding Dunham. Just a brief report has been made by one of the policemen that the man tried to take his life. It is possible that before Dunham leaves the hospital the police may take official action and compel him to answer for the unsuccessful attempt on his life.

LOCAL CHARITY FUNDS NOW AGGREGATE $180

Too late for acknowledgment in yesterday's issue, The Daily Press received five dollars from Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church, for the Baby Camp fund. The clergyman has annually remembered the institution in this way and his contribution yesterday was a most welcome one.

From "M. L. R." this morning, ten dollars was received at this office for the same charity. Her liberal donation increases the fund considerably, the total amount received to date by this paper being $166.63.

These subscriptions for the Baby Camp are acknowledged:

SOCIETY COMEDY BOOKED HERE FOR MONDAY NIGHT.

The first new society play of the fresh theatrical season will be "All For a Girl," the comedy by Rupert Hughes in which that brilliant young actor, Douglas Fairbanks, will make his premiere appearance on Monday night at the New Plainfield theatre. His role is that of Harold Jepson, an irresponsible, delightfully audacious, imperturbable young fellow who is called upon to show that the basis of his love for Antoinette Hoadley is not her fortune. He proves this after four acts of what has been described as the most delightful comedy written in many years.

Edward Thurnour, the general manager for the Brady and Grismer Company, made arrangements with Manager Counihan today for the initial production of the show here. His firm manages such stars as Miss Grace George, Robert Mantell, Thomas Wise, Louis Mann and Wright Lorimer.

Miss Sarah E. Riley.

Miss Sarah E. Riley, of 525 West Fourth street, died yesterday afternoon following an illness of several months. She made her home with her aunt, Mrs. Josephine Till. She was a member of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, and the funeral service will be held from that church Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, the pastor, Rev. J. T. Diggs, officiating.

WOULD BE ASSEMBLYMEN

Six Candidates for Lower Branch of Legislature and Three Will Be Chosen.

MAJOR MARTIN IS WILLING.

Thompson, Kirstein, Pierce, Moxon and Schwartz Also Out—Ackerman for Senator and Kirkland for Sheriff.

Candidates for the Republican nominations for Assembly in Union county are becoming more plentiful as the time limit for filing papers approaches, no less than half a dozen being in the field and as many more in a receptive mood. It is a certainty according to reliable sources that Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, will meet with no opposition in being named for another term. The leaders say that they look upon him as a man with a good political future.

Major William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, who announced yesterday his willingness to accept an Assembly nomination providing he was given free rein and not dictated to, it is said has an excellent chance. His popularity in Elizabeth is considered no greater than in Plainfield, where he won the populace by elevating Co. K to its present enviable standard while serving as its captain. It is known that some of the leaders have had their eyes on Martin for a long time and his statement of yesterday has given them much encouragement.

A. W. Schwartz, of Elizabeth, is recognized as having a large following at the county seat but he is not well known through the county. Frank Stutzlen is another Elizabethan who is more of a "local" candidate. J. R. Moxon, of Elizabeth, is making a hard fight and is telling his friends that there is a chance of his being made speaker if the party custom is broken in his case to send him back for a third term. So far as can be learned by the local correspondent, many leaders do not see what claims he has for establishing such a precedent, and there is no question it is reported but that the New Idea forces would be solidly opposed to him. A fight in the ranks is something that the organization is determined to avoid at any cost.

Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, who has previously aspired to a seat in the Assembly, is being boomed by fellow-townsmen, but as Cranford was given the privilege of selecting Pierce to succeed Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, it is not likely that he will stand much show. Assemblyman A. F. Kirstein, of Rahway, wants another term, but it is probable that he will meet with the united opposition of the New Idea forces.

Since the annual outing on Saturday, the politicians say that Captain Robert Kirkland, of Elizabeth, is a sure winner for the shrievalty, and as for State Senator Ackerman, there has never been the least murmer in either camp.

"I must be left complete freedom of thought, speech and action if I consider such a proposition," said Major Martin yesterday. "I must feel perfectly free to be a representative of the plain people. That must be definitely understood all around before the matter goes another step. I positively will refuse to bind myself to any one man or set of men, or to any special interests.

"I am an ardent, strong, conscientious Republican, and of course I do not mean to carry my independence to such an extreme as to ignore the party, but I cannot have strings on me all the time if I run. If nominated or elected I should refuse to countenance any line of action which was not what I absolutely and honestly believed was for the best interests of the plain people.

"I believe emphatically in local option, and anyone who wishes to use that against me in the campaign at any time is quite at liberty to do so. Although a total abstainer myself I am not a temperance or prohibition crank, or anything of the kind. I have no quarrel with the saloon, or with the liquor interests, or with any other living man's personal habits. I consider them none of my business. I do feel, though, that if the people of my city or even my ward do not want a saloon among them, on account of their children or for any other reason, no other person should have the right to impose it on them.

"When I was approached at first I did not even wait to think of such a thing. I have neither the money nor the disposition to go into an expensive campaign. Money has played such an important part in the politics around here that I did not think I ought to even listen to the idea.

"However, I like to think I am a loyal Republican, and this is the first thing the party ever asked me to do, except to vote. I would feel sorry

One More Week of the ANNIVERSARY SALE.

One more week of the bargains that have created more talk and made us more new friends than our brightest anticipation during all the days of preparation for the event. It was our aim to impress you—at this time particularly—with the advantages in shopping here. A store that is not burdened with the additional expenses of several thousand dollars yearly to the trading stamp "house," nor has the great portion of its capital tied up on its books, can and does offer the most for your money. We have demonstrated this with especial force the past three weeks of our First Anniversary Sale, and are making a strong effort this last week of the sale to have you join the crowds that are praising the Tepper slogan—"no trading stamps nor favors, but more for your money."

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Professional golf at Van Cortlandt Park for several years has been of benefit to the players who use the public course both by teaching the true method of the game to them as the experts know it and by encouraging new golfers through the grand performances of the masters, who regard as an easy 3 a hole that the ordinary player is glad to make in 4 or 5 strokes. The professionals have regarded their visits to the Van Cortlandt course as missionary labor, work to encourage the game in the United States. The winners of first prize in the three annual competitions held have been Isaac Mackie, Aleck Smith and Gilbert Nichols. The competition this season is to be under the auspices of a committee from the Scottish American Golf Club, made up of James C. Craig, John P. O'Connell and S. B. MacClinton, to whom entries may be sent at 56 Pine street. The competition will be on August 31 and September 1, and the seven prizes, beginning with one of $150, will be of the same value as last year. There also will be two special prizes of $25 for the best eighteen hole score each day.

Will Anderson, who is coming on from the Onwentsia course, near Chicago, to play in the open championship at Myopia on August 27 and 28, has written that he will be glad to play at Van Cortlandt "for the good of the game." Will Smith, who is here from the city of Mexico on the open championship quest, is known to be as enthusiastic in spreading light regarding Aul Scotia's royal and ancient game, while the Boston, Philadelphia and New York groups of professionals may be relied on. Coming immediately after the open championship, golfers from the distant courses will find it easy to take in the Van Cortlandt tournament on their way home.

The course is now in better condition than in any other year, for Park Commissioner Berry has become a golfer and is taking a personal interest in the course. The remaining days of the week, September 2, 3, 4 and 5, at Van Cortlandt will be given up to the annual amateur competition for the Herald cup, so there is a lively local time in store for the frequenters of the public course and the outsiders who will seek the opportunity to watch the play of the noted professionals. Now that the subway trains land passengers at Van Cortlandt Park without change the course is handier to reach, and the public will no doubt respond in even greater numbers than before. There will be no charge to follow the golfers, it may be explained for the benefit of strangers.

A week from today the entries close with W. Fellowes Morgan, Arch 5, Brooklyn Bridge, a fact of which the prospective candidates should make a note. The local professionals are keying up for the many tournaments in sight, and to add to many records previously reported Joe Doebel has made a 71 at Fairfield and Isaac Mackie last Friday lowered the mark at Fox Hills, held by himself, by 2 strokes.

Will Smith has been playing in delightful style since his advent in the North, driving a terrific ball and backing up the tee shots by brilliant minor strokes. In a thirty-six hole match at the Cobble Hill Golf Club, Elizabethtown, last week Will Smith beat Aleck Smith by 2 up. Yesterday morning the two had a match at the Nassau Country Club, Glen Cove, in which Will beat Aleck by 1 up, doing 72 to the latter's 74. In the afternoon there was a four ball match, Aleck Smith and W. L. Hicks, the latter one of the club's best amateurs, winning it by 1 up from Will Smith and Guy Robinson.

The latest announcement regarding a professional tournament at Van Cortlandt Park is that the affair proposed by the Scottish-American Golf Club will be held on Monday and Tuesday, August 31 and September 1. It will consist of the usual seventy-two holes of medal play, and first money will be $150. Prizes will also be given for the best eighteen-hole score each day. Entries for this tournament will close with S. B. McClinton, No. 56 Pine street, New York city.

The old record of 75, which has stood for two years at the Forest Park public links, has at last been broken by Charles T. Sweeney. This player, who is a scratch man at the Brooklyn-Forest Golf Club, recently made a 72.

Another record of long standing that has gone by the board is the 69 at Fox Hills made by Isaac Mackie, the club's professional. In a round the other day with W. C. Hoople, one of the prominent amateurs of the club, Mackie returned a 67.

Another instance showing the greater esteem with which professional golfers are regarded abroad than in this country has been furnished. In order to mark their appreciation of his fourth victory in the open championship, James Braid's many admirers in the Walton Heath Club and others outside combined to give him a testimonial, and recently at Walton Heath the open champion was presented with a purse of $700. Among the subscribers were the Bishop of London and A. J. Balfour.

Advices from abroad state that the proposed memorial to Tom Morris is now taking a more definite form. The plan is to raise about $7,000, part of which will be spent in a bronze medallion of old Tom, to be erected on some building overlooking the St. Andrews Cottage Hospital, primarily for professional golfers, clubmakers, caddies, etc. Charles Kirchner, No. 126 Nassau street, New York city, is receiving American contributions.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., one of the leading Pittsburg amateurs, has been playing at Garden City for the last few days. It is a matter of history that in the last three tournament meetings between Fownes and W. J. Travis the former has defeated the veteran in nineteen-hole contests. Two of these affairs were in national championships. Fownes may be counted on to make a strong bid for honors in the national at Garden City next month.

Dave Brain is finding it hard to break into the Giants' line-up.

Charles Webb Murphy says that when he leaves New York the Cubs will be in the lead.

Norman Elberfeld has small chance of retaining the management of the Highlanders next year.

The New York Highlanders are hopelessly wrecked. It will take Joe Vila a whole winter to explain.

Eddie Collins has been uncertain in his fielding with the Athletics, but his hitting is up to standard.

Bob Ganley is accused of striking Pitcher Burns in the head with a bat. Joe Cantillon says it's all bosh.

The White Sox boast that they would get into the lead while the eastern clubs were West will scarcely be fulfilled.

Cleveland is not at all sorry that it purchased the release of Altizer, who has proved a handy man for the Naps.

John McGraw has a substitute for every man on his team, which makes John McGraw a mighty independent manager.

Nearly all the western teams in the National League looked over the Tristate field on the present trip. Chas. Webb Murphy was seen in Harrisburg with false whiskers.

Joe Tinker, the Chicago shortstop, carries a small lumber yard on his shoulder. Some day a red-blooded rival will call him.

First Baseman Stovall, of Cleveland, shows no reaction in his clubbing, which has been the best in his fast set experience.

The Boston Red Sox are no respecters of persons. They bumped the Detroits and now they are buffeting the Browns.

The New York Americans are not only in last place, but they are behind the Washington team. Truly they have slumped.

Herzog sported a nice brick red suit Monday, having accumulated the tint by sliding through the clay for the plate in the first inning.

The Cubs have now lost five straight, but Prexy Murphy declares they will win the pennant this year and next. "We'll have Rube Kroh, a left-handed pitcher and a wonder, with us the next time we come East," he says, "and he'll make all these lefthand batters throw their bats away."

George Pfanmiller and Ernest Gestmeyer, the fake battery in the game between the New York Nationals and the New Jersey Eastern League team at West Side Park, Jersey City, on Sunday, who were arrested after the first ball was delivered for violating the vice and immorality act, were fined $1 each in the Second Criminal Court Monday.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL STARTED.

Ground Broken at Roselle and Work Will Continue Without Delay.

Work of building the new $68,000 high school at Roselle was begun Saturday afternoon, when ground was formally broken for the structure, in the presence of the architect and the members of the Board of Education.

The occasion was marked by informal ceremonies, each member of the board turning over a sod with a gold-handled spade. Speeches were made by President E. L. Lillibridge, of the Board of Education; District Clerk J. Wallace Higgins and Trustees Gordon, Chambers, Hergert and Churchill.

The building will be of reinforced concrete and one of the largest and best equipped in this section. It will be ready for occupancy next June.

Miss Bertha Brewer, of Stone street, the borough, is enjoying her annual vacation, which she is spending at various points of interest.

Plainfield, N. J., August 12, 1908.

This is Bryan's big day; Taft's is due November 3.

To date, the people of Plainfield have contributed, through The Daily Press, $334.20 to the Cleveland monument fund. Why not make the total $500?

Camden has been added by the State Excise Commission to its "worst town in New Jersey" list. Elizabeth and Atlantic City were the first to be placed on it.

The Daily Press fund for the Baby Camp being conducted on the mountain by the City Union of King's Daughters now amounts to $166. Have you given according to your means?

A big red apple will be presented to the first man who has the courage to allow his name to be connected with an endorsement of the present local trolley schedule. Now don't all speak at once!

Chicago is to have a $100,000 bronze monument to Grover Cleveland ready for dedication in a year. That will be an entirely disinterested tribute to the late statesman. New Jersey which is deeply interested and ought to be because Cleveland was a native of the State—and the only one who ever became President—and died and is buried here—surely cannot afford to do less.—Long Branch Record.

The nomination of Charles N. Fowler for Congress in the Fifth district, we sincerely believe would be an invitation on the part of the Republican party to defeat. As Union county has had the privilege of allowing him to draw the salary for fourteen years, it is about time that Morris be given a show, especially as in all of Union there has been found no man of prominence politically who would venture the assertion that Mr. Fowler can be elected on November 3, despite the fact that it is Presidential year.

Those well-meaning people who still have the idea that prohibition affords a satisfactory solution of the liquor question, will be interested in an interview with Peter Backes, a member of the State Excise Commission, published in another column today. Mr. Backes declares that the Commission, of which Mayor Charles J. Fisk is chairman, found that there are twelve "speak-easies" in Millville, a prohibition town, and that 1,200 cases of beer are delivered there by freight weekly in addition to large quantities of whiskey in bulk. The late Bishop Henry C. Potter, of New York, incurred the wrath of the prohibition forces when he declared, after a thorough investigation, that "prohibition is a failure," yet he spoke by the book.

JULY BANNER MONTH FOR JERSEY FARMERS

July was the banner month for the South Jersey farmers. They distributed more than a million dollars' worth of produce over the New England States, the Middle West and Canada. This is the unprecedented record of shipments for July from points located on the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, a part of the Pennsylvania Railroad system.

The estimated value of the produce shipped last month from the six lower counties of New Jersey was $1,178,000, an increase over July, 1907, of $746,800. It took 2,945 freight cars to transport this produce to the various markets—nearly 20 miles of cars, if made up in one train.

To enable the farmer to market his products quickly and secure the most advantageous prices, special schedules were established, and trains known as "preference freights" were run, making time only equalled by passenger trains. The market has also been greatly widened as a result of the development campaign undertaken by the Pennsylvania Railroad in behalf of the commercial and agricultural interest of Southern New Jersey. During the winter commission merchants and buyers all over the country were supplied with lists of reliable growers and shippers in that section.

Instead of being confined, as in former days, to a nearby market, generally in an overcrowded condition, meaning poor prices, the South Jersey farmer is now in as close touch with his markets as any business man, and is careful to see that his products are forwarded to destinations where he will receive the maximum price.

That the construction by the Pennsylvania Railroad of the bridge across the Delaware river has resulted in improved through-train service, and has brought the interior markets many hours nearer the South Jersey produce shipper, is seen from the large area over which the July shipments were distributed. About half of this produce, 1,232 cars, went to Jersey City and New York. Philadelphia and Camden took 443, Boston 258, Buffalo 127, Pittsburg 249, Chicago 34, Indiana 4, Kansas 3, Michigan 2, Ohio 68, Rhode Island 27, Connecticut 30, New Hampshire 27, Maine 2, Massachusetts points, other than Boston, 68, and Canada 19.

ELIZABETH'S MAYORALTY.

Mravlag, Cissel and Berry Republican Possibilities.

The Republican managers in Elizabeth will have a conference on Friday night. They will try to reach a decision as to the Mayoralty candidate. The contest appears to have narrowed down to three men, Dr. Victor Mravlag, former councilman; former Mayor Samuel J. Berry and former School Commissioner Robert B. Cissel. Sidney M. Williams, of Elizabethport, whose name had been mentioned in connection with the Mayoralty, has withdrawn from the field. Of the others, Dr. Mravlag and Mr. Cissel are avowedly aspirants, and Mr. Berry, it is said, is in a receptive mood.

Dr. Mravlag's friends say he is in the lead in the contest for the nomination, but the Cissel boom is not without strength. Those who favor Mr. Berry declare that he would be a great harmonizer and that his course on the Sunday baseball controversy, when he was Mayor earned him many adherents among the younger voters.

Some opposition to Mr. Cissel's nomination has been based on the assertion that he is not well known in the "down town" section, and this might result in a weakening of the rest of that ticket in Elizabethport.

It is generally believed that the Democratic Mayoralty nomination lies between General Dennis F. Collins and Mayor Ryan, with Collins seeming to be slightly the favorite.

The Republicans will, it is expected, renominate Senator Ernest T. Ackerman, of Plainfield, and Assemblymen Carlton B. Pierce, of Westfield, and Elbert F. Kirstein, of Rahway, but the renomination of Assemblyman John R. Moxon, of Elizabeth, is not so certain.

The Democrats so far have not advanced any "probabilities" for the Senatorial and Assembly nominations, but it is expected that tentative slates will be made up on the Democratic outing, August 20.

Miss M. E. Martin, of Clinton avenue, is sojourning at Bethlehem, New Hampshire.

afterward to think I had deliberately turned down the only request the party ever made. I have tried to be a clean man and live a clean life, and I have often complined that more honest men did not go into public life, and help clean up some of the corruption there. It would have been empty talk if, when the first possible opportunity came to me, I turned it down."

Major Martin has been urged for the place partly because of his well-known party loyalty, partly on the strength of his large personal popularity, and party because advices have been received from Plainfield and other points in the district that if he will run the men of those places will be eager to take off their coats, roll up their sleeves and gather as many ballots for him as they can.

He has left Elizabeth till September 12, and in the meantime if he is to be taken seriously as a candidate his interests will have to be looked after by others. He will be kept in touch with the development or decline of his boom, and he says whichever way it goes, if it suits the people at large, it will suit him.

WARNED OUT OF TOWN.

Chinese Laundryman Had White Woman With Him.

Sam Lee and a young woman who hales from New York city were caught in the dragnet at New Brunswick Monday by the police. They were found in Lee's laundry on French street. The woman gave her name as Ida Decker, and her age as 22 years. She said she lived on Pell street in New York city, but had originally come from Boston.

When arrested she said she was Lee's wife and had come there to spend several days with him and get some money. She declared she associated with Chinese because she got better treatment from them than from white people. They gave her a place to sleep and food, while the whites did not. She had fallen through bad companionship.

Lee is an opium fiend. The police gave both notice to quit the city if they desired to escape penalty. The woman left yesterday, while the laundryman was given a week to straighten up his business affairs and leave town. He agreed to this.

HAS TAMED A HUMMING BIRD.

Miss Mary Allen, of Hackettstown, Can Call Her Pet from the Wildwood.

Hackettstown, Aug. 12.—Miss Mary P. Allen, of More street, who has spent several years in the study of bird life, while studying the life and habits of the humming bird in the building of its nest and rearing of its young, discovered, a few weeks ago, that the old bird had left one of its young behind, and taking the fledgling to her home she taught it to eat honey and molasses from a spoon and raised it to maturity.

A few days ago she liberated the bird, taking it to the country home of Charles Ditler, near here, where plenty of flowering plants provide food. Almost daily Miss Allen visits the place, and taking a twig in her hand she will give a call and the bird will come from among the plants or wood and alighten upon the twig will eat from the spoon, as when she fed it in her home.

Unhappy Phillipsburg Mother Faints After Witnessing Terrible Mishap to Youth.

Michael Catarizi, a young foreigner residing with his parents on Pine avenue, Phillipsburg, was probably fatally injured while attempting to board an eastbound freight train on the Central Railroad at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. He was being watched by his mother and two sisters when the accident happened.

When Catarizi lost his hold and fell under the wheels of the train, his mother fell to the floor of the porch where she was standing and remained unconscious for an hour. Catarizi has been out of employment and started in search of work when the accident occurred. Both legs of the unfortunate young man were severed near the knees, and he was hurried to the Easton Hospital, where his condition is believed to be critical.

Married In Porto Rico.

Announcements have been received at Morristown of the marriage of Lloyd B. Tredway and Miss Anna Christina Scherzer, of Morristown, on Thursday, July 30, at San Juan, Porto Rico. Mr. Tredway went to Porto Rico last spring to manage a trolley line. In July he sent for his finances.

EYE-STRAIN

is directly responsible for the majority of cases of blindness today. If instead of trying to overwork the eyes, one would at once get glasses at the first warning of eye-strain there would be fewer cases of blindness at the present time.

Come to us and have your eyes examined free of charge and we will advise you what to do to save them.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Fanwood Council, R. A., held an important meeting in its rooms last night. Supervising District Deputy Armstrong Mulford, of Plainfield, was present on an official visitation.

Miss Bertha Welcome, who has been spending several weeks with her grandmother, Mrs. Thomas A. Gere, has returned to her home at Milford, Delaware.

Johnson, who pitched for the local ball team in several games last season, will be used by Manager Frentz in the game at Somerville.

Miss Susie L. Parse and Mrs. Thos. M. Paff, Jr., were the guests yesterday of Miss Harriett M. Squire at her home in Rahway.

The members of St. Mary's parish, Stony Hill, will hold a lawn fete on the rectory grounds this afternoon and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harper and children have returned from a visit of several days with relatives in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hollingsmith are enjoying camp life in the Adirondack mountains for several weeks.

The Town Committee meet in the town rooms Friday night.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

It now seems certain that the borough will provide a flag or concrete sidewalk on the north side of Walnut street between Washington avenue and Main street, for an ordinance to that effect passed its first reading at the last Council meeting. The improvement has long been necessary, and as soon as the ordinance has passed its second and third reading, the work will be commenced immediately.

The Board of Education has issued a call for a special meeting of the borough voters for next Tuesday evening. At this time $1,000 will be asked for to employ another teacher and equip an extra school room.

Rev. Henry N. Jordan will preach at the New Market Baptist church Sunday, and the Christian Endeavor will be held in the evening. The church was closed last Sunday for cleaning and repairs.

Professor Walter G. Davis and family, of Ridgefield Park, are the guests of Rev. and Mrs. Henry N. Jordan.

RUNAWAY AUTO HURTS FOUR.

Dashes Down Steep Hill Into Ferry Passengers.

Owing to the breaking of the brake chain on a 40-horsepower touring car shortly after noon yesterday as the car was descending Smith street hill, at Perth Amboy, the big machine dashed down the grade and charged a crowd of passengers leaving the Staten Island ferryboat Perth Amboy.

Deborah Ellis, 5 years old; George Ellis, 4 years; their mother, Ms. James Ellis, and their aunt, Mrs. George Ellis, were injured, the children seriously. Deborah sustained a brain concussion. Her little brother had his leg broken and his hip injured. The women were knocked down and bruised but otherwise were not hurt.

The car was owned by Adolph Lewisohn. His chauffeur, James Pettit, and Edward MacDuffie, proprietor of a garage at Belmar, were taking the car to New York. Mrs. MacDuffie accompanied them. All three were in the car. They were not hurt.

THESPIANS IN AUTO CRASH.

Female Members of Lillian Russell's Company Injured.

Four persons were injured yesterday afternoon when an automobile, containing a party of actors and actresses on their way from Atlantic City to New York skidded and crashed through a fence, at Lang Horne, Pa.

George Brown, the chauffuer, received a fracture of two ribs and was badly bruised about the body. Madeline Brewster, of the Lillian Russell "Wildfire" company, sustained a fracture of the arm and severe contusions of the head and lower limbs. Edna Cursdale, of the same company, suffered severe bruises about the body.

Frank Sheridan, of the "Paid In Full" company, escaped with slight bruises. The mishap was due to the wet road.

ATLANTIC CITY NOT SO BAD.

Senator Wilson Says Probe Results Are Exaggerated.

State Senator Edward A. Wilson, of Atlantic county, was at the Capitol at Trenton yesterday, and was kept busy explaining the disclosures made by the excise commission. He insisted that the whole matter was magnified, and that the facts did not warrant the comments that have been made. He said:

"Why should there be so much sensationalism about Atlantic City conditions? The situation today is no worse that has been for years. If anything, the conditions are really better. There is less crime and less immorality in Atlantic City today than in years past."

NAMED FLAG 'OLD GLORY'

Honor of Giving Title to the Starry Banner Belongs to Captain William Driver.

FLAG AS HIS COMPANION.

The Much Treasured Emblem of Nation Is Still In Existence—It May Be Preserved at Washington.

Captain William Driver, the man who christened the American flag "Old Glory," was born in Salem, Mass., March 17, 1803.

At the age of thirteen Driver was apprenticed to a blacksmith. Instead of making plows and shoeing horses, however, the blacksmith's wife set him at work milking cows and doing light chores. In order that he might surpass the other boys of the place in personal appearance, the blacksmith's wife clothed him with a shirtwaist of unbleached goods, with great rows of ruffles down the front. Driver demurred, but the blacksmith's wife insisted that the shirt must stay on.

However, when Driver was going out through the gate it was noticed that he rolled up his sleeves; he knew that he was in for a fight with every boy in town. When he got around the corner he carefully cut away as much of the ruffles as he could, but he had to fight, nevertheless; and he came out of it all triumphant, though somewhat disfigured, as might be expected of a lad that has to lick the whole crowd just because some woman puts a ridiculous costume on him. So he ran away and went to sea.

During his first voyages at sea after a severe storm, which caused the ship to spring a leak, the men refused to work the pumps unless their wages were raised. The old captain of the ship sent Driver below for his pistols and pipe. When he brought them on deck the captain cut the boats loose, lit his pipe, sat down and notified the crew they would either pump or "all hands would go to hell together." They returned to the pump and saved the ship.

He sailed with this captain for five years, who soon afterward made him mate, and from him he learned many valuables and useful lessons. He left him to become a mate on another vessel, and soon afterward trading master. At the age of twenty-one he was made master of a ship in 1824.

It was about this time that he christened the flag "Old Glory," as he and his old captain had seen some stirring times under its folds and considered no name too sacred for it. He commanded different ships from that time on until he left the ocean and settled in Nashville, Tenn., in 1837. He passed through many thrilling and perilous adventures after he became captain, was chased by a heavily armed "Yankee pirate" in the Caribbean Sea for six hours. He outsailed and dodged him in the dark, and saw the pirate hanged afterward.

He had considerable experience with Malay pirates and South Sea cannibals, to say nothing of the ocean storms. He left Salem once in company with six other vessels. They were caught in one of the worst snow and wind storms ever known on the New England coast. His ship alone escaped; the oher six and all on board were lost. He stood at the wheel for forty-eight hours during the storm and saved his ship.

During this voyage he rescued sixty-five persons, descendants of the mutineers of the English ship Bounty, who had been taken from Pitcairn Island to Tahiti and were dying with fever. He took them back to Pitcairn Island, their original home, 1,400 miles out of his course, free. He received a very pathetic testimonial for his kindness, dated September 5, 1831, signed by their teacher, George H. Nobbs, and othhers.

From there he sailed completely around Austalia and adjacent islands before he returned home. He afterward made two trips around the world; the last in 1836, in the ship Black Warrior, was the shortest on record for a sailing vessel, the log showing about 40,000 miles in 197 sailing days, nearly seven miles log run per hour, fair or foul weather. The trip, including eighty-nine days' stoppage in ports, made it altogether 268 days. This was his last trip to sea.

His flag "Old Glory" which had been his companion for years he packed in his camphor wood sea chest and moved to Nashville, Tenn., in 1837, where he died March 2, 1886. He gave the flag to his daughter, Mary Jane Roland, in 1873. She still has it in her possession at Wells, Nev. Its original dimension was 10 by 20 feet, blue field 5 by 6, an anchor in the lower inside corner blue field, 13 stripes and at the breaking out of the Civil War 34 stars, the number of States in the Union at that time. He asked to have a new star put on the flag every time a new State was admitted, but added none after the war, as the old flag had seen its day.

An effort will be made to have this flag taken to Washington and placed in the National archives and historical relics.—Salt Lake Herald.

When one has a supply of cold meat, stale bread and left-over stewed tomatoes or a few raw ones, a delicious luncheon or breakfast dish can be fashioned.

Put the meat through the chopper, or, if you have none, cut it into very small dice.

Season the tomatoes highly, if cooked, and add a little more thickening to make a rich tomato sauce. If raw, peel, stew, season with salt, pepper and a little onion and thicken with a tablespoonful of flour and one of butter. Keep the sauce hot in a double boiler until needed.

Toast the bread, butter on both sides and put a tablespoonful of the hot tomato sauce on each piece.

Stir the chopped meat in the rest of the sauce and mix over the fire until thoroughly heated. Give an extra touch of seasoning, put a liberal supply of the mixture on each piece of toast and serve at once.

Any kind of meat or poultry can be used, but cold lamb, veal and chicken are the best.—Ellen Wise, in Philadelphia Press.

Boy Killed by Elevator.

Peter Nase, fifteen years old, a plumber's helper, was killed in Butler Brothers' warehouse at Morgan and Warren streets, Jersey City, yesterday afternoon. He leaned out to see if the elevator was ascending. The car was above him coming down and the bottom of the lift hit his head and crushed it and his shoulders between the floor of the car and the edge of the shaft.

Scene in Third Act of "The Straight Road Company," at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, Matinee and Night.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Miss Minnie Victorson, the leading woman of the "Straight Road" company, which will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday, matinee and night, was asked if she really believed that women were grateful and if she didn't thing Moll, the principal part in "The Straight Road" was over-drawn in showing her gratitude to the exten' of her own happiness. "I don't know," said this vivacious little lady, "I think all women are grateful; it's part of their make-up." Just then Miss Lora Rogers, the Miss Thompson of the company, came along and said, "I think gratitude is one of Miss Victorson's strong points; we were school-girls together and after school did what both enjoyed most—climbing trees to see who could get the highest. I had no mother to say 'don't do it,' but Miss Victorson had, so having one day gone higher than ever we both proceeded to get down. I was on the lower branches and just dropped but Miss Victorson started down and left most of her apron and dress behind. I gave her mine to get home and beyond her mother's eye. 'I find myself in the same company with her for four seasons. She always gets me placed. I am sure that is gratitude for escaping the punishment through my efforts to help her hide her torn dress."

Douglas Fainbanks, In "All for a Girl," at New Plainfield Theatre Monday Night.

Brady and Joseph R. Grismer's new star, ought to prove a distinctly fashionable event, by reason of the great vogue attained by this clever young actor in a long list of roles he has acted in the last five years in the larger cities. He is to the stage today, in the opinion of a majority of the critics, what John Drew was in the early days of his service under the late Augustin Daly—an ideal actor of polite young men. Mr. Fairbanks will be seen in the principal character of a new society comedy by Rupert Hughes, called "All for a Girl," written specially for him. He will be assisted by one of the best casts ever put together for the support of a star. Adelaide Manola, Jane Corcoran, Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh, Robert A. Fischer, Percy Plunkett, John Brennan and W. J. Constantine are some of the principles.

BRIDEGROOM COMETH NOT.

But Goeth with $175 of Confiding Girl's Savings.

After a courtship of a week, Susie Bires, of 113 Second street, Trenton, and Joseph Crispo were to have been married last Friday. The bride was all ready and the coach waited at the door, but the bridegroom failed to appear. Miss Bires waited and waited, but Joseph had evidently lost his way and the coach was dismissed.

It has been discovered that during the time he was wooing the girl he was also coaxing her savings from her and relatives of the girl say that he secured $175 before he disappeared. Crispo had only been in this city about a week and the two were introduced by a mutual friend. The girl had been working for years as a servant and had saved $470. It was only through the interference of her mistress that she was prevented from giving the fellow all her money.

TO TEST EXCISE LAW.

Trentonian Certioraris Fine by Police Court Judge.

Justice Alfred Reed has granted a writ of certiorari carrying to the Supreme Court for review the proceedings of the Central Police Court of Trenton by which Isaac Byer, a saloonkeeper, was found guilty of selling liquor on Sunday and fined $100.

Byer's counsel claimed that excise violations do not properly come under the jurisdiction of a police court, contending that the excise commission of a municipality is the body in which is vested the power to hear complaints of violations. He holds that the charge against Byer was a violation of one of the Excise Board's ordinances, and that, therefore, that body and not the police court should have heard the case. The case is attracting widespread attention, because if Byer's contention is upheld by the higher court it will upset the ordinary procedure in excise cases.

HINDOO TRIES TO KILL GIRL.

Repulsed, Slashes Her On Atlantic City Boardwalk.

Crowds leaving amusement places on the Boardwalk at Tennessee avenue, Atlantic City, just before dark Sunday were thrown into a panic by an attempt made by Thombier Vangandallum, a giant Hindoo, to murder Luisa A. Ford, an octoroon. The woman was terribly slashed with a razor, and a score of women fainted from fright while the police were dragging the man from his victim.

The Hindoo had been following the girl for several days with offers of marriage and her repulse of him drove him partially insane. The girl was taken to the hospital and will recover.

With a constantly aching back.
A woman should not have a bad back.
And she wouldn't if the kidneys were well.
Doan's Kidney Pills make well kidneys.
Here is a Plainfield woman who endorses this claim:

Mrs. J. Mottley, of 546 Sixth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "About two months ago I was seized with a severe backache and dull pains in the top and back of my head. I could not rest nights, and had little desire to do housework, for my strength seemed to be about all gone. I tried Doan's Kidney Pills, procured them at Randolph's drug store and can truthfully say that they gave me relief from my sufferings. My back and head do not ache and I am strong and vigorous, rest well at night, and have some ambition again. I am convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills are a first-class remedy for troubles arising from the kidneys."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

JERSEY SHOTS READY FOR MATCHES IN OHIO

New Jersey will send some of her best shots to Camp Perry, Ohio, to shoot in the Herrick trophy match, which will be shot on ranges and under conditions exactly like those of the Palma trophy match. The team for this match will consist of Lieutenant Colonel Arthur Rowland, division staff; Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Tewes, assistant inspector general of rifle practice; Major William B Martin, Lieutenant C. F. Silvester, Second Regiment; Major W. S Pelee and Captain Adolph Pfeill, Third Regiment; Captain M. C Mann, First Regiment, and Captain John Malcolm, Fifth Regiment.

The Herrick match has for the first prize a handsome trophy presented by former Governor Myron T. Herrick, and $200 in cash. The second prize is $100; the third, $50, and the fourth, $25. Colonel Tewes was a member of the famous Palma trophy team last year. Colonel Rowland won the championship at Sea Girt last year, and Major Martin was on the American team that was victorious at Bisley last month, and he had the highest aggregate score of any contestant.

The New Jersey team will be selected from the following "shooting squad" to represent the state in the national match: Captain Owen Smith, Captain W. A. Higgins, Lieutenant W. A. Baker, Lieutenant R. T. Burlington and Private H M Minervini, of the Fourth Regiment, Privates P. J. O'Hare and J. Snelling, of the First Regiment, Captain A. Pfeill and Sergeant A. W. Muller of the Third Regiment; Lieutenant C. P. Silvester, Sergeants J. R. Dabb and G. W. P. Silvester, of the Second Regiment; Captain John Malcolm and C. J. Dehn, of the Fifth Regiment, and Sergeant H. E. Williams, of the Second Troop.

General B. W. Spencer, inspector general of rifle practice, will be the captain of the team; Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Tewes will act as coach, and Lieutenant Colonel Rowland will be the spotter. The team will leave for Camp Perry late this week. The Jersey riflemen will return to Sea Girt in time for the tournament under the auspices of the New Jersey State Rifle Association and the New Jersey Rifle Association, which will commence September 4 and last until September 12. General B. W. Spencer will be the executive officer, and Lieutenant Colonel N. B. Thurston, of New York, will be one of his assistants.

WORKMEN BATTLE FOR JOBS.

One Stabbed and Six Hurt in Fight Between Americans and Foreigners.

A riot, in which one man was fatally stabbed and a dozen beaten with clubs and stones, occurred at Camden Monday morning outside the works of the Joseph Campbell Preserving Company, when 1,500 unemployed laborers gathered in answer to an advertisement which the company inserted in last Saturday's papers.

The Campbell Company laid off a great number of its unskilled employes last winter. As the men could not find re-employment, there has been much suffering and poverty among them. Last Saturday the firm advertised that it had room for 150 men if they would apply at the works at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. Long before that hour an anxious, work-crazy mob, composed not only of the company's former employes, but of all the unemployed foreigners in this section of the State, collected outside the gates.

The trouble started when the old American employes saw that some of the foreigners were being admitted, and they tried to push them out of line. Immediately so fierce a fight started that the company's manager telephoned for the police. When the latter arrived they found one American lying on the ground with his face slashed open by an Italian stiletto, and fully 1,000 Americans and Italians fighting over his body with knives, stones and clubs.

The police made two arrests and sent the stabbed man and several others to the hospital. The company has postponed its attempt to engage more help.

KILLED BOARDING A TRAIN.

Murray V. Arthur, twenty-two years old, of Dongan Hills, Staten Island, attemped to board a moving train on the Pennsylvania Railroad on Monday at Deal Beach. He fell to the platform, rolled beneath the wheels, and had both legs cut off. He was hurried to the Monmouth Memorial Hospital at Long Branch, where he died.

Arthur had been a guest at the Hathaway Inn. He tried to board the moving train as he had an engagement to meet a friend on it.

Crowd Helps Boy Escape.

Trenton, Aug. 12.—Isaac Miller, a farmer of Mercerville, came to town Sunday and saw Hyman Burd on the street. Burd worked for Miller some time ago and Miller says he stole goods from him. Miller grabbed the boy and started to take him to a police station. Passersby thought Miller was abusing the boy, not knowing the alleged facts, and surrounding the farmer made him let go of his prisoner. The boy escaped.

March of the White Guard

By SIR GILBERT PARKER

(Copyright, 1908, by R. F. Fenno & Co.)

CHAPTER IX.

It is the 10th of May. In an armchair made of hickory and birchbark by Cloud-in-the-Sky, sits Varre Lepage reading a letter from his wife. She is at Winnipeg, and is coming west as far as Regina to meet him on his way down. He looks a wreck; but a handsome wreck. His refined features, his soft black beard and blue eyes, his graceful hand and gentle manners, one would scarcely think belonged to an evil-hearted man. He sits in the sunlight at the door, wrapped about in moose and beaver skins. This world of plain and wood is glad. Not so Varre Lepage. He sat and thought of what was to come. He had hoped at times that he would die, but twice Jaspar Hume had said, "I demand your life; you owe it to your wife—to me—to God!" And he had pulled his heart up to this demand and had lived. But what lay before him? He saw a stony track, and he shuddered at it.

"He Saved You! He Saved You! Jaspar Hume!—Oh, Varre!"

The Bar of Justice and Restitution raised its cold barriers before him; and he was not strong.

As he sat there facing his future Jaspar Hume came to him and said, "If you feel up to it, Lepage, we will start for Edmonton and Shovanne on Monday. I think it will be quite safe, and your wife is anxious. I shall accompany you as far as Edmonton; you can then proceed to Shovanne by easy stages, and so on east in the pleasant weather. Are you ready to go?"

"Yes! I am ready."

CHAPTER X.

On a beautiful May evening Varre Lepage, Jaspar Hume, and the White Guard are welcomed at Fort Edmonton by the officer in command of the Mounted Police. They are to enjoy the hospitality of the Fort for a couple of days, before they pass on. Jaspar Hume is to go back with Cloud-in-the-Sky and Late Carscallen, and a number of Indian carriers, for this is a journey of business too. Gaspe Toujours and Jeff Hyde are to press on with Varre Lepage, who is now much stronger and better. One day passes, and on the following morning Jaspar Hume gives instructions to Gaspe Toujours and Jeff Hyde, and makes preparations for his going back. He is standing in the Barracks Square, when a horseman rides in and inquires of a sergeant standing near, if Varre Lepage has arrived at the Fort. A few words bring out the fact that Rose Lepage is nearing the Fort from the south, being determined to come on from Shovanne to meet her husband. The trooper thinks she is now about eight or ten miles away; but is not sure. He had been sent on ahead the day before, but his horse having met with a slight accident, he had been delayed. He had seen the party, however, a long distance back in the early morning. He must now ride away and meet Mrs. Lepage, he said. He was furnished with a fresh horse and he left, bearing a message to the loyal wife from Varre Lepage.

Jaspar Hume decided to leave Fort Edmonton at once, and to take all the White Guard back with him; and gave orders to that effect. He entered the room where Varre Lepage sat alone, and said: "Varre Lepage, the time has come for us to say good-by. I am starting at once for Fort Providence."

But the other replied: "You will wait until my wife comes. You must. There was pain in his voice.

"I must not."

Varre Lepage braced himself for a heavy task and said: "Jaspar Hume, if the time has come to say good-by, it has also come when we should speak together for once openly; to settle, in so far as can be done, a long account. You have not let my wife know who saved me. That appears from her letters. She asks the name of my rescuer. I have not yet told her. But she will know that to-day, when I tell her all."

"When you tell her all?"

"When I tell her all."

"But you shall not do that."

"I will. It will be the beginning of the confession which I shall afterward make to the world."

"By Heaven you shall not do it, Coward! Would you wreck her life?" Jaspar Hume's face was wrathful, and remained so till the other sank back in the chair with his forehead in his hands; but it softened as he saw this remorse and shame. He began to see that Varre Lepage had not clearly grasped the whole situation. He said in quieter, but still firm tones: "No, Lepage, that matter is between us two, and us alone. She must never know—the world therefore must never know. You did an unmanly thing; you are suffering a manly remorse. Now let it end here—but I swear it shall," he said in fierce tones as the other shook his head negatively; "I would have let you die at Manitou Mountain, if I had thought you would dare to take away your wife's peace—your children's respect."

"I have no children; our baby died."

Jaspar Hume again softened. "Can you not see, Lepage? The thing cannot be mended." Just then his hand touched the book that he still carried in his bosom, and as if his mother had whispered to him, he continued: "I bury it all, and so must you. You will begin the world again—old friend—and so shall I. Keep your wife's love and respect. Henceforth you will deserve it."

Varre Lepage raised moist eyes to the other and said: "But you will take back the money I got for that!"

There was a pause, then Jaspar Hume replied: "Yes, upon such terms, times and conditions as I shall hereafter fix. And you have no child, Lepage?" he gently added.

"We have no child; it died with my fame."

Jaspar Hume looked steadily into the eyes of the man who had wronged him: "Remember, Varre, you begin the world again. I am going now. By the memory of old days, good-by," and he held out his hand. Varre Lepage took it and rose tremblingly to his feet, and said, "You are a good man, Jaspar Hume. Good-by!"

The Sub-factor turned at the door. "If it will please you, tell your wife that I saved you. Some one will tell her; perhaps I would rather—at least it would be more natural, if you did it." He passed out into the heat of sunshine that streamed into the room and fell across the figure of Varre Lepage, who sat and said dreamily, "And begin the world again."

Before Jaspar Hume mounted, almost immediately after, to join the White Guard now ready for the journey back, Jacques sprang upon him and pushed his nose against his master's heart. And once again, and for the last time that we shall hear it, Jaspar Hume said, "It's all right, Jacques."

And then they started for the north again. As they were doing so a shadow fell across the sunlight that streamed upon Varre Lepage. He looked up. There was a startled cry of joy, an answering exclamation of love, and Rose Lepage was locked in her husband's arms.

A few moments after and the sweet-faced woman said: "Who was the man who rode away to the north as I came up, Varre? He reminded me of some one, but I can't think who it is."

"That was the leader of the White Guard, the man who saved me, my wife." He paused a moment and then solemnly said, "That man was Jaspar Hume!"

The wife rose to her feet with a spring. "He saved you! He saved you! Jaspar Hume!—oh, Varre!"

"He saved me, Rose!"

Her eyes were wet. "And he would not stay and let me thank him! Poor fellow; poor Jaspar—Hume! Has he then been up here these ten years?"

He face was flushed and pain was struggling with the joy she felt in seeing her husband again.

"Yes, he has been up here all that time."

"He has not succeeded in life, Varre!" and her thoughts went back to the days when, blind and ill, Jaspar Hume went away for health's sake, and she remembered how sorry then she felt for him, and how grieved she was that when he came back strong and well, he did not come near her or her husband, and offered no congratulations. She had not deliberately wronged him. She did not know he wished her to be his wife. She knew he cared for her; but so did Varre Lepage. A promise had been given to neither when Jaspar Hume went away; and after that she grew to love the successful, kind-mannered genius who became her husband. Even in this happiness of hers, sitting once again at her husband's feet, she thought with a tender and glowing kindness of the man who had cared for her eleven years ago; and who had but now saved her husband.

"He has not succeeded in life," she repeated softly.

Looking down at her, his brow burning with a white heat, Varre Lepage said, "He is a great man, my wife."

"I am sure he is a good man," she added.

Perhaps Varre Lepage had borrowed some strength from Jaspar Hume, for he said almost sternly, "He is a great man."

His wife looked up half startled at the tone and said, "Yes, dear; he is a good man—and a great man."

The sunlight still came in through the open door. The Saskatchewan flowed swiftly between its verdant banks, an eagle went floating away to the west, robins made vocal a solitary tree a few yards away, troopers moved back and forward across the square, and a hen and her chickens came fluttering to the threshold. The wife looked at the yellow brood drawing close to their mother, and her eyes grew wistful. She thought of their one baby asleep in an English grave. But thinking of the words of the captain of the White Guard, Varre Lepage said, "We will begin the world again, my wife."

She smiled and rose to kiss his forehead as the hen and chickens hastened away from the door, and a clear bugle call sounded in the square.

"Yes, dear," she said, "we will begin the world again."

. . . . .

CHAPTER XI.

Eleven years have gone since that scene was enacted at Edmonton, and the curtain rises for the last act of that drama of life which is connected with the brief history of the White Guard.

A great gathering is dispersing from a hall in Piccadilly. It has been drawn together to do honor to a man who has achieved a triumph in engineering science. As he steps from the platform to go he is greeted by a fusilade of cheers. He bows calmly and kindly. He is a man of vigorous yet reserved aspect; he has a rare individuality. He receives with a quiet cordiality the personal congratulations of his friends. He remains for some time in conversation with a royal Duke, who takes his arm and with him passes into the street. The Duke is a member of this great man's club, and offers him a seat in his brougham. Amid the cheers of the people they drive away together. Inside the club there are fresh congratulations, and it is proposed to arrange an impromptu dinner, at which the Duke will preside. But with modesty and honest thanks the great man declines. He pleads an engagement. He had pleaded this engagement the day before to a well-known society. After his health is proposed he makes his adieus, and leaving the club, walks away toward a West-end square. In one of its streets he pauses and enters a building called "Providence Chambers." His servant hands him a cablegram. He passes to his library, and standing before the fire, opens it. It reads: "My wife and I send congratulations to the great man."

Jaspar Hume stands for a moment looking at the fire, and then says simply, "I wish my poor old Jacques were here." He then sits down and writes this letter:—

"My Dear Friends:—Your cablegram has made me glad. The day is over. My last idea was more successful than I even dared to hope; and the world has been kind. I went down to see your boy, Jaspar, at Clifton last week. It was the 13th, his birthday, you know, ten years old, and a clever, strong-minded little fellow. He is quite contented. As he is my godchild I again claimed the right of putting a thousand dollars to his credit in the bank—I have to speak of dollars to you people living in Canada—which I have done on his every birthday. When he is twenty-one he will have twenty-one thousand dollars—quite enough for a start in life. We get along well together, and I think he will develop a fine faculty for science. In the summer, as I said, I will bring him over to you. There is nothing more to say to-night except that I am as always,

"Your faithful friend,
"JASPAR HUME."

A moment after the letter was finished the servant entered and announced "Mr Late Carscallen." With a smile and hearty greeting the great man and this member of the White Guard meet. It was to entertain his old Arctic comrade that Jaspar Hume had declined to be entertained by society or club. A little while after, seated at the table, the ex Sub factor said: "You found your brother well, Carscallen?"

The jaws moved slowly as of old. "Ay, that, and a grand minister, Captain."

"He wanted you to stay in Scotland, I suppose."

"Ay, that, but there's no place for me like Fort Providence."

"Try this pheasant." And you are Sub-factor now, Carscallen?"

"There's two of us Sub factors—Jeff Hyde and myself. Mr. Field is old and can't do much work, and trade is heavy now."

"Yes, I hear from the Factor now and then. And Gaspe Toujours?"

"He went away three years ago, but he said he'd come back. He never did, though. Jeff Hyde believes he will. He says to me a hundred times: 'Carscallen, he made the sign of the cross that he'd come back from Saint Gabrielle; and that's next to the Book with a Papist. If he's alive he'll come.'"

"Perhaps he will." Carscallen. And Cloud-in-the-Sky?"

"He's still there, and comes in and smokes with Jeff Hyde and me, as he used to do with you, sir; but he doesn't obey our orders as he did those of the Captain of the White Guard. He said to me when I left, 'You see Strong-back, tell him Cloud-in-the-Sky good Indian—he never forget. How!'"

Jaspar Hume raised his glass with smiling and thoughtful eyes. "To Cloud-in-the-Sky and all who never forget!" he said.

THE END.

EARTH WANTED BY TOO MANY IN WESTFIELD.

Because one or more councilmen were getting earth from the telephone company's foreman at Westfield, and others of the councilmen wanted some of the earth for their constituents, they said, the majesty of the law has been invoked to prevent anybody at all from acquiring any of the soil. An injunction was served Saturday upon Hiram L. Fink, chairman of the Road Committee of the Borough Council, and Charles Merklene, foreman of the construction gang of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. The telephone company is laying conduits through the borough, and a quantity of surplus soil has been disposed of.

The injunction was allowed by Vice Chancellor Walker, at the instance of Councilman Frederick H. Taggert, Charles Welch, Nelson Archbold, Henry J. Homes and Mrs. Elizabeth M. Schmitt, property owners. Mrs. Schmitt is the wife of Councilman John J. Schmitt. It restrains the dumping of any of the surplus earth upon private property. Argument on the injunction will be heard in Trenton Tuesday, August 18.

It is alleged by several members of the Westfield Council that when they applied to the foreman of the telephone company for some of the surplus earth from the work they were informed they could not have any, as all was to go on a lot belonging to Councilman Fink and James T. Pierson. Councilman Hohenstein asserts that when he first spoke of the matter he was told the soil was being paid for, and later the admission was made that no charge was made for the earth. The foreman, it is said, denied emphatically that any one was paying for any of the soil. Councilman Schmitt, it is said, ordered several loads of the dirt dumped on the Public Library lot to fill up a low spot. The refusal of the foreman to do this, it is said, led to the injunction proceedings. Some of the soil, the objectors say, could have been used advantageously to grade the grounds of the Washington School. The affair may have some bearing on the borough election, it is said.

Charged Selling Without License.

Hackensack, Aug. 12.—Sebastian Sellito and his son, John Sellito, of Chestnut street, were arrested Monday, charged with assault and battery and selling liquor without a license, the complainant being James Benizenti. They were each held in $500 bail on the liquor charge and $200 bail on the assault charge, to await the action of the grand jury.

POLITICAL POT BOILING IN MORRIS COUNTY NOW

The political pot in Morris county is beginning to boil a little earlier then usual this year, owing, no doubt, to the fact the candidates will no longer be nominated at convention, but directly at the party primaries. The new direct primary nomination law will have its first trial in New Jersey on September 22, and a candidate must now go through two campaigns before reaching the office he seeks—one to secure the nomination, the other to get elected.

A county clerk, a sheriff, two members of the Assembly and coroners are to be elected in Morris county this year. Former Assemblyman John M. Mills, now clerk of the Tax Board, seems to have little opposition for the nomination for county clerk to succeed "Uncle Dan" Voorhees, who retires on November 15, after thirty-eight years' service in that office. As clerk of the Tax Board Mr. Mills has been able to make the acquaintance of almost every taxpayer of the county, and this, coupled with the fact that he has the "right kind of backing," makes it reasonably sure that he will land the nomination.

There are three candidates for the nomination for sheriff. They are Calhoun Orr, keeper of the county jail, E. L. Schoneberger and John D. Smith. Orr has the best chance of getting the nomination, because most of the members of the organization take kindly to his candidacy. "Jim" Lyon, of Pompton Plains, is going to be renominated for the Assembly, and it looks very much as though Joseph Whitaker, of Madison, will be his running mate, in place of Henry Buxton, now secretary of the State Tax Board.

On the Democratic side George F. Weber, former Freeholder, of Madison, is most talked of for the nomination for county clerk, while Whitfield B. Gillen, of Dover, will, it is said, be nominated for sheriff, and make one more effort to land the office. Little talk is heard of Democratic candidates, as the Republican majority in Morris runs from 1,000 up.

SAYS RAILROAD IS UNSAFE.

R. V. Lindabury Complains of Lax Work on Lackawanna Branch.

Richard V. Lindabury, general counsel of the Prudential Insurance Company, has sent a remonstrance to the Lackawanna Railroad against what he characterizes as the "demoralized conditions" existing on the Passaic and Delaware branch of the road. His complaint was called forth by the derailment of a passenger train near Far Hills last Monday, and the wrecking of an express train near Millington of June 5. Mr. Lindabury was somewhat injured in the wreck of the express. That no one was killed, Mr. Lindabury says, was miraculous.

In the mishap near Millington improper spiking of the rails was held reasonable for the derailing of the train by the State Railroad Commission. Mr. Lindabury learned that the track where the Far Hills wreck occurred was also poorly spiked. In many places the spikes had not been driven down fast to the rails, and in some instances were a half inch or more above the sleeper. There was also a bad curvature in many rails, while others were worn down and unfit for use. In some cases the rails had spread for fully two inches.

In the opinion of Mr. Lindabury the entire road is in "a badly demoralized state." A number of other commuters have also sent complaints to the Lackawanna management.

WANT MOFFITT AGAIN.

This Time for Cruelty to Child He Stole from Wife No. 2.

Hackensack, Aug. 12.—Dr. E. K. Conrad, president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Monday caused a warrant to be issued for the arrest of Francis A. Moffitt, of Warren Point, who, after stealing his child from the mother, was arrested on Saturday for bigamy. It was learned yesterday that the child had been hidden in an abandoned chicken-coop by neighbors for two or three days and it was this fact that led to the action of Mr. Conrad. Constable Dawson could not find Moffitt and Superintendent Bratt, of the Children's Home, learned that the child was taken from its hiding-place yesterday. Moffitt was formerly a hotel-keeper, but is now a horse-dealer. His defense in the bigamy case is that he believed his first wife died five years ago.

Gift By Brewer Announced to Congress in Berlin.

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Ambassador Hill announced at Monday's session of the international Historical Congress that Adolphus Busch, the St. Louis brewer, had requested him to communicate to the congress his intention to donate $55,000 to the Germanic Museum a Harvard, with which to erect a building more worthy of the collection and replacing the present gymnasium hall.

The president of the congress and Prof. Kuno Francke, of Harvard, thanked Mr. Busch in the name of Germany and science.

Baseball Dispute.

Plainfield, N. J., Aug. 12, 1908.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In answer to the communication of the Climax A. C., in your esteemed columns last evening, we regret to state that while Mr. Stover's story sounds plausible, his statements therein will not bear investigation.

The agreement to play five innings he disclaims any knowledge of, was made with himself by Manager Higgins in the presence of J. Mottley, scorekeeper, the writer, T. Harding, and several others. At the end of the fifth he wanted to continue, but fortunately for the Climax, we stood by our agreement. A look at the summary of the game will verify this.

With regard to his statement that Umpire Walters awarded them the game, Mr. Walters, when interviewed by the writer last evening, denied emphatically that it was so, stating that when the players left the field in the fifth inning, he also retired, understanding that the game was finished.

CLINTON AVES. ARRANGE TWO GAMES WITH 'PLAINS

Manager Ernest Dorflinger, of the Clinton Avenue, and Manager Frentz, of the Scotch Plains, held a conference last night and decided to play two more games this season, both on Crescent Oval. The Plainfield manager at first was not anxious to continue the series, but when it was pointed out that the two games would be money-makers and that the 'Plains would agree to play them both here, he accepted.

The next game will be played at Crescent Oval on Saturday, August 22, and the last one on Labor Day afternoon. Following the unpleasant experience at the last contest between the teams at the 'Plains many friends of the Plainfield team urged the management to cancel future contests, but upon second thought, it was realized that neither team engaged in the fighting and indirectly was not responsible for the trouble. Inasmuch as the two games are to be played here the teams are assured of fair treatment. It is likely that the double umpire system will be used.

The Clinton Avenues will play Rahway at the latter place on Saturday, and as this is the first game between these teams this season, it should be a good one. Rahway has been playing fast ball and is right in the class with the Plainfield boys. Randolph and Boelzler will be the battery for the locals. It is not known who will officiate for Rahway. Later in the season the Rahwegians will visit Crescent Oval.

PROHIBITION A FAILURE HERE AS ELSEWHERE

Peter Backes, attorney for the State excise commission, who took part in the investigation of excise matters in Cumberland, Cape May and Salem counties, yesterday, when interviewed by a reporter at the Hotel Sterling in Trenton last night, said:

"Millville is a prohibition territory, but the committee learned that there is considerable drinking of intoxicants done there. A popular drink in Millville is called "splits," which is a beverage composed of whiskey and ginger. We also learned from the railroad freight agents that an average of 1,200 cases of beer are shipped into Millville each week, besides large quantities of whiskey in bulk and "splits." There are seven or eight druggists in the town, who fill the prescriptions of a few physicians for whiskey, the physicians charging 25 cents for each prescription. This was told us by Prosecutor Fithian. We learned that there are twelve 'speak-easies,' as far as we could discover.

"We found similar conditions in Bridgeton, where the railroad people claim that 700 cases of beer are shipped each week, and there are open violations of the law in Cape May, Sea Isle City and Holly Beach. The conditions are different in Vineland, where the people are mostly foreigners, who make their own wine for home use. Vineland votes every year against license, and there is very little beer drunk there.

"Prosecutor Fithian admits that there are violations of the law in his own county."

Firemen's Parade Realistic.

The annual firemen's parade at Long Branch had a spectacular ending last night, when box 41 called the firemen and apparatus into real active work. The fire was confined to a stable belonging to David Hyman, in the rear of Sastle Hall. The fire was soon extinguished, and the firemen finished the line of march and attended the department ball at the Casino.

Rebukes Timid Catholics.

The Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, Bishop of the diocese of Trenton, in which North Plainfield is included, talked plainly at last night's session of the annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies at Boston. He called timid Catholics "weak-kneed jelly-fish who are afraid to call their souls their own."

Two Women Drown at Cape May.

Miss Margaret Masterson and Miss Katie Charles, each about thirty-five years old, who were employed at the Hotel Cape May, were drowned yesterday in the surf there by going out over their depth. The body of Miss Charles was recovered, but that of Miss Masterson has not been found.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Through the western part of Hudson county, with promises of hearty support from leaders in both the regular and New Idea forces in Jersey City and Hoboken, Councilman Clarence T. Van Deren, of Harrison, is the only Republican aspirant for Congress to suceed Congressman Eugene V. Leake. His excellent record as a Republican has stood him in good stead.

Senator Everett Colby, Representative Martin and Councilman Ralph W. Grout were the speakers at a big Republican rally that was held in Upper Montclair last night. At the meeting, which was under the auspices of the Republican Club of Upper Montclair, candidates were named for town councilman and delegates to the town and county conventions.

Congressman Eugene Leake, of the Ninth Hudson County District, who, although a Democrat, has repudiated William J. Bryan's candidacy for President, has accepted an invitation to address a meeting in Jersey City under the auspices of the Hudson City Republican League on Monday, August 24.

Edward W. Gray, who was private secretary to ex-Governor Edward C. Stokes, has been formally appointed Secretary of the New Jersey State Republican Committee by Chairman Franklin Murphy. He will begin his duties at once. Offices will be established in Newark, with a branch in Trenton.

The contest for the Republican mayoralty nomination in Elizabeth appears to have narrowed down to three men, Dr. Victor Mravlag, former councilman; former Mayor Samuel J. Berry and former School Commissioner Robert B. Cissel. Sidney M. Williams has withdrawn from the field. Of the others, Dr. Mravlag and Mr. Cissel are avowedly aspirants, and Mr. Berry, it is said, is in a receptive mood.

"If the Democrats will pull together this year, we will surely elect Bryan," declared State Senator Johnson Cornish to a True American reporter yesterday. "Of course, you know we have always been strong for Bryan in Warren county, but we have never been so strong or so enthusiastic as we are this year. I confidently expect to see my county roll up one of her old-time Democratic majorities in the November election."

Senator Cornish said that he had been spending several days at the seashore and he was surprised and gratified at the sentiment favorable to Bryan and Kern which he had found. He had met a number of western business men on his visit to the seashore, and while several of them had always voted the Republican ticket in the past they were now a unit for the Democratic candidates. The western men told Senator Cornish that there was a distinct drift toward the Democratic ticket in their sections of the country.

"I see that my name has been mentioned in connection with the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Fifth district," commented the Senator, "but you can say for me that I would not take the office under any circumstances. However, there is a sterling Democrat up in Phillipsburg who ought to make a strong candidate against Congressman Fowler's re-election. He is S. C. Smith, a lawyer, favorably known throughout Warren county. Let the Fifth district Democrats look him up if they want a good man to make the fight against Fowler."

Chivalric men of Arlington are in a dilemma as to just what is the proper course to pursue when a woman, for the first time in the history of the State, is nominated for an elective office for which there are already Republican and Democratic candidates in the field. Opinion is divided as to whether the men should continue their race for the office or gallantly retire and make the election of their fair opponent unanimous. This situation results from the nomination of Mrs. William C. Eakins, the pretty wife of a wealthy New York broker, for member of the Arlington board of education from the Third ward, by the united women's social, civic and church organizations of that town. Mrs. Eakins has accepted the nomination and is in the fight to win. A vigorous campaign has been opened by the 400 women who are behind her, and the chances for a lively contest at the polls are promising. Mrs. Eakins, who is a charming young woman, the mother of three children, will make her fight on the platform that mothers know best how to regulate the schooling of children, and that they are entitled to representation where the interests of their offspring are at stake.

A rumor has reached the Atlantic City Press from the upper end of the State that Senator Minch is being urged by his friends for the Congressional nomination this year. Senator Minch is making no statements, and will make none, say these rumors. "Down here," comments the Press, "it was understood that Congressman Gardner would be unopposed, and these rumors come as a surprise to this end of the district.

County Register Edward S. Perry will probably receive the Republican nomination for mayor of Orange without opposition.

The Republican clubs held a powwow at Elizabeth last night to consider the shrievalty situation and it was decided that Captain Robert Kirkland, of that city, was the right man to boom for the job. The meeting was purely local.

James J. Sperry, of Cranford, is being urged by the Democrats of the Fifth Congressional district to accept the Democratic nomination in case J. E. Martine will not become a candidate. He is said to be considering the proposition.

A. W. Schwartz has filed with County Clerk Calvert his petition for nomination to the Assembly on the Republican ticket.

Already there are three candidates in the field for the Republican nomination for Assembly in Somerset county. These are the present incumbent, W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook; Dr. Richard Moldenke, of North Plainfield township, and John C. Cooper, of Warren township.

So far as can be learned there is no opposition among Somerset Republicans to the proposed renomination for State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen. When the Senator returns from abroad next week, he is expected to get down to good hard work to insure an all-around Republican victory in Somerset on November 3.

At the hour of going to press, one William Jennings Bryan—you have heard the name before—is speaking to the nation from Lincoln, Nebraska. The echo will be heard on November 3, but we don't mind telling what it will be—"three times and out."

ORANGE ALSO REJECTS THE VOTING MACHINES.

Smashing Majorities Against Them In All the Districts Voting and In West Orange.

The city of Orange and the Township of West Orange held special elections yesterday to determine whether the voting machines should be retained for use. Four of the five wards of Orange in which the machines have been in use, and containing ten districts, held elections. The usual proportion of vote in a special election was brought out to the polls, and in every district, as well as in West Orange Township, the majorities against the machines were overwhelming.

In Orange 1,412 votes were polled. Of these 1,258 were against the machine and only 154 were in favor of the machines. That is, 87 per cent. of the vote was in opposition.

The polls were open from early in the morning until 7 at night, and the heaviest voting was done before 12 o'clock. The returns were all in at 8:30 o'clock. West Orange polled 15 for and 92 against the machine. This was in the Third ward, in which a machine has been in use.

ACTING CHIEF BURNED.

Paterson Fire Fighter Near Death—Flames Kill Twenty-five Horses.

Twenty-five horses were burned to death yesterday at Paterson in a fire that destroyed the livery stable of G. B. Snyder, at No. 67 River street, in that city. While fighting the fire Captain Cook, of the chemical engine company, who is acting chief, fell through the roof and was seriously injured. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

Six of the horses that were in the place were gotten out, but they were so badly burned that they had to be killed. When Captain Cook feel into the burning building, several firemen, at the risk of their own lives, dragged him from the flames, but not before his uniform had been almost entirely burned off. At the General Hospital it was said he cannot recover.

The building was owned by the J. B. Vreeland estate. It places its loss at $10,000, partly covered by insurance, while the loss to stock, wagons, etc., is over $5,000.

Caught in Flywheel, May Die.

Charles Seissel, four years old, of Elizabeth, was badly hurt yesterday, being caught in a flywheel of a machine, on the top floor of his home which is used for pumping water. He was seriously injured. His recovery is doubtful. He is at the Alexian Hospital.

Big Catch of Weaks and Blues.

H. W. Leek and U. Grant Pierson, of this city, and W. C. Drake, of Morristown, spent yesterday at Hugenot, S. I., fishing and they captured sixty-seven weak and blue fish. Several times during the day they were obliged to return to shore for bait.

2D CLASS R.R. RATABLES

Decrease in Assessments Cause Big Falling Off in Revenue for the State.

THE VALUATIONS ARE HIGHER.

Tax Returns, However, Are Much Lower—State Board of Assessors Makes Its Report.

Showing an increase of $27,540,729 as compared with the valuation in 1905, the State Board of Assessors at Trenton has completed its assessments of the second class railroad property in New Jersey for 1906 and 1907, as provided by Chapter 6 of the laws of 1908. The total assessments on this property for 1907 are $74,063,057, while in 1905 the valuations were $45,522,328. The aggregate assessments for 1906 are $71,840,887, an increase over 1905 of $25,318,559. The assessments for 1907 present an increase over those of 1906 to $2,222,170.

The laws of 1908 directed that these assessments be made within three months from the date of the approval of the act, which was March 4 last. At the end of the three months, however, the valuations have not been finished and the authorities of Jersey City began mandamus proceedings to compel the State Board of Assessors to comply with the act. The board claimed that it was a physical impossibility to make all the assments on this property within the time specified. Upon the hearing on the mandamus proceedings the board showed to the satisfaction of the court that it had not been dilatory and the mandamus was refused. Following that the valuations have now been completed.

The situation leading up to this reassessment of the second class railroad property is as follows: The Legislature of 1906 passed an act removing from the jurisdiction of the State Board the assessment of second class railroad property and placed it in the hands of the local taxing authorities. Under that act the local authorities levied the assessments in their respective taxing districts for 1906 and 1907. The act of 1906 was attacked by the railroad companies and was declared unconstitutional, thus nullifying the local valuations for the two years. Then to meet the existing conditions the Legislature passed the act of 1908 directing the State Board to make the re-assessments for the two years.

The assessments for 1907 against the various railroad systems, compared with those made by the State Board in 1905, is shown by the following table:

R. R. Systems.	1907.	1905.
P. R. R..	$22,852,685	$13,276,145
C. R. R....	11,664,930	7,575,282
P. & R....	1,170,708	706,958
Erie	9,552,462	6,180,130
D., L. & W.	15,200,687	8,460,603
N. Y. S. & W.	1,235,639	816,171
Lehigh V..	5,624,949	4,659,178
Not classified	6,760,997	4,847,861
Totals ..	$74,063,057	$46,529,328

Upon these assessments the taxes to be levied against the companies for 1907 and 1906 are as follows:

R. R. Systems.	1907.	1906.
P. R. R.$	368,855.97	$ 485,040.85
C. R. R.	187,475.99	244,633.44
P. & R.	19,298.56	19,048.52
Erie ...	150,324.24	219,807.18
D., L. & W. ..	240,471.44	325,140.73
N. Y. S. & W.	20,874.96	21,449.35
Lehigh V. ..	90,799.41	126,433.80
Not classified .	102,685.60	141,576.73
Totals .	$1,180,786.17	$1,583,130.60

It will be noticed that, although the assessment of 1907 shows an increase of more than $2,000,000 over 1906, the tax levied for 1907 is $402,344.43 less than the tax of 1906. This is accounted by the operations of the Hillery Maximum Tax Rate law which has reduced the tax rate in most of the taxing districts in the State. The tax on second class railroad property is based on the local rate in each district.

The State Board of Assessors having completed these assessments, State Comptroller West will compute the taxes due each taxing district throughout the State, then after the money is paid into the State Treasury by the companies the sum due each municipality will be distributed to it.

Tuesday, August 24, has been fixed by the State Board as a time for the hearing of any appeals that may be filed by the railroad companies from these assessments. The board is now engaged in making up the valuations of the second class rail-

NEW JERSEY PRISON AGAIN OVERCROWDED

The State prison at Trenton is overcrowded again, despite the fact that no more federal prisoners are sent there, and those there last year have been removed to Atlanta, Ga. President Mitchell and Messrs Shurts and Connor, of the Prison Board of Inspectors, have been selected a committee to report to Governor Fort and ask for a new wing for the women prisoners. They also want additional cells for men.

The prison was built in 1835, with twenty-nine cells for women and 226 cells for men. In the years since, no additional cells have been provided for women, and there are now fifty-six women, occupying twenty-nine cells.

There are about 1,400 convicts in the prison, and the number is increasing rapidly.

"REPAIRED" FOR THIEF, "JIM" BABBIT NABS HIM

Scared off by Special Officer James Babbitt, colored, whose house on East Front street he tried to enter last night, Charles Lewis, also colored, who lives on "The Boulevard," was nabbed by Patrolman Payne on Babbitt's identification shortly afterward and this morning was sentenced to serve forty days in the county jail at his hearing before City Judge Runyon. Babbitt said that nothing was missing from his house. At his hearing, Lewis pleaded guilty to the charge brought against him, but said he only attempted to climb in the window to secure a pair of pants he once left there.

The genial, ebonized special cop and borough canine coraller talked freely today about the attempt at robbery. "I knew he'd try to brek in ma house," he said, "cause him and me we ain't been ver' good fren's recently. He used ter live upstairs in ma house, with some other cullud fellers, but, Lord, they carried on so, I had ter git 'em out er there. Claims he left's pants then, yer know.

"I waked up 'bout mid-night a-hearin' him climb up ter the winder, which is on the secon' story. I gen'lly has three or four repeaters layin' right close ter ma bed, so I turns over and persesses maself of one of them. Waked up ma wife, too, tellin' her to keep watch, in case they was another feller already in the house. I put on ma slippers and walks downstairs, scarin' him away, yer see. He hear me comin' and snaked out back, through the alley and 'cross the brook, goin' fer Somerset street. I figgered it'd be bes' not ter put in a pursuit, ye know, so I went up and put on ma pants, 'n then walks down Front street. I'd seen the feller by the light there in the alley, and soon foun' him sittin' in Warnock's doorway. I met Off'cer Payne, an' he got him.

'Oh, I knew Charley was a-comin' ter rob, me, 'cause I heard that him an' his gang was a-talkin' 'bout it yes'day afternoon . I was repaired to give 'im a warm reception, an' had a reg'lar arsenal in ma room. If he'd got inside, I'd opened up a few batteries on him, yer know, and there'd been lots of powder burned."

Lewis came to this city from Orange. Since leaving Babbitt's place at his request, he has been living in the West End.

Dr. D. J. Hill a History Maker.

Dr. David Jayne Hill, the American Ambassador to Germany, whom Plainfield proudly claims as one of her boys, gave a dinner at Berlin on Tuesday to the delegates to the International Historical Congress and a member of distinguished savants from foreign countries who are in attendance at the sessions. Dr. Hill toasted Dr. Koser, who is president of the Congress, and Dr. Koser in reply offered the health of Dr. Hill and spoke of him as a history maker as well as a history writer.

Gardner Had an Early Jag.

Patrolman Messler picked up George Gardner on Park avenue at 7 o'clock this morning in a helplessly intoxicated condition. Gardner had started his jag early, and was "stewed to the ears" when the officer took him to a cell. He will be given a chance to "thaw out" over night, and will come before Judge Runyon tomorrow.

Hope Chapel Excursion Next.

The Hope chapel excursion to Asbury Park, Saturday, promises to be one of the best of the season and a lagre crowd is expected. The bathing is now considered especially fine. Train leaves Grant Avenue 7:55 and Ulainfield at 8:15; returning leaves the shore at 7:55.

Champlain L. Riley and family, of Myrtle avenue who are spending the summer at their cottage on the mountain, are stopping for a time at Asbury Park.

PROSECUTOR POWERLESS

Goldenberg, Named by Gov. Fort, Whines That He Can't Enforce Law.

HE APPEALS TO THE PUBLIC.

Names the Joints But Alleges That He Is Unable to Perform His Sworn Duties—A Strange Condition of Affairs.

The spectacle of a public prosecutor appealing to the public for assistance in ridding a city in his district from the strangle-hold of gamblers, divekeepers and thugs is the latest development of the fight being made by the decent people of Atlantic City against a corrupt and criminal administration.

Weary of the machinations of men who should be leaders in the work of cleaning up the city, but who, instead, have protected the political henchmen in charge of the gambling industry here, District Attorney Clarence Goldenberg, personal appointee of Governor Fort, came out yesterday with a statement in which he declares that he is absolutely powerless to break up the present condition under which gambling money is being used to further the interests of the political leaders, who are taking a desperate chance to hold their power without the aid of an aroused public opinion.

He appeals without reserve to the big newspapers of nearby cities to assist in the turning of public opinion toward a desire for the cleanup, and gives a list of gambling places ranging from the higest class faro and roulette games to the low negro dives, which are the real basis of the present mix-up involving crime and politics.

Appeals to the Public.

Probably no similar spectacle of a real effort to carry out the law has ever been seen in this country. Other officials have called on forces from sheriff's deputies and policemen to militia to compass results in restoration of law and order, but Goldenberg has taken a bold step in allowing the public into his confidence that sets a pace for other men in his position caught in the grip of political "powers" who balk their efforts to be honest in carrying out their duties.

"I am giving out the locations of every gambling house in Atlantic City with the names of their managers and those of their backers," declares Prosecutor Goldenberg last night.

Balked at Every Point.

"I have tried every way which occurred to me to carry out the law. I have been balked in every attempt either by men who held the power over the police department of the city, or men who appear able to save the gamblers from conviction and punishment in the county courts.

"The entire situation rests on the desire of the Stoy administration to procure money enough from the gamblers and dive keepers to finance their coming campaign, and is to the negro dive keepers that they are looking for their strongest support.

"As a consequence our troubles are mainly with the negro gambling houses, whose arrogant managers and backers appear sure that they are protected by a power higher than either this office or that of the police.

"Let me quote instances. The really swell gambling place of the city for the negro population is at 45 Surf place and run by a firm of Baltimore negroes—by name of Smith, Dykes & Offaner. This place was raided a year ago by a squad of police under Chief Woodruff. The runners were taken into court, convicted and fined $250 each.

Defied Courts; Ran Games.

"Sentence was accompanied by a warning from Judge Higbee that if they came up again on similar charges they would be sent to Trenton for terms in State's prison. That place was open that night as soon as the principals had paid their fines and returned from May's Landing.

"Police raided the establishment kept by Henry Tucker and William Truerart at 242 North Pennsylvania avenue, Atlantic City. These men were held under bail, but no bill was found against them by the grand jury. The night the grand jury adjourned the place was opened, and has been running full blast ever since.

"Here is the list of other places running in Atlantic City against which we have full and complete evidence.

"The Illinois Club, at 18 South Illinois avenue, Atlantic City. This is probably at present the most aristocratic and most largely patronized 'game' in the resort. Both men and women are welcome to play roulette, poker, faro and even bridge.

"Next in importance is the Lochiel, at 15 South Delaware avenue. This

MARTINE FOR SHERIFF, "DON'T IT BEAT ALL"

Information from a reliable source bears out the rumor that James E. Martine, who recently declared that he would not run again for public office, will b the shrievalty candidate of the Union county Democrats at the coming election. It is well known that such an official would be distasteful to him, but "Jim" is willing to sacrifice himself in the interest of the party, so the story goes. The Democratic leaders in Elizabeth claim that they have gotten the Plainfielder's consent to allow his name to be used in connection with this nomination. They say that it will greatly strengthen their county ticket

Mr. Martine left at 5 o'clock this morning for Lake Grinnell, where he promises to make a speech for Bryan and Kern tonight. He has abandoned his plans for a vacation and will devote the next few months in stumping the State in behalf of Mr. Bryan's candidacy for President.

Captain Robert Kirkland, of Elizabeth, will be the Republican nominee for sheriff.

MR. BRYAN TO SPEAK AT NEWARK, AUG. 25

At a meeting of the James A. Bray Association in Newark last night it was announced that William Jennings Bryan, Democratic candidate for President, would attend the picnic of the association, to be held in Kurz's Colosseum on August 25. A letter was read from Mr. Bryan, in which he promised to be present and deliver an address.

The meeting was held at the association's headquarters, 285 Springfield avenue, Newark, and was attended by 150 good Democrats. When Mr. Bryan's letter was read there was great enthusiasm. It was also announced that Frank S. Katzenbach and "Farmer Orator" Martine would attend the picnic.

Freeholder Frederick Steck was appointed floor manager for the occasion and Mayor Haussling was appointed chairman of the reception committee. Another meeting will be held on Wednesday of next week, August 19, when every candidate of the Democratic party for city office will be heard.

GREENBROOK ROAD MAY BE MACADAMIZED SOON

The property owners on Greenbrook road interested in the proposition to widen and macadamize that thoroughfare the distance of a mile and quarter, from Ed. Gavin's corner to Debele's farm, have hopes that their efforts will be rewarded this fall and that the Somerset County Board of Freeholders will agree to make the improvement.

The plan is to widen the street seventy-two feet, with a sixteen foot macadam and turf on either side, similar to the West End avenue boulevard in the borough. It would afford an outlet for the people of the borough to and from Dunellen and give outsiders a direct thoroughfare through the borough to points beyond over a good road.

When Freeholder Andrew Lutkins was asked concerning the improvement he expressed himself in favor of it and said that he believed that a sufficient number of the board would vote with him to put the road in first-class condition. If the county authorities decide to make the improvement the property owners along the line will dedicate enough land to make the road the full seventy-two feet wide.

Iron Awning Being Removed.

Wokmen are engaged today in removing the iron awning in front of the Taylor building at Park and North avenues, presumably for the purpose of giving more light for the stores on the ground floor. This awning was erected many years ago at considerable expense, and it was at first believed that its removal was due to an order from he street department which has decreed that all street obstructions outside of the building line. City Engineer Gavett said today that his department has nothing to do with the work, neither has it ordered its removal.

District Court Session August 20.

The regular sessions of the district court will be resumed on Thursday, August 20, at which time Judge William Newcorn will return from his vacation; Clerk Horace G. Adams has a list of about twenty-five cases to be disposed of on that day, and it is quite likely that some of them will go over for a week.

ALBERT HEDDEN IS DYING

Physicians Abandon Hope of Saving Life of One of Plainfield's Best Known Men.

VETERAN IN LIVERY BUSINESS.

Conducted Big Stable Here For 33 Years and Has Made a Fortunte—Wife and Children Awaiting the End.

Albert Hedden, of West Fifth street, who for thirty-three years has been engaged in the livery business in this city, and is one of Plainfield's best known citizens, is dying at his home in West Fifth street. The physicians attending him have given up all hope for his recovery and the end is said to be only a matter of a day or so.

Mr. Hedden was taken seriously ill on Monday, although he had been complaining for the past month. Physicians were summoned and they found a growth in the intestines which caused a stoppage, preventing digestion of food. It was at first thought that an operation would bring about recovery, but when the nature of the growth was discovered, it was decided that an operation would prove fatal and it was not performed.

Albert Hedden was born in this city seventy-two years ago and has always lived here. When a young man he was employed by John Roselle at his well-known stable at Park avenue and Second street, and later Mr. Roselle made him manager of the livery. Later when Mr. Roselle retired Mr. Hedden decided to engage in business for himself and he was given a start by James Vosseller, who was prominent in political circles here and for several years was county clerk. Mr. Hedden started business with one horse and carriage on Sycamore street, where Dennis O'Brien's barn is now located. Then he moved to East Front street, where the Woodhull & Martin building stands, and from there to where H. B. MacDonald's stables are located on East Second street. All this time his business increased and he owned a great many horses and carriages.

His present quarters being too small he decided to build and purchasing the land on East Fourth street, opposite the railroad park, he erected his present stables, where he has been doing business for twenty years. Mr. Hedden was always considered an exceptional judge of a horse and during his long career he has owned some of the best horses in Plainfield.

Although of a quiet and retiring disposition, Mr. Hedden has a host of friends here, including a great many of the older residents. For a number of years his son, Frank Hedden, has been associated with him in the livery business, and during his father's illness has been in charge of the stables.

Calvary Baptist Outing.

Several special trolley cars were engaged today to take the members of the Calvary Baptist church and Sunday-school on their annual outing to South Beach. The affair was arranged by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Baily, and a large number of friends accompanied the members on the day's outing. The start was made about 8:30 o'clock this morning, the trip being to Elizabethport, where a transfer will be made across to Staten Island by boat and thence to South Beach. The excursionists are expected to reach home early this evening.

Plan to Clean Hope Chapel.

The Men's Club of Hope chapel held a special meeting Tuesday night to discuss the question of having the church and chapel cleaned by the Electric Suction Sweeper Company, through the local agents, Messrs Robinson, Morton & Williams. President Wallace Morton appointed a committee of three, James Penney, Thomas Hendry and Henry Vogel, to confer with the executive committee of the Ladies' Aid Society and report back at once, so that the work may be started on Monday.

Mrs. Hyde's Birthday Dinner.

Mrs. Charles Hyde, of East Front street, gave an informal birthday dinner at her home on Tuesday, among the guests being her sons, Francis De Lacy Hyde, Louis Kepler Hyde, Charles Livingston Hyde and her son-in-law, State Senator Everett Colby. Covers were laid for about a dozen guests. There was an informal exchange of gifts and the affair was a very pleasant one in which Mrs. Hyde received the best wishes of all for many returns of the day.

LOCAL ELKS TO HOLD ANNUAL OUTING SOON

At a meeting of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., last night, there was an informal discussion of the proposed outing of the Elks. Owing to the fact that Herbert Buxton has been detained in the west by the serious illness of his father, he was obliged to resign from the committee, and George O. Stevens was named to take his place. Ellsworth C. Westcott is the chairman.

The members have not yet decided whether they will give a clambake, shore dinner or an outing of some other nature. It is expected that the committee will get together within a short time and agree on definite plans. Some favor the clambake, while others would like to have a shore dinner and the committee will be guided largely by the sentiment of the lodge.

WANT W. L. SMALLEY, JR., TO RUN FOR COUNCIL

William L. Smalley, Jr., of Greenbrook road, is being urged by North Plainfield Republicans in the First district to accept a nomination for Council. He has not given his decision as yet but there is excellent reason to gelieve that he will make the running if Alexander Milne, who is also mentioned for the place, decides not to file a petition. Mr. Smalley is a brother of former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, the Republican leader in North Plainfield, and has a host of political friends in the borough.

"I am not in politics," said W. L. Smalley, Jr., when asked today about his candidacy, "but I believe that it is a man's duty to serve his fellow-taxpayers when called upon to do so. I have no inclination to hold public office but should my friends insist upon my running, I am frank enough to admit that I will comply with their wishes. There must be no strings to my nomination and if chosen by the voters I will serve them to the best of my ability."

The terms of Clifford W McGee, of the First district, and Edward P. T. Smith, of the Second district, expire this fall. Mr. McGee says that he will not take another term, and Mr. Smith is undecided. Both have rendered valuable service during their terms of office. No one among the Republicans in the Second district has announced himself as a candidate to succeed Mr. Smith.

WANT TO SUBSTITUTE ARC LIGHTS FOR INCANDESCENTS.

Councilman Francis L. Montgomery, who is chairman of the light committee, is still agitating the question of installing a number of arc lights in the business and thickly populated sections of the city. The Board of Trade is urging the improvement and the Plainfield Merchants' Association also favors the plan. The idea is to establish fifty arc lamps, it being the opinion that for every two installed five incandescent lights could be abolished. This would mean a saving of $15 on every incandescent. The Public Service Corporation will provide the arc lights for $85 a year for each lamp.

It is Mr. Montgomery's plan to place the arc lights on Front street, between Richmond street and Grant avenue, on Watchung, Park avenues and Fourth street, where the travel is the heaviest. He does not believe that it will be possible to hold a meeting of the committee this week, but he hopes to arrange for one before the September meeting of the Council so that if favorable action is taken the lights can be installed by October 1 at the latest.

Summoned to Atlantic City.

Dr. G. W. Endicott, of Park avenue, was called to Atlantic City, last night, to see his patient whom he accompanied home from Europe recently. The operation performed by the doctor while abroad was successful, but since her return the young woman has suffered from occosional hemorrhages of the nose which have prevented as rapid a recovery as hoped for. The patient's home is in Atlantic City and Dr. Endicott has been the family physician for several years. It was for this reason that he was summoned to Europe to consult with the physician in charge there and accompany the woman to her home.

Plainfielders at Elks' Clambake.

District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler Alexander Findlay, accompanied by Ellsworth C. Westcott and George O. Stevens, of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., were guests of the Staten Island Lodge of Elks at a clambake held yesterday afternoon at the lower end of Staten Island. The affair was one of the largest and most successful ever given by the Staten Island Elks.

FISK FOR ANOTHER TERM

Mayor Consents to Accept Renomination and His Petition is Being Circulated.

THE COUNCILMANIC SITUATION.

Present Freeholders File Papers—Townsend Sure For Tax Collector—The Local Republican Outlook.

Charles Joel Fisk will be a candidate to succeed himself in the mayoralty office at the coming election. This fact became known this morning when plans were made by a few of his friends to circulate the petition as required under the new primary laws. Mr. Fisk has been absent from the city for some time on affairs of State, but the petition will be circulated with his knowledge and consent. As yet there is no candidate in the field against him but there are well defined rumors that before the time limit for filing the necessary papers with City Clerk MacMurray, September 12, there may be another after the same honor.

It is reliably reported that the local leaders when they learned of Mr. Fisk's decision, gave their hearty consent to the plan, but it is said, on the other hand, that there is a division of opinion among the Republican voters and that it is not confined to the New Idea camp. No one among the New Idea leaders, who would say what action would be taken, could be found. There have been several informal conferences in the Colbyite camp but as yet no definite action has been taken either as regards the mayoralty or the councilmanic situation.

The terms of four members of the Common Council expire and their successors will have to be chosen at the election. President Ralph I. Tolles, of the First ward; Henry D. Hibbard, of the Second; Duncan W. Taylor, of the Third, and Frank W. Randolph, of the Fourth, finish their terms of office.

There is hardily any question that Mr. Tolles will consent to serve still another term, and it would be next to impossible to defeat him for the nomination even should the Colbyites make their most heroic efforts. As for Mr. Hibbard, nothing definite can be learned at this time as he is down East on his vacation and has not said whether he wants a third term. It is well known that Mr. Hibbard's services have not been entirely satisfactory to the party and undoubtedly the organization will throw its strength to another man for his place. It is also equally uncertain whether the New Idea men will urge Mr. Hibbard to continue in office. Mr. Taylor, who is filling the unexpired term of William S. Tyler, will undoubtedly be nominated for a full term. In the Fourth ward, there is a division of opinion concerning Mr. Randolph but he will be the unanimous choice of the regulars and his nomination and election seemed assured.

No nomination papers have been filed by prospective candidates for the Common Council, but as for the two local freeholders, Samuel P. T. Wilbur and J. Hervey Doane, both have complied with the primary law, having filed their petitions with County Clerk James C. Calvert at Elizabeth.

William R. Townsend, who is filling the unexpired term of John W. Murray, Jr., who resigned to go into business, is certain to be nominated by the Republicans for tax collector. The New Idea men is as heartily for him as is the organization.

If Mr. Fisk is nominated for mayor again, it is supposed that the Democrats will endorse him as they did two years ago. Their last attempt to win the mayoralty was a dismal failure and the disaster is not likely to be repeated until a more formidable candidate can be found. They will, however, follow the custom of naming men for the Common Council and for Tax Collector.

Hurt Boarding Moving Train.

Missing the step as he sought to climb aboard the 5:53 train to New York yesterday afternoon, Carman Comosky, of North avenue, near Leland avenue, was heavily thrown from the moving train at the North Avenue station, escaping the wheels by but a few inches. Patrolman Dobson and Dr. Fritts, who happened to be on the station platform, ran to the man's assistance, but an examination by the physician showed that his injuries were not serious. Comosky's head was gashed, his left hand cut and his body and face bruised, but there were no broken bones. He was able to go to his home.

One More Week of the ANNIVERSARY SALE.

One more week of the bargains that have created more talk and made us more new friends than our brightest anticipation during all the days of preparation for the event. It was our aim to impress you—at this time particularly—with the advantages in shopping here. A store that is not burdened with the additional expenses of several thousand dollars yearly to the trading stamp "house," nor has the great portion of its capital tied up on its books, can and does offer the most for your money. We have demonstrated this with especial force the past three weeks of our First Anniversary Sale, and are making a strong effort this last week of the sale to have you join the crowds that are praising the Tepper slogan—"no trading stamps nor favors, but more for your money."

turbance on the part of hot-headed spectators.

The Clinton Avenues will meet Rahway at the latter place Saturday and the contest will be an exciting one. As this will be the first game this season between these teams, both are exceedingly anxious to win it.

The contest of local interest Saturday at Crescent Oval will be between the Y. M. C. A. and New York Harlem Branch Y. M. C. A. teams. The New York boys are playing fast ball and promise to give the locals a hard rub.

New York may get First Baseman Swaccina. Pittsburg asked wavers on him because Clarke says he is a grandstand player.

Shannon and Thomas have strengthened the Pittsburg outfield. Clarke says you can't win pennants with a team of youngsters.

Because Jake Weimer has failed to report, John McGraw declares he will go to court to make Cincinnati turn over Spade to him.

John T. Brush has decided to enlarge his grandstand. Mr. Brush must expect a world's championship series on the Polo grounds.

The Boston Americans are going much better of late. They have a chance of finishing in the first division if they keep up their improvement.

Jake Weimer has read himself out of organized baseball. He pitched for a Chicago league team last Sunday and will find it hard to get reinstated.

Manager Murray made no mistake when he let McCormick go. About the ony thing McCormick has done in New York was to misjudge liners.

The Cubs are a lively lot, and are certain to be in the race for the pennant until the finish. With nearly all of the cripples back, it is a new team.

Doescher, the former Tri-State Leaguer, who was fined three days' pay for leaving the Reds to visit his home in New York, has committed the same offense, and Ganzel will punish him further.

Every day Harvard Eddie Grant is further verifying Manager Murray's statement that he is the fastest man in the National League getting down to first base.

It is reported that Karger, the Cardinals' left hander, is so disgruntled because Manager McCloskey won't trade him, that he has sent the St. Louis management notice that he will not stay with the team any longer than ten days.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Open Sunday Afternoon.

Councilman William Riddle, of Atlantic City, has introduced in the municipal body of that place an ordinance, which, according to a reporter of the Atlantic City Press, would "legalize" amusements after 1 p. m. on the Sabbath day. Dancing, skating, bowling, baseball, loop-the-loop, knock-the-baby-down, and all forms of amusement or games will be permissive on Sabbath afternoon if the proposed ordinance becomes a law. By its terms the Boardwalk theatres will be able to rival Broadway playhouses by giving a regular matinee on Sunday, following with a Sunday evening performance no different from that on weekdays. The exact text of the ordinance is as follows:

"Be it ordained by the City Council of Atlantic City that no dancing, playing nine-pins, ten-pins, bowls, or any flip-flop, loop-loop, old mill, shooting gallery, weighing scales, knock-down-the-baby games, or any other playing sports, pastime diversions, shall be done or performed by any person or persons within the limits of Atlantic City between the hours of 12 o'clock midnight of any Saturday and 1 o'clock in the afternoon of the Christian Sabbath."

The point of view of the councilman is very well set forth in the following interview in the Press:

"Let the church folk have the day to themselves up until 1 o'clock. After 1 o'clock, however, and for the balance of the Sabbath, let Young America have some freedom, some way. To the average workingman Sunday is the only holiday, a day of recreation. If amusements are prohibited on this day, he gets none. But the church-going man can usually go to the theatre any night or day in the week, and his son can play ball at any time."

Atlantic City would not dare pass such an ordinance as that, of course, since it would be not only a direct slap in the face for the laws of the State, but wholly illegal. No town, city, or any other political subdivision of the State of New Jersey can legalize by the passage of an ordinance that has been made illegal by State law. Almost any grammar school boy know that. But State law is at such a low ebb in Atlantic City that it is not strange, after all, to find a councilman apparently oblivious of the fact that there is such a thing in existence. The attitude is the perfectly natural outcome of persistent and flagrant violation of the public statutes.—Elizabeth Journal.

MRS. "WILLIE" COLLIER PLACED UNDER ARREST.

Mrs. Louise Allan Collier, wife of William Collier, the actor, was arrested at the Pennsylvania Railroad station in Jersey City yesterday afternoon on the arrival of an express train from Atlantic City. Chief of Police Woodruff, of the seaside resort, had wired to Chief Monahan, of Jersey City, that he held a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Collier for failure to pay her board bill at the Grand Atlantic Hotel. He asked that she be arrested and held for the Atlantic City authorities. The amount claimed to be due to the hotel is $42.

Mrs. Collier, bedecked with diamonds, was attended by a colored maid. She carried two dogs, Ping and Pong. She expressed indigation at her arrest, denied that she had left Atlantic City owing a board bill, and declared she would make it hot for some one. Thomas Fallon, a Jersey City broker, went on her bond for $500 for her appearance in the Jersey City police court today, and Mrs. Collier resumed her journey to Manhattan.

Chief Woodruff, when notified of Mrs. Collier's arrest, said he would send a man with the warrant to take her back to Atlantic City. The complainant is Charlese E. Coxe, proprietor of the hotel.

WORK OF REARRANGING THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICES BEGUN.

Workmen began operations yesterday in Governor Fort's private offices at the State house in Trenton which are to be thoroughly renovated before his return from the "summer capitol" at Sea Girt.

Alterations will be effected also in the governmental reception room, the office of the private secretary and the office of the executive clerk and when they are through all four apartments will have been completely transformed. Scaffolding has already been erected for the redecoration of the walls and ceilings.

Besides the work on the walls, parquet floors of an artistic pattern will be laid, handsome rugs will be laid in place of the old carpets and new furniture will be installed throughout.

STATE IS NOW SEEKING HEIRS OF NATHAN BROWN.

The adjutant general's office of the New Jersey National Guard is seeking information that will lead to the location of some of the heirs of the late Nathan Brown, who died in Trenton some years ago.

Brown was a veteran of the Civil War, and was one of the 21 Jerseymen who were entitled to the service medals issued by the State in recognition of patriotic services to the government. He died before the medals were distributed, but his heirs are entitled to one intended for him if they will apply to the adjutant general and prove their relationship.

In the latter years of his life Brown lived in Trenton, N. J. Aaron Wilkes Post, G. A. R., will be asked to assist in locating some of the dead veteran's relatives.

WANT 6,000 STEEL CARS.

Harriman Lines Give Notice to Equipment Companies.

New York, Aug. 13.—The Harriman roads are in the market for 6,000 steel cars. No order has been placed, but the car equipment companies have been notified that this amount represents the total of an early purchase by the Harriman lines, and for more than half of the cars there have been filed specifications on which the equipment companies may base their bids. Competition between the companies is said to be keen, for the order, if filled, will be altogether the largest since the panic.

For just what Harriman lines the cars are wanted has not been made known.

The estimated cost of the 6,000 steel cars ranges all the way from $6,000,000 to $7,000,000. It is expected that the lower figure will prove nearer correct for the reason that the competition between the car equipment companies may result in a cut price.

Newark Fire Captain Dead.

Nicholas E. Sooy, captain of Engine Company 15, died suddenly yesterday at his home, No. 116 Belleville avenue, Newark. He was attacked with acute indigestion at the company headquarters a week ago, and had to be taken to his home. Captain Sooy was born at Egg Harbor fifty-eight years ago, and joined the Newark Fire Department thirty-four years ago. Ten years ago he was made a captain. He leaves a wife and five children.

Stop Salome Dance.

Acting Mayor T. J. Winkler, of Asbury Park, in the absence of Mayor T. Frank Appleby, yesterday afternoon ordered the police to stop the further production of the Salome dance in Asbury Park at the request of the Beach Commission.

PROHIBITION A FAILURE?

Beer and Whiskey Are Being Sold in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 13.—That prohibition is a failure in Atlanta was practically admitted yesterday by Superintendent Richards, of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League.

"Beer is being sold here right and left," said Mr. Richards, "and I know it. One fellow has the nerve to put up a sign: 'The beer that made Milwaukee famous.' You can get any brand you want. You can get whiskey, too, for what does it mean when twenty-seven carloads of whiskey and beer have been shipped here?"

The "wet" conditions that exist in Atlanta exist also in Savannah and other Georgia cites. Superintendent Richards says the Anti-Saloon League will begin a State-wide crusade to enforce the law.

Old Red Bank Resident Dead.

Sheppard Kollack died yesterday at Red Bank at the age of ninety-five years. His grandfather was a captain in Washington's army. Mr. Kollack went to Red Bank from Elizabeth when that place was a small hamlet, and had lived there ever since. He had been a Free Mason for fifty-eight years. He was the father of thirteen children, nine of whom are living.

Midsummer Posies.

The midsummer hats have taken on new kids of flowers. The hothouse has been succeeded by the field.

To be in fashion one must now use blossoms, jasmine and quantities of ferns.

In truth, one hat that was retrimmed for a two weeks' vacation and which proved very fetching, was made of natural color straw and the crown and part of the brim were heaped with layers of green ferns all spreading downward.

At the brim, underneath, was a one-inch strip of green taffeta Four hatpins of imitation jade were used.

The hat was worn with a natural color coarse linen coat suit which had green linen collar and cuffs.

Keyport Water Carnival.

There is every prospect that the water carnival to be held at Keyport on Monday will be bigger and better than any previous one. The evening program will consist of a marine parade of hundreds of boats of every description, from large schooners and steamers to sailing skiffs, all decorated and illuminated. There will be music and a grand display of fireworks. A novel feature for the afternoon will be a baby parade. Already entries for over three hundred children have been sent in. Other features of the day will be a parade of the firemen, business men's floats, farmers' decorated wagons, automobiles, etc.

Constable Held as Gambler.

Constable Alexander McLeod, of Acquackenock Township, who is alleged to have been caught in the act of paying off bets when a poolroom at Delawanna was raided on Monday afternoon, was arrested yesterday and arraigned before Justice John Keys at Paterson. The complaint against McLeod reads, "For keeping a resort or place for persons to resort and practise betting on the event of races." McLeod pleaded not guilty and furnished $500 bail.

Aged Elizabeth Woman Dead.

Mrs. Martha Banke Crane Kellogg, widow of Elijah Kellogg, died at her home, No. 559 Newark avenue, Elizabeth, Tuesday afternoon, in her ninety-eighth year. She was the granddaughter of Judge David D. Crane, and was of the sixth generation in direct descent of Jasper Crane, one of the founders of the city of Newark. She was one of the oldest residents of Elizabeth.

Disrobing the Chicken.

One evening on the farm a little slum child was enjoying his first glimpse of pastoral life. On a little stool he sat, under a tree, bent with its load of ripe peaches, besides the cook, who was plucking a chicken. He watched that plucking operation gravely for some time. Then he said, "Do ye take off their clothes every night, loidy?"—Chicago News.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The residents on Park avenue and Front street still consider the few dollars spent for oiling the two streets was a good investment. The coat, which was put on nearly two months ago, still continues to keep the dust down.

The lawn fete held last night by the members of St. Mary's parish, Stony Hill, was well attended and was one of the most successful events the parish has yet held.

George Frentz, who has been out of the game for several weeks, will be back at second base in the game with the West Ends at Somerville, Saturday afternoon.

Miss Minnie Hosinger is spending her two weeks' vacation with Miss Caroline Lent, at the latter's home at Palmyra, N. Y.

John Reick and Thomas Sellers spent yesterday at Amboy angling for week fish. The day's sport yielded a fair catch.

Mrs. George H. Johnston and children, of Westfield avenue, are spending August at Ocean Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walpole, of Front street, have been entertaining relatives from Newark.

Mrs. Edward Devine, of Front street, is visiting out of town friends.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Local baseball fans are showing lots of interest in the Dunellen-New Market series of game, begun last week. The village nine will play the visitors on the New Market diamond this week and have been holding practise so as to be able to even up the series from the defeat at the hands of the Dunellenites last week.

The real estate and property upon which taxes still remain unpaid will be disposed of at a public sale tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. There are about a dozen properties to be disposed of. The sale will be held at the borough building, and the purchasers will assume the taxes for 1907 and interest and costs of sale.

The work of scraping and painting the fire bell tower has now been completed and the structure is now in first-class condition again. Frank R. Smalley did the work.

Mrs. William Wooden spent yesterday at Coney Island.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Catholic church will hold its annual fair and festival on Frank Faulks' grounds on Saturday. Dancing will be one of the features of the evening.

The impersonators Marie and Charles J. Smith will entertain in Washington hall during the last week in August.

Mrs. Oscar Thorne has returned from a visit with her brother-in-law, Eugene Winship, of Harlem.

William and Katherine Beaver, of Lewistown, Pa., are staying with their uncle, W. J. Ledden.

Mrs. W. Cole, of South River, is staying with her daughter, Mrs. William Norman.

Miss Marge Kopp, of Princeton, is visiting Mrs. William Smalley, of Sunnylawn.

Ralph Smalley is at Atlantic Highlands visiting Robert Van Sickle at "Camp Robert."

Alexander Flynn, of Grove street, an insurance agent, who has been critically ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, was reported today as not being so well.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Case and children, of Duer street, have returned from Lebanon, Hunterdon county, where they have been spending their summer vacation.

Francis DeLacy Hyde, who is spending the summer in the Adirondacks, and who returned to Plainfield for a few days, has gone back to the mountains, where he and his family will remain until fall.

Mrs. William Ralston Sweeney, of Trenton, accompanied by Joseph M. Sweeney, visited the latter's mother, Mrs. Margaret Sweeney, of Liberty street, yesterday. After spending the day here the party returned to Trenton, accompanied by Mrs. Sweeney, who will visit her son, William Ralston Sweeney for the next two weeks.

Street Work Delayed a Month.

The work of spreading "Asphaltoilene," on North avenue, as planned and ordered by the Councilmanic street department, has now been delayed about a month and when City Engineer Gavett was questioned about the matter today he said that he could not understand what caused it. The material has been in Plainfield about ten days and early in the week Mr. Gavett received word from the company that its force of men would be here yesterday to do the work. They had not arrived today, but Mr. Gavett is looking for the men any time and as soon as they get here the improvement will be started.

MRS. G. F. FISHER GIVES $20 TO BABY CAMP FUND

Mrs. George F. Fisher, of Park avenue, who is spending the summer at East Quogue, L. I., sent a handsome contribution today towards the funds being raised by The Daily Press for local charities. Enclosing her check for twenty dollars, Mrs. Fisher requested that the amount be divided equally between the Baby Camp on the mountain conducted by the City Union of King's Daughters, and the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, which affords outings for the poor of New York's "East Side."

"One Interested" has also sent a contribution, making a donation of one dollar to the Baby Camp fund with the statement, "I wish it were much more." One dollar is a welcome contribution and if others would follow the example of "One Interested" the fund would be swelled to a flattering amount.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Committees of the Republican and Democratic organizations in Summit are hunting candidates for the various local offices in that place to be filled at the November election. It is said that in the First ward neither party has as yet been able to hit upon any one to make the run for the office of councilman to succeed M. Debevoise. Dr. J. Edward Rowe, city clerk, of Summit, will have the endorsement of the Republican Club in his candidacy to succeed himself, while it is expected Tax Collector Stephen R. Mullen will again be the Republican nominee for the office he now holds. In the Second ward an effort is being made to induce Walter C. Kimball to take the Republican nomination for councilman. Kimball was defeated by Frank Crane, Democrat, last year. So far, it is understood, the Domecrats have not found a councilmanic candidate in the Second ward. The Republicans will need to elect but one councilman to retain control of the local government. The council now stands four Republicans and three Democrats.

Sixty-four of the eighty-one ballots cast at Summit, Tuesday, on the proposition to retain or reject the voting machine in the first election district of the First ward were for the rejection of the device. There were sixteen votes for the retention of the machine and one ballot rejected. Little interest was manifested, Republicans and Democrats alike being equally opposed to the machine, but the voting was left to those residing near the city hall, where the election was held. Not more than a half dozen of the large numbers of commuters took the trouble to vote. The machine used in the First district was the only one placed in that city.

By a vote of 51 to 6 the Fourth ward of Hackensack, Tuesday, rejected the voting machine. The vote was very light. The total registration of the district is 588. This was the last of six wards there to throw out the machines.

Both districts in Newton have decided by vote to return to the paper ballot system of voting. At the election Tuesday the majorities were against the machines.

The Morristown Republican Club has decided upon a banner-raising, to be held at headquarters in Washington street, Morristown, Tuesday night. Former Governor E. C. Stokes has been asked to make an address, and State Senator Edmund W. Wakelee, of Bergen county, has also been invited to participate.

The Bergen County Republican Executive Committee held an important meeting at Hackensack last night, at which the candidates for Assembly and Congress appeared and gave their views. Three candidates announced their intention of seeking the nomination for each office. For Assembly they were Harry Ward, of Bloster; Joseph H. Scharf, of Hasbrouck Heights, and Edward F. Goodall, of Hackensack. The candidates for Congress are Charles Burrows and William H. Mackay, of Rutherford, and Major S. Wood McClade. A fight will be made to hold the convention in Bergen county, which goes Republican each year by a large majority.

First Assistant Prosecutor Thomas L. Raymond, of Newark, announced yesterday afternoon that he proposed to form a special committee to handle his campaign for the Republican nomination for the Senatorship. "I expect to have a bureau and a committee of my own," he said. "I believe my candidacy should be independent of the county committee. The county organization will have nothing to do with my candidacy. Should I be the nominee for Senator, and I feel that I will, my campaign for election will be conducted under the auspices of the party organization. Before the primaries, I will conduct my canvass with headquarters at my office in the Lawyers' building in Market street. As I have said, a committee of my friends will be formed to help me out."

Morris county has plenty of available material for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Fifth district. Among the number are Thomas J. Hillery, James H. McGraw and John H. Capstick.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The choir of the First Baptist church which is now enjoying a vacation, will return to the regular services early in September.

W. D. Williams will conduct the meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission tonight at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. rooms. There will be special music.

The Sunday-school of the Reformed church, East Millstone, held its annual picnic at Chimney Rock, yesterday. The trip to and from the Rock was made in stages and carriages.

Rev. Franklin Matthews, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who has been called to the pastorate of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, is a graduate of Peddie Institute, where he received his early education.

The meeting of the Christian and Missionary Alliance at 100 Madison avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, will be addressed by Kiel Garrison and Miss Hyeth, both of whom expect to go to the mission field of India soon. They will also address the meeting of the Reccue Mission in the evening.

Rev. Albertus T. Brook, pastor of the Reformed church, Newburg, N. Y., and a brother of Rev. John Y. Brook, of Asbury Park, who preached in Trinity Reformed church a few weeks ago, has received a call to the pastorate of the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, Newark, and e has already given assurance that he will accept. He will probably begin his new duties October 1. He completes five years as pastor of the Newburg church the first Sunday in October. The new incumbent will be the third pastor of the church has had in its history of forty years, and he will succeed Rev. Dr. Daniel H. Martin, now of Glens Falls, N. Y.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"The Straight Road," which is to be the attraction for the New Plainfield theatre for Saturday, matinee and night, is the most typical true picture of American life that has been written by any dramatist. In accomplishing such an achievement Clyde Fitch has smashed the conventionalities that have kept our playwriters from becoming realistic. The way is now opened for stage stories which will make us realize sociological conditions in our great cities that need more attention than anemic phases of a class tainted with money evils. This study goes down into the heart of the masses and preaches the battle of saving a soul lost in its original contact with existence.

When, next Monday night, in the New Plainfield theatre, Douglas Fairbanks appears in Rupert Hughes' new play called "All For a Girl," our playgoers will see the one man on the English-speaking stage of the day who has been picked by managers and critics alike as the best polite comedian in the country today. Mr. Fairbanks will be seen under the management of William A. Brady and Joseph R. Grismer, who have been his managers in a long series of plays, beginning with "The Pit," and including "Fantana," "Abaigail," "Frenzied Finance," "As Ye Sow," "Clothes," and "The Man of the Hour."

Local theatregoers will be interested in the announcement of the appearance at the New Plainfield theatre on Tuesday night, Aug. 18, of the favorite emotional drama, "East Lynne," the greatest of all emotional plays. The company has been selected with discrimination and in the matter of scenic equipment and accessories the presentation of "East Lynne" will measure up to a high standard.

Cohan and Harris will present a big organization in George M. Cohan's newest musical play, "Fifty Miles from Boston," at the New Plainfield theatre, Thursday night, August 20. The company is said to include more genuine artists than are usually assembled in one aggregation, namely: Suzanne Leonard Westford, Hazel Lowry, Russel Pincus, Joseph M. Sparks, Wilmer Bentley, Kathryn Perry, Charles Willard, Walter P. Richardson, Alf Helton, Ella Sothern and Thomas Emory, together with a superb singing chorus of more than fifty people.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Candidacy of Ackerman.

Senator Ackerman will be a candidate for re-election, and doubtlessly he will succeed himself, in the event of the Democrats naming any other than the redoubtable James E. Martine who, running for Congress two years ago, secured a plurality in Union against Representative Charles N. Fowler. Martine is, we believe, the only available Democratic candidate who could defeat Ackerman; if Martine declines the nomination, the present Senator will have no serious trouble at the polls.—Elizabeth Times, Democratic.

A Tale of Two Cities.

It was interesting to learn through the newspapers yesterday morning that the saloons were wider open than ever before in Atlantic City last Sunday, while they were closed tighter than ever before in the city of Elizabeth. In Elizabeth the law was obeyed. In Atlantic City the law was defied. The chief of police of Elizabeth a few weeks ago declared that it was impossible for him to enforce the Bishops' law, but after the probing committee had been around he concluded that there is no such word as "can't" in the bright lexicon of youth, and he became active, with the result that the saloons were closed. If the saloonkeepers of Atlantic City have the right to do business on the Sabbath day, saloonkeepers in every other city in the State have that right. There is no discrimination so far as the law is concerned. But, say the authorities in teh town by the sea, it is impossible to enforce the law because we cannot get a grand jury that will indict the liquor sellers. The keepers of disdeputable dives, of brothels and of gambling houses are looking on complacently, knowing full well that, if the saloon-keeper is permitted to flagrantly violate the law without punishment, they ought to be permitted to carry on their business without interruption. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. It would be less expensive for Atlantic City if the judge of the county court, the prosecutor of the pleas and the sheriff were dismissed from office.—Trenton State Gazette.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tomorrow night and receive several applications for membership. Under the direction of the new officers interest in the council and its work is increasing.

Notwithstanding the warm weather the interest of the members of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, continues, and there is now a plan underway to purchase a complete set of paraphernalia for the initiatory work, to be resumed in the fall.

Baggagemaster J. F. Garretson, of the North Avenue station, is again attending to his duties at the station after being detained at home for several months by illness.

Delicious Raspberry Ice.

With the return of fresh raspberries to the markets, fresh raspberry ice is again a possibility. Here is the rule used in one family: Crush a pint of the fruit. Bring two cupfuls of water and two cupfuls of sugar to a boil and when the sugar is dissolved cool the syrup. Add a pint of the crushed berries, the juice of one large or two small lemons and a tablespoonful of galatine dissolved in a little water. Freeze in the usual way.

The stiffly beaten white of an egg is sometimes used in place of the gelatine. This is stirred in when the ice is about half frozen. In place of either ice or gelatine the sugar and water are sometimes cooked to a syrup until it spins a light hair when dropped from the spoon, and when it is cool the fruit juices are added.

The reason for adding the gelatine, egg or for using the syrup is to give a body to the ice. Strawberry ice may be made from the same rule as the raspberry ice.

The Newest Colors.

Ash and elephant gray and mole allied to every shade in the color card of the season just now amount almost to a craze in the realm of fashion. The most popular alliance is a mole-colored hat trimmed with a huge geranium-pink wing, faked so as to spread almost round the entire crown, and providing athe only adornment except for a little "quilling" of geranium-pink velvet, which takes the place of a cream lace cap under the brim. Another alliance which seems to be almost at the apex of its popularity is the hat of ash-gray Tegal, encircled with a row of huge white waxen gardenias embeddied in leaves, or with a wreath of pink camellias treated in exactly the same manner.

What Happened Then?

A man had just arrived at a Massachusetts summer resort. In the afternoon he was sitting on the veranda when a handsome young woman and her 6-year-old son came out. The little fellow at once made friends with the latest arrival.

"What is your name?" he asked. Then, when this information had been given, he added, "Are you married?"

"I am not married," responded the man, with a smile.

At this she child paused a moment, and, turning to his mother, said:

"What else was it, mamma, you wanted me to ask him?"—Harper's Weekly.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 16, 1908.
By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Lessons from the sea. Psa. 23-32.

This psalm was written as a call to men to "praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men." He enumerates several instances in which men have found themselves in perplexing places and have called upon the name of the Lord, who has heard them and delivered them from their distress. One of these illustrations is taken from a shipwreck at sea. A great storm is described, and the sailors, at their wits' end, call upon the Lord, and He delivers them out of their distresses. "He maketh the storm a calm; * * * then are they glad, * * * so He bringeth them to their desired haven." What better lesson could be taught us of God's providential care of His people than this—salvation from a storm at sea and deliverance from a watery grave?

Every element of the sea may also teach us useful lessons. The blessings of the sea to mankind are innumerable and, coming from God's creation, they come from Him. The wonderful works of God are nowhere more manifest than in the sea and its relation to mankind and the physical world. Take the relation of the earth and the sea. The sea in mists constantly rising, which form into clouds and are blown over the earth and give it its water, is constantly supporting the life of the earth and of man and beast. But finally it runs back to the sea, carrying with it salt and other ingredients that keep the sea clean and pure. Otherwise the great oceans would be but stagnant pools, full of death and loathsomeness. What a wonderful arrangement of God and how forcibly it teaches us a great lesson on sacrifice! It is by giving out that we receive in return. The Dead sea has an inlet, but no outlet, and what is the result? It is dead, indeed. No life exists in it. A bird cannot fly over it without falling a fatal victim to its poisonous vapors. Give and ye shall receive.

Life is also well likened to the sea. In traveling over the sea we leave one harbor for another on a distant coast. We meet storms and dangers. We behold the constant restlessness of the sea. But if all goes well we reach our distant harbor. How like life this all is! Earth is the harbor from which we start, and heaven should be the harbor which we desire to reach. But how many storms there are in life! How many dangers! In the sea voyage of life we are "oft in danger, oft in woe." How much restlessness there is in life also—so many things unattained, separations from loved ones, so many trials and vexations, so many problems unsolved, all tending to make the heart and mind restless and disquieted. But the ocean liner has its pilot, and so have we as Christians over life's sea. Jesus, the Son of God, is our pilot, and if we trust Him fully no storm, no danger, no restlessness, will overcome us. He will make the storm a calm, and in gladness we through Him shall enter into our desired haven.

Christian Endeavor Hall.

Facing the old military road in Santurce, four miles from San Juan, Porto Rico, stands the Blanche Kellogg institute, erected by the American Missionary association from the gift of the father of the noble young woman whose Christian life the institute commemorates.

This same generous giver has made another promise to pay a large sum toward a Christian Endeavor hall, provided others will give $4,000. The young people's societies of the Congregational church have felt that this is a golden opportunity to do a splendid work for the Master and have interested themselves in the cause.

The work of the institute is educational, and there is need for it. When

BLANCHE KELLOGG INSTITUTE AT SANTURCE, WHICH WILL CONTAIN THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HALL.

Porto Rico was opened to American influence ten years ago 85 per cent of the population were illiterate. Of 660,000 persons over ten years of age only one in five could read and write his own language. In 1899 there were only eighty-seven Roman Catholic churches for a million people, and in the country districts every principle of morality in family life was violated. Endeavorers of the Congregational church and their friends will surely do their part to meet the great need at this point. Christian Endeavor has always been practical, and we feel sure that generous gifts will flow in to the American Missionary association for this work.

Christian Endeavor hall, which will be a part of the educational institute, stands for the uplift of the people and every dollar given to it means the advancement of the cause of Christ in Porto Rico.

HUNTING THE PRONG BUCK

BY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1893, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

ON the wide plains where the prong-buck dwells the hunter must sometimes face thirst, as well as fire and frost. The only time I ever really suffered from thirst was while hunting prong-buck.

It was late in the summer. I was with the ranch wagon on the way to join a round-up, and as we were out of meat I started for a day's hunt.

After two or three hours' ride, up winding coulies, and through the scorched desolation of patches of Bad Lands, I reached the rolling prairie. The heat and drought had long burned the short grass dull brown; the bottoms of what had been pools were covered with hard, dry, cracked earth. The day was cloudless, and the heat oppressive. There were many antelope, but I got only one shot, breaking a buck's leg; and though I followed it for a couple of hours I could not overtake it. By this time it was late in the afternoon, and I was far away from the river; so I pushed for a creek, in the bed of which I had always found pools of water, especially towards the head, as is usual with plains watercourses. To my chagrin, however, they all proved to be dry; and though I rode up the creek bed toward the head, carefully searching for any sign of water, night closed on me before I found any. For two or three hours I stumbled on, leading my horse, in my fruitless search; then a tumble over a cut bank in the dark warned me that I might as well stay where I was for the rest of the warm night. Accordingly I unsaddled the horse, and tied him to a sage brush; after awhile he began to feed on the dewy grass. At first I was too thirsty to sleep. Finally I fell into a sumber, and when I awoke at dawn I felt no thirst. For an hour or two more I continued my search for water in the creek bed; then abandoned it and rode straight for the river. By the time we reached it my thirst had come back with redoubled force, my mouth was parched, and the horse was in quite as bad a plight; we rushed down to the brink, and it seemed as if we could neither of us ever drink our fill of the tepid, rather muddy water. Of course this experience was merely unpleasant; thirst is not a source of real danger in the plains country proper, whereas in the hideous deserts that extend from southern Idaho through Utah and Nevada to Arizona, it ever menaces with death the hunter and explorer.

In the plains the weather is apt to be in extremes; the heat is tropical, the cold arctic, and the droughts are relieved by furious floods. These are generally more severe and lasting in the spring, after the melting of the snow; and fierce local freshets follow the occasional cloudbursts. The large rivers then become wholly impassable, and even the smaller are formidable obstacles. It is not easy to get cattle across a swollen stream, where the current runs like a turbid mill-race over the bed of shifting quicksand. Once five of us took a thousand head of trail steers across the Little Missouri when the river was up, and it was no light task. The muddy current was boiling past the banks covered with driftwood and foul yellow froth, and the frightened cattle shrank from entering it. At last, by hard riding, with much loud shouting and swinging of ropes, we got the leaders in, and the whole herd followed. After them we went in our turn, the horses swimming at one moment, and the next staggering and floundering through the quicksand. I was riding my pet cutting horse, Muley, which has the provoking habit of making great bounds where the water is just not deep enough for swimming; once he almost unseated me. Some of the cattle were caught by the currents and rolled over and over; most of these we were able, with the help of our ropes, to put on their feet again; only one was drowned; or rather choked in a quicksand. Many swam down stream, and in consequence struck a difficult landing, where the river ran under a cut bank; these we had to haul out with our ropes.

Although I have often had a horse down in quicksand or in crossing a swollen river, and have had to work hard to save him, I have never myself lost one under such circumstances. Yet once I saw the horse of one of my men drown under him directly in front of the ranch house, while he was trying to cross the river. This was in early spring, soon after the ice had broken.

When making long wagon trips over the great plains, antelope often offer the only source of meat supply, save for occasional water fowl, sage fowl, and prairie fowl—the sharp-tailed prairie fowl, be it understood. This is the characteristic grouse of the cattle country; the true prairie fowl is a bird of the farming land farther east.

Towards the end of the summer of '92 I found it necessary to travel from my ranch to the Black Hills, some two hundred miles south. The ranch wagon went with me, driven by an all-round plainsman, a man of iron nerves and varied past, the sheriff of our county. He was an old friend of mine; at one time I had served as deputy-sheriff for the northern end of the county. In the wagon we carried our food and camp kit, and our three rolls of bedding, each wrapped in a thick, nearly waterproof canvas sheet; we had a tent, but we never needed it. The load being light, the wagon was drawn by but a span of horses, a pair of wild runaways, tough, and good travellers. My foreman and I rode beside the wagon on our wiry, unkempt, unshod cattle-ponies. They carried us all day at a rack, pace, single-foot or slow lope, varied by rapid galloping when we made long circles after game; the trot, the favorite gait with eastern park-riders, is disliked by all peoples who have to do much of their life-work in the saddle.

The first day's ride was not attractive. The heat was intense and the dust stifling, as we had to drive some loose horses for the first few miles, and afterwards to ride up and down the sandy river bed, where the cattle had gathered, to look over some young steers we had put on the range the preceding spring. When we did camp it was by a pool of stagnant water, in a creek bottom, and the mosquitoes were a torment. Nevertheless, as evening fell, it was pleasant to climb a little knoll nearby and gaze at the rows of strangely colored buttes, grass-clad, or of bare earth and scoria, their soft reds and purples showing as through a haze, and their irregular outlines gradually losing their sharpness in the fading twilight.

My foreman and I usually rode far off to one side of the wagon, looking out for antelope. Of these we at first saw few, but they grew more plentiful as we journeyed onward, approaching a big, scantily wooded creek, where I had found the prong-horn abundant in previous seasons. They were very wary and watchful whether going singly or in small parties, and the lay of the land made it exceedingly difficult to get within range. The last time I had hunted in this neighborhood was in the fall, at the height of the rutting season. Prong-bucks, even more than other game, seem fairly maddened by erotic excitement. At the time of my former hunt they were in ceaseless motion; each master buck being incessantly occupied in herding his harem, and fighting would-be rivals, while single bucks chased single does as grayhounds chase hares, or else, if no does were in sight, from sheer excitement ran to and fro as if crazy, racing at full speed in one direction, then halting, wheeling, and tearing back again just as hard as they could go.

At this time, however, the rut was still some weeks off, and all the bucks had to do was to feed and keep a lookout for enemies. Try my best, I could not get within less than four or five hundred yards, and though I took a number of shots at these, or even longer distances, I missed. If a man is out merely for a day's hunt, and has all the time he wishes, he will not scare the game and waste cartridges by shooting at such long ranges, preferring to spend half a day or more in patient waiting and careful stalking; but if he is traveling, and is therefore cramped for time, he must take his chances, even at the cost of burning a good deal of powder.

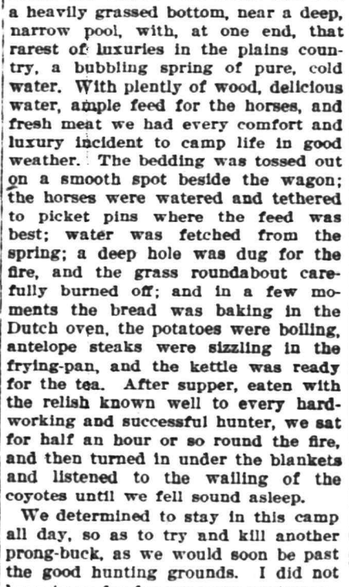
I was finally helped to success by a characteristic freak of the game I was following. No other animals are as keen-sighted, or are normally as wary as prong-horns; but no others are so whimsical and odd in their behavior at times, or so subpect to fits of the most stupid curiosity and panic. Late in the afternoon, on topping a rise I saw two good bucks racing off about three hundred yards to one side; I sprang to the ground, and fired three shots at them in vain, as they ran like quarter-horses until they disappeared over a slight swell. In a minute, however, back they came, suddenly appearing over the crest of the same swell, immediately in front of me, and, as I afterwards found by pacing, some three hundred and thirty yards away. They stood side by side facing me, and remained motionless, unheeding the crack of the Winchester; I aimed at the right-hand one, but a front shot of the kind, at such a distance, is rather difficult, and it was not until I fired for the fourth time that he sank back out of sight. I could not tell whether I had killed him, and took two shots at his mate, as the latter went off, but without effect. Running forward, I found the first one dead, the bullet having gone through him lengthwise; the other did not seem satisfied even yet, and kept hanging round in the distance for some minutes, looking at us.

I had thus bagged one prong-buck, as the net outcome of the expenditure of fourteen cartridges. This was certainly not good shooting; but neither was it as bad as it would seem to the man inexperienced in antelope hunting.



They stood side by side facing me, and remained motionless.

When fresh meat is urgently needed, and when time is too short, the hunter who is after antelope in an open flattish country must risk many long shots. In no other kind of hunting is there so much long-distance shooting.

Throwing the buck into the wagon we continued our journey across the prairie, no longer following any road, and before sunset jolted down towards the big creek for which we had been heading. There were many water-holes therein, and timber of considerable size; box alder and ash grew here and there in clumps and fringes, beside the serpentine curves of the nearly dry torrent bed, the growth being thickest under the shelter of the occasional low bluffs. We drove down to a heavily grassed bottom, near a deep, narrow pool, with, at one end, that rarest of luxuries in the plains country, a bubbling spring of pure, cold water. With plently of wood, delicious water, ample feed for the horses, and fresh meat we had every comfort and luxury incident to camp life in good weather. The bedding was tossed out on a smooth spot beside the wagon; the horses were watered and tethered to picket pins where the feed was best; water was fetched from the spring; a deep hole was dug for the fire, and the grass roundabout carefully burned off; and in a few moments the bread was baking in the Dutch oven, the potatoes were boiling, antelope steaks were sizzling in the frying-pan, and the kettle was ready for the tea. After supper, eaten with the relish known well to every hard-working and successful hunter, we sat for half an hour or so round the fire, and then turned in under the blankets and listened to the wailing of the coyotes until we fell sound asleep.

We determined to stay in this camp all day, so as to try and kill another prong-buck, as we would soon be past the good hunting grounds. I did not have to go far for my game next morning, for soon after breakfast, while sitting on my canvas bag cleaning my rifle, the sheriff suddenly called to me that a bunch of antelope were coming towards us. Sure enough there they were, four in number, rather over half a mile off, on the first bench of the prairie, two or three hundred yards back of the creek, leisurely feeding in our direction. In a minute or two they were out of sight, and I instantly ran along the creek towards them for a quarter of a mile, and then crawled up a short shallow coulie, close to the head of which they seemed likely to pass. When nearly at the end I cautiously raised my hatless head, peered through some straggling weeds, and at once saw the horns of the buck. He was a big fellow, about a hundred and twenty yards off; the others, a doe and two kids, were in front. As I lifted myself on my elbows he halted and turned his raised head towards me; the sunlight shone bright on his supple, vigorous body with its markings of sharply contrasted brown and white. I pulled trigger, and away he went; but I could see that his race was nearly run, and he fell after going a few hundred yards.

AUTO CLUB GIVES OIL TO END DUST NUISANCE

The Mercer County Automobile Club has voted to give to the county two carloads of oil for sprinkling roads so as to suppress the dust nuisance.

A member of the Mercer County Automobile Club said yesterday: "We know that the dust raised by the automobile is harmful to the property of farmers. The dust settles on vegetation and chokes it. We know that farmers living along the lines of straight roads have to close their windows in stifling hot weather to avoid being covered with the dust raised. We autoists know that the dust of the other fellow who passes us in either direction on the road is unpleasant. And in consequence of this knowledge the Mercer County Automobile Club voted at its last meeting to buy two carloads of oil for use on the roads of this county, the location to be the choice of the Board of Freeholders and the grade of oil to be selected by State Road Commissioner Frederick Gilkyson. We are not seeking notoriety in this matter. We only want the county to accept the oil and apply it. The automobilists are not hogs, and this little action would show that they are not."

State Road Commissioner Gilkyson was much gratified over the gift. Prof. John E. Gill, Secretary of the State Association of Automobilists, said that similar action had been agitated in the organization. He favored the plan of the Mercer County Club, and believed that other county clubs should follow the example. He said further that there was a general movement among the county clubs to suppress the dust nuisance.

THAW'S SISTER GIVEN AN ABSOLUTE DIVORCE.

London, Aug. 13.—The decree granted February 5 by Sir Birrell Barnes, president of the Divorce Court, to the Countess of Yarmouth, who was Miss Alice Thaw, of Pittsburg, nullifying her marriage to the Earl of Yarmouth, has been made an absolute divorce by the court, the necessary six months having elapsed.

The case is described on records as "Yarmouth, otherwise Thaw, versus Yarmouth." This leads to the presumption that the countess contemplates resuming her maiden name.

LOVE ONLY IN NAME.

Husband Said Wife Abused Him With "Extreme Cruelty."

Atlantic City, Aug. 13.—That she treated him with "extreme cruelty" was the reasons assigned by Alexander Love why he should be divorced from his wife, Nellie Love. Vice Chancellor Pitney has granted Love a decree on the ground of cruel treatment, the only condition made being that neither of the pair should marry again.

In his testimony Love claimed that his wife hurled objects, ranging from crockery to a lamp, at him, and voiced his fear that she might do worse to him unless he could be released from the marital bonds.

Do Not Neglect the 'Phone.

The story that recent experiments found the germs of tuberculosis lurking in the mouthpiece of telephones may be believed. How many persons are there who make a practise of carefully wiping the mouthpiece before using a public telephone? Yet there telephones are used by thousands of persons of all sorts and with all sorts of complaints every week. Even the mouthpieces and receivers of home telephones should be given attention every day. A housewife not given to the cleanly habit will be astonished, not to say disgusted, to find what can be removed from the mouthpiece of her 'phone if she applies a damp white cloth.

GOLF.

Programs for the fourteenth annual amateur championship tournament of the country have been sent out by W. Fellowes Morgan, secretary of the United States Golf Association. New conditions will govern the coming competition, which will be held over the links of the Garden City Golf Club September 14 to 19. This makes a solid week of competition, and it is the only tournament in the country that will require six days to run off.

The conditions will interest devotees of the game the country over chiefly for their novelty. On Monday, the first day, there will be an eighteen-hole medal round, sixty-four players to qualify. On Tuesday morning there will be another eighteen holes of medal play, and the thirty-two contestants having the best scores for the thirty-six holes will qualify for the championship.

Match play will begin that same afternoon with a round of eighteen holes, but for the next four days matches will consist of thirty-six holes. This provision for all-day matches in every round save the first approaches nearer the ideal system, or rather the system favored and regarded as the best by a majority of the country's leading players.

As all close followers of the game in this country are aware, match rounds for the last few years have consisted of eighteen holes except the final, which has always been the double round. What brought about the change was the signing of a petition by one hundred of the leading amateurs of the country. The signers of the petition requested the adoption of the conditions as named, and when the matter was brought up at the last meeting of the United States Golf Association it became a law without a dissenting voice.

In accordance with usual custom, the winner will receive a gold medal, the runner-up a silver medal and the other semi-finalists bronze medals. The contestant making the lowest thirty-six-hole score in the testing round will receive a special prize. In the event of a tie or ties for the last place on Monday or on Tuesday morning, the contestants so tied shall continue to play until one of them shall have gained a lead by strokes at any hole.

One of the open tournaments of this week will be at the Poland Spring Golf Club, South Poland, Me., today, tomorrow and Saturday. The qualifying round and all match play until the thirty-six hole final will be at eighteen holes. There will be gold and silver medals for the two best scores in the qualifying round, with the Poland Spring cup to the winner in the first sixteen and the Maine State cup as the prize in the second division. There will be runner-up cups also for each set. Players in the sixteen will have the $500 Ivers cup as a prize on the side. The cup has been in play for ten years, the conditions requiring three wins to gain it. W. C. Chick has two victories scored and will try again, even though the disquieting news has come that Walter J. Travis, who today is at Myopia to warm up for the open championship, is to start at Poland Springs. Dr. W. S. Harban, of the Columbia Golf Club, Washington, is chairman of the committee.

All of the other tournaments scheduled for this week are at far away places. The first president's and minor cups will be played for at the Ekwanok Country Club, Manchester, Vt.; the Iowa championship will be decided at the Des Moines Golf and Country Club, and there will be events at the Glen View Club and the Wollaston (Mass.) Golf Club.

Americans who have subscribed to the Tom Morris memorial fund or who intend to send their amounts to Charles Kirchner, care of Spalding & Co., may be glad to know that the project is taking a definite shape. It is hoped to raise $7,500, part of which will be spent in a bronze medallion of Old Tom to be erected on some building overlooking the links, and the remainder will be used to endow a bed in a hospital for the use, primarily, of professional golfers, club makers, caddies, etc.

Y.M.C.A. LEAGUE AVERAGES

Local Players Make Excellent Showing in State League Games.

THE OFFICIAL FIGURES GIVEN.

Three Players Bat Over .400, Captain Leading—Six Made No Errors.

Well established in first place in the State Y. M. C. A. league, the local association nine is now through with its league schedule and the team's "heelers" here are justly proud of the record made by the various individuals in the game this season. The Plainfield nine has a record of eight games won and two lost in the league and although Newark has a possibility of getting the same record, local fans hale the Plainfielders as the pennant winners.

Manager George L. Listman of the team has prepared the individual averages in batting and fielding for the leagues games from the official score book, and his figures show that three players have batted over .400 and six over .300. Six players have a fielding average of 1,000, and of those who have played in all the leagues games all are over .840 in the fielding averages.

Captain Will Schoonmaker has been the handiest of the batters, scoring eleven hits out of twenty-five times at bat. Craig is close to his average, with the same number of hits, and Jacot, the third of the local players in the .400 column, got nineteen hits in his forty-six times at bat. "Dave" Pond and "Jack" Peacock, each have 1,000 per cent. fielding average in six league games. Aside from these two, George Conover, Banks, Dupee and Truesdale have played errorless ball, although the last two only played in a single game.

These are the official leagues averages for Plainfield:

Batting Averages.

	G.	A.B.	R.	H.	Pc.
W. Schoonmaker	6	25	14	11	.440
Craig	6	26	6	11	.423
Jacot	10	46	9	19	.413
Peacock	6	16	5	6	.375
Loizeaux	10	37	8	12	.324
Banks	2	10	0	3	.300
R. Schoonmaker	10	37	16	11	.297
Conway	10	34	8	10	.294
Scott	10	38	8	11	.289
Pond	6	23	6	6	.261
Truesdale	1	4	0	1	.250
G. Conover	4	12	3	3	.250
Dupee	1	4	0	1	.250

Fielding Averages.

	G.	PO.	A.	E.	Pc.
Pond	6	5	2	0	1,000
Peacock	6	3	12	0	1,000
G. Conover	4	4	11	0	1,000
Banks	2	2	0	0	1,000
Dupee	1	2	2	0	1,000
Truesdale	1	1	0	0	1,000
Jacot	10	99	6	3	.972
R. Schoonmaker	10	69	11	4	952
W. Schoonmaker	6	11	6	1	.944
Gilmore	6	11	10	3	.875
Loizeaux	10	23	18	6	.872
Conway	10	18	26	8	.846
Scott	10	9	7	3	.842
Craig	6	6	10	4	.800

During the season, the Plainfieders have scored 81 runs to their opponents' 50 in league games. The score book shows 116 hits to their credit, while other league teams have only been able to make 87. Plainfield has made a total of 33 errors, to 37 by league team opponents. Local association players have made 265 put-outs, 122 of which required assists, and have been to bat 361 times.

On the bags, the local boys have a first class record. Ralph Schoonmaker has purloined 21 sacks in league games, the agile "Charlie" Loizeaux an even dozen, and Will Schoonmaker and "Jim" Conway eleven apiece.

The association boys have played fifteen games, including league games, this season and "Jack" Peacock leads in the general batting average with .375. Craig, Will Schoonmaker, Banks, Jacot, Gilmore, Ralph Schoonmaker and Loizeaux, in the order named, are all batting over .300. Peacock and George Conway, each of whom has played in six games, have 1,000 per cent. in fielding. Three players, Ralph Schoonmaker, Scott and Conway, have played in ten games, the most of any player, and have fielded .985, .912 and .857, respectively, batting .304, .245 and .225.

UNDERWOOD A. C. 10, AND LAUREL A. C. 4

The Laurel A. C. met its first defeat yesterday afternoon in a six inning twilight game on Hope Common, when the Underwoods won out by a score of 10 to 4. Seven errors were responsible for the defeat of the Laurels. Al. Squires and Will O'Loughlin formed the battery for the Underwoods, while D. Hannon and E. Kyle were in the points for the Laurels. The score:

Umpire—Mr. Kennedy.

"NORTH" TRIMS "SOUTH" BY SCORE OF 10-6

Colored nines, designated as the "North" and "South" fought for local baseball supremacy on Hope Common yesterday afternoon and after eight innings of heavy batting and weak fielding, the "Norths" won by a score of 10-6. There was $10 up on the championship between the local colored players born South and those born North, and the supremacy was celebated with great hilarity, after Captain John Taylor "threw up the sponge" at the end of the eighth, when the Norths, who had been behind in the scoring, tallied six runs.

Special Officer James Babbitt, despite the fact that he knew he was going to be robbed last night, was umpire for the "South," and players of the team say that they were "robbed" the same day he was, only more successfully. Had it not been for Charles Kline, umpire for the "North," the result might have been reversed. Both umpires were able to walk home.

Each team scored one run in the first session, but the "South" took he lead in the second, scoring four to their opponents' three in that inning. Nothing happened after that until the eighth, when the Northern nine scored six runs, while Captain "Gamey" Nelson's ebony coterie held the Southern-born darkies to a single run and nailed up the flag of victoy. STATE TENEMENT HOUSE INSPECTORS WORK HERE

Representatives of the State Board of Tenement House Commissioners, from Newark, have been in town for the past few days, and it is reported that they find much to complain of in the conditions of buildings for the accommodation of three or more families. The principal violation of the State building law, passed four years ago, is unlighted rooms. The law provides that all rooms must have windows on the outside of the building. The only exception to this is in the case of bath-rooms, which may have windows opening only upon an air shaft.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane said today that he had known of violations of the State law and had warned the owners of the buildings to comply with it. "In the case of houses to accommodate three or more families," he said, "I can only grant a building permit 'subject to the approval of the State Board of Tenement House Commissioners.' The representatives have not called to see me, but I understand that there are quite a few violations of the new law. I believe this law, passed four years ago, is the best humanitarian law ever passed in this State. The penalty for non-compliance is justly a heavy one."

Make Your Writing Table.

An excellent writing table may be manufactured from two boxes and if more pigeonholes are required four smaller boxes may be joined together on each side of the knee hole, instead of two. When nicely sand-papered, sized, stained with permanganate and finished off with varnish stain this will form a very ornamental and soloid piece of furniture, invaluable to those who write, says Woman's Life.

Do not be too sparing of screws; they cost very little. Begin by drilling a hole with a gimlet, then insert the screw, working it well in. The great disadvantage of all amateur work is that it is not done with sufficient care.

The Dusting Cloth.

It is made of heavy cheesecloth, dyed black and chemically treated, so as to attract the dust to it. Not only is the dust attracted but it stays attracted. It can be washed with soap and water, and this laundering does not in any way affect its attractive qualities. But it is ready to work as briskly as ever when it comes from the wash. It certainly makes the unpleasant task of dusting somewhat easier.

Not Going On a Gospel Tour.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Harrison, of 140 Central avenue, denied today that they have started out in thei Gospel wagon for an extended tour, as reported yesterday in another local newspaper. Mr. Harrison states that he is still in business at the above address and has no intention of going away. M. and Mrs. Harrison have just returned from a short visit to Perth Amoy.

STOPS RUNAWAY BY AUTO

W. H. Chamberlain Overtakes Galloping Horse on Park Ave. and Blocks its Path.

PARTY THROWN FROM BUGGY.

Charles Scribner and Sister-inLaw Bruised When Rig Struck Curb On Wild Run.

Using his automobile as a barrier to the galloping horse, William H. Chamberlain, of Westfield, was finally successful in stopping the runaway bay belonging to Charles Scribner, of Oak Tree, last night, after the animal had smashed the buggy into kindling wood and broken free to gallop along Park avenue towards Oak Tree. Mr. Scribner and his sister-in-law, Miss Agnes Vail, were in the buggy when the horse took fright under the Park avenue railroad bridge at about 8:30 o'clock, and were thrown heavily when the frightened animal crashed into the curb on Park avenue near Fifth street. They were assisted to Dr. H. H. Lowrie's house near by, where an examination showed that no bones were broken, and were later able to proceed home in a rig hired from a local liveryman.

Mr. Chamberlain, who was with a party of friends in his auto, saw the galloping animal just before the crash, and when he saw the buggy turn over onto the sidewalk and the frightened animal, with the harness dangling, dash on out Park avenue, he stopped his machine, persuaded the other members of the party to alight, and turning around, set off in pursuit of the horse. He easily overtook it, but as it was galloping hard could not capture it. Driving his car along beside it, he gradually forcer the horse into the gutter, near Muhlenberg Hospital, making the auto act as a complete barrier after the horse's speed was sufficiently reduced. When the animal finally came to a stand-still, Mr. Chamberlain quickly got out of his auto and seized a dangling rein, making the horse fast by this to the back of his car. He then drove the car slowly back to Dr. Lowrie's and restored the runaway to its owner. Aside from slight cuts about the legs, it was uninjured.

Mr. Scribner said the horse took fright at the noise under the Park avenue bridge, and he lost control of it. He persuaded Miss Vail to keep her seat, and the two clung together in the buggy as the animal dashed madly up the street. At Fifth street, the horse swerved to one side, crashing into the curb. The wheel of the buggy collapsed and the occupants were thrown out as the rig "turned turtle." Both miraculously escaped serious injury, but were badly bruised about the face and body.

MANILA CANNON GIFT TO NEW BRUNSWICK

Former Mayor Drury W. Cooper, of New Brunswick, has received a letter from Lieutenant Colonel William C. Butler, formerly of that city, in which he writes that he has shipped to New Brunswick two historic cannon as a gift to his native town. Mr. Cooper turned over the letter to Mayor Florence, who has written to Lieutenant Colonel Butler a letter of acceptance and has notified him that he will bring the matter to the attention of Common Council.

Nothing has been decided as yet as to where the cannon will be placed. It might be possible to have them placed about the public library on Livingston avenue. The cannon are known as Lantakas from Manila and have quite a history.

"JACOB'S DAY" SUNDAY AT THE NETHERWOOD HOME.

F. H. Jacobs, the evangelist, will be at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp Sunday afternoon, and will take entire charge of the 4 o'clock meeting in the auditorium. He will both speak and sing and music will be made a feature of the service.

In accordance with an annual custom at the camp, Mr. Jacobs makes a point of coming to Netherwood for at least one meeting during the summer. Sunday will be the annual "Jacob's Day" at the camp, and a large turn-out is expected to hear his evangelistic address.

AGENTS FOR PROSPERITY

Commercial Travelers Busy at Work Booming Up Much-Needed Good Times.

PLAINFIELDERS INTERESTED.

Frank W. Weed Member of General Committee—Big Time at Manhattan Beach Tomorrow —Show Last Night.

The Commercial Travelers' Inter-State Prosperity Congress, which will be held in New York today and tomorrow, promises to be one of the most important events from a commercial point of view in recent times. Today a reception will be given by the Merchant and Manufacturers of New York to visiting delegates at the rooms of the Merchants' Association. Acting Mayor McGowan will deliver the address of welcome.

The first session of the Congress was held in the assembly room of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company building, this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Speeches were made by E. C. Simmons, of St. Louis: Henry Clews and the national officers of the Travelers' Protective Association and the United Commercial Travelers. Practical plans for the promotion of prosperity were discussed.

Last night the delegates were entertained at the Liberty theatre, New York, where they witnessed the new play, "The Traveling Salesman." Tomorrow morning the national officers and invited guests will be taken for a sail around Manhattan Island by Comptroller Herman A. Metz, and the guests will be landed at Coney Island. In the meantime, fifteen sight-seeing automobiles will leave the Hotel Victoria, taking the delegates to Manhattan Beach.

Tomorrow afternoon there will be amateur athletics on the lawn of the Manhattan Hotel, a large number of handsome prizes being offered in each event. At 6 o'clock a banquet will be given at the Manhattan Beach Hotel, where covers will be laid for 1,200. There will be music by Maurice Levy's Band during the banquet and afterward there will be addresses by Mayor Rose, of Milwaukee; Lewis Nixon and other distinguished speakers. At 12 midnight the program will be completed with a grand display of Pain's fireworks, especially contributed by the concern.

Frank W. Weed, of West Front street, is a member of the general committee in charge of the whole affair, and there will be about fifty Plainfielders who will enjoy tomorrow's program at Manhattan Beach, including Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Weed, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sturtevant, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Field, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Townsend, Fred Kirch and a number of members of Plainfield Council, United Commercial Travelers' Association. Those desiring tickets can obtain them from Mr. Weed at the 6:19 o'clock train at the North avenue station tonight or at the 12:19 New York train tomorrow noon.

NEW YORK POLICE GET MAN ONCE WANTED HERE.

John Linovich, who two years ago stole a gold watch from Herman Schwartz, a former Plainfielder, was arrested by the New York police in New York yesterday, and Chief Kiely was notified by the Chief of the New York detective bureau that he was being held on the local larceny charge.

As Schwartz moved away from town here about a year ago and did not leave his address with the police department, there is no one to press the charge, and Chief Kiely telephoned to New York today to this effect. Linovich and Schwartz were tailors in the same shop here at the time the watch was stolen.

Burned Out Bees, Set House Afire.

Efforts on the part of some carpenters and painters to dislodge a "yellow jackets'" nest on the house belonging to John Cathcart at 746 Grant avenue shortly after noon today. A telephone alarm at 12:35 brought the department and the blaze was speedily extinguished. The workmen had been disturbed by the bees while at work, and during the noon hour located the nest up under the leader by the cornice. They set fire to it to destroy it, and the flames spread to the cornice. The loss will be about $50.

Goes to Silver Bay Conference.

Boys' Secretary Charles B Batchelor, of the Y. M. C. A. has gone from Saranac Lake Village, where he has been spending his vacation, to Lake George, where he will attend the association conference at Silver Bay before his return to this city to resume his duties. General Secretary Herbert E. Parker, of the local association, is now at the conference, and it is expected that the two will return together, about September 1.

FORT ON ATLANTIC EVILS

Governor to Make a Public Statement as Soon as He Becomes Fully Advised.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION POSSIBLE

Gambling Now the Objective of Reform—Governor Ended It at Long Branch—Radical Action Likely.

Governor Fort at Sea Girt had hoped for a couple of weeks of actual rest after the encampment, but he is kept on the tenter hooks by the results of the State Excise Commission investigation. Letters and communications rain in upon him from all quarters. People who have the idea that the Governor is an absolute ruler and can by a personal order have things fixed as he pleases are astonished and shocked to see that he has done nothing. There are men and women who have the idea that the Governor can in some mysterious way multiply himself and stand guard in every town to compel the enforcement of laws. Others think he should have an astral body to project to any point in the State while his physical body is at Sea Girt.

What chiefly distresses the Governor now is the gambling at Atlantic City. It will be remembered that as Supreme Court justice he took hold of that evil in Monmouth county and ended it. The Atlantic City gamblers are not more efficient than were those at Long Branch. Of course, Long Branch was nearly killed by the process of purification, but it survived and will grow again. The gambling evil can be successfully grappled with at Atlantic City, as there is no public sentiment outside the negro population there to sustain it. The case is entirely different from Sunday selling, which is comparatively innocuous. Yesterday Governor Fort, in reply to inquiries, made this explanation:

"I think I understand the situation at Atlantic City thoroughly. I am going over all the data from the excise commission. In addition I have received many communications from individuals so that I shall be able to make a statement in a short time. When I speak I want to do so in a manner that shall leave no room for doubt as to what I mean. Everybody in the State knows where I stand in regard to clean, decent cities and the enforcement of law."

Governor Fort has been importuned to call an extraordinary session of the Legislature to pass legislation he will suggest. In the midst of a Presidential and State election campaign this would be a hazardous step, and it is hardly likely that the Governor will take it. But something should be done to suppress the gambling places in Atlantic City, a list of which has been printed by Prosecutor Goldenberg.

The whole gambling outfit is part of the Republican local machine, and the gambling privileges given to negro politicians to debauch the thousands of negroes of Atlantic City and pay for their delivery of Republican votes. It is suggested that there might be reform through the efforts of Congressman Gardner and David Baird with the local Republican organization.

Conductors Held For Grand Jury.

Accused of retaining nickels belonging to the P. S. C., two conductors on the pay-as-you-enter trolleys on the Broad street line were today held to await the action of the grand jury. Officials of the company are conducting an investigation which involves about seventy-five other P. S. C. conductors who are suspected of retaining fares.

Discuss Aerial Navigation.

The K. R. C. held a meeting at the home of James C. Kenney, of West Third street, last night. Following a short business meeting, there was a discussion of "Aerial Navigation of the Present and Future." The exchange of views was interesting. The rest of the evening was spent playing whist, after which refreshments were served.

Will Pay Fraternal Visit.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, accompanied by State Councilor Miss Sallie Lake, of Ocean City, will pay a fraternal visit to Fairview Council, No. 55, of Mt. Bethel, Tuesday night, August 18. The Plainfielders will leave in a stage from the Babcock building at 7 o'clock that evening.

Funeral of Miss Riley.

The funeral services of Miss Sarah E Riley were held yesterday afternoon from the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, there being a large attendance of relatives and friends. The pastor, Rev. J. T. Diggs, officiated. The burial was in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

ALBERT HEDDEN IS DEAD AFTER 4 DAYS' ILLNESS

Albert Hedden, reported in these columns yesterday to be dying, passed away at 5:30 o'clock this morning at his home on West Fifth street, following serious complications which developed on Monday. He was conscious up to within a short time of his death and recognized the members of the family.

As stated yesterday, Mr. Hedden was born in this city and always lived here, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Hedden, who were also natives of Plainfield. Since his death it has been learned that as a boy Mr. Hedden worked for a farmer named Allen, his farm being located on the Washington Valley road above Watchung. Later he returned to Plainfield and took a position at John W. Laing's hotel, where the Babcock building now stands. From there he went to John Roselle's stables at Park avenue and Second street, where he was manager for several years.

Afterward he started in business for himself, as stated, with one horse and wagon, having stables on East Front street, where the Woodhull & Martin building is, then where H. B. MacDonald's stables are located now and he finally built the stables on East Fourth street, where he conducted a general livery business for over twenty years. During his business career he amassed considerable fortune and acquired much property.

He is survived by a wife, one daughter, Miss Ella Hedden, a son, Frank Hedden and two brothers, William and Joel D. Hedden, all of this city.

The funeral service will be held from the late home, 118 West Fifth street, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

WATER CAUSES BIG LOSS AT NORTH AVENUE FIRE

Fire of an unknown origin caused about $1,000 damage in the building owned by F. A. Pope, at 136 North avenue, early this afternoon. The blaze broke out among some bedding in a closet in the rear of the apartment on the top floor, occupied by George Hibbard, a local tea merchant. Mrs. Hibbard saw the smoke at shortly after 2 o'clock, screaming "fire." She met W. L. Smalley, Jr., who turned in the alarm from box 13, at North and Park avenues.

The firemen located the blaze in the rear of her apartments, and a line of hose fas stretched after the chemical stream had proved insufficient. Practically the entire rear part of the Hibbards apartment was in flames.

Water did great damage in the apartments occupied by Mrs. Sparks on the floor below and dripped through to the Monarch Printing Company's plant on the main floor. A party of volunteers were kept busy covering the paper and machinery in the plant, but there will be some loss there. The building is insured, but it is not known whether the occupants of the apartments carry insurance.

TWO LIONS ON HIS HANDS.

Atlantic City, Aug. 14.—Mme. Adgie, lion tamer, has lost her lions, and the baliff of the District Court, Walter Hardcastle, is in trouble. He seized the kings of the forest for a claim of $200, presented by the Reading Railroad.

It appears the railroad broke mirrors among Adgie's freight and she will not pay charges on the shipment until the damage is repaired. Meanwhile the baliff has on his hands the lions, which require a hindquarter of beef for each meal.

Miss Olivia Williams.

Miss Olivia Williams, aged twenty-three years, colored, died this morning at the home of Mrs. William Dempsey, 640 West Third street, after a short illness. The funeral service will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

Dunham Will Recover.

Adam Dunham, of West Third street, who attempted to commit suicide Monday afternoon, continues to improve at the hospital. He is now apparently sorry that he attempted to make way with himself and has no idea of repeating the offense.

"Character and Service."

"Character and Service" will be the theme of the discourse by the pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw, at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow morning. On August 22, Rev. C. W. F. Attlee, of South Plainfield, will occupy the pulpit.

—Every housekeeper in Plainfield will be interested in the fine display of choice Jersey and Delaware peaches tomorrow at Neuman Brothers. Special prices by the basket.

HOTTEST DAY IN 27 YRS.

Intense Humidity Makes it Most Uncomfortable Here as in Nearby Places.

YES, RELIEF IS PROMISED.

No Rain In Sight But It May Be Cooler By Tonight—That Barometric Disturbance.

According to the official weather sharps yesterday was the hottest August 13 recorded in this vicinity in twenty-seven years, and those who are obliged to remain at home will surely have cause to remember. Today's weather does not appear to be any improvement and while the extreme heated spell is on several records are sure to go to smash. The weather forcaster says that the excessive heat is due to an area of low pressure in the upper lake regions, moving down the St. Lawrence Valley, causing a general increase in temperature hereabouts.

The weather is as sticky as it is hot and when the humidity goes down the mercury begins to climb. New York, which has been heralded as the great summer resort, reports that yesterday was the hottest August 13 since 1881, when 96 degrees were recorded. The highest yesterday wa 90 degrees at 3 o'clock in the after noon. The condition was the same here. A year ago at the same time the temperature was 81.

Every condition was conducive to discomfort. There was practically no wind and what little there was came out of the south. The percentage of humidity remained high all day. Even New Yorkers who could left the overheated city and rushed to the seashore or in fact anywhere that a breeze could be found.

While it was comparatively cool in the morning, with the temperature only at 74, at 8 o'clock the discomfort was increased by 91 per cent of humiidty. Then the mercury began to climb. At noon it was 83, at 2 o'clock it was 89 and at 8 o'cloc last night it was 84.

The weather reports show that conditions were pretty much the same throughout this part of the country In Washington 94 degrees were recorded; in Philadelphia and Albany 92. As a rule it was decidedly cooler over the western half of the country

The weather bureau promises relief in the forecast for the next twenty-four hours. While there is no rain in sight the low pressure area may move on, and so it is expected that it will be slightly cooler tonight.

Late last night the Weather Bureau at Washington sent out this special forecast:

"A barometric disturbance will advance from the Rocky Mountain districts to the Atlantic Coast from August 14 to 18, crossing the plains States Saturday, the central valleys and lake region Sunday and Monday, and the Atlantic States Monday and Tuesday, preceded by rising temperature, attended by rains that will cover the corn and spring wheat States and followed by a period of low temperatures."

Will Attend General Conference.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will leave Monday for Boulder, Colorado, where he will attend the general conference of the denomination, which convenes on August 26 and continues for six days. The week previous a convocation will be held when matters for presentation at the conference will be considered. On his return home, Mr. Shaw will stop at Milton, Wis., where his family is now stopping and arrange to bring them with him to Plainfield. Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardner will also attend the general conference at Boulder.

Hope Chapel Excursion Tomorrow.

The annual excursion of Hope chapel and Sunday-school to Asbury Park is one of the very few remaining chances for such an outing at the shore from this city and everyone who can should take advantage of it. The train will leave Grant avenue at 7:55, Plainfield 8:15, and returning leave the shore at 7:55 in the evening, allowing a full day of pleasure at the Park.

Miss Matilda M. Gassner Retires.

Miss Matilda M. Gassner, who has been engaged in the millinery business here for fourteen years, yesterday sold the business on West Front street, to Miss J. L. Titus, of New York, who took possession at once. Miss Gassner intends retiring from the business because of ill health. She will leave Plainfield and reside in New York in the future. During her stay in Plainfield she has made many friends, who will regret that she is to leave the city.

Mrs. J. Hervey Doane and daughter, of East Seventh street, are sojorning at Asbury Park.

MYSTIC RAPS SPELL FISK

'Spirits' Announce That Our Mayor Will Be Next Governor of State.

HAND OUT OTHER "DOPE."

Taft Next President—Raymond Next Senator From Essex—Fort Good Governor.

A number of residents of Mt. Holly have taken up occult sciences for amusement these days and some of them have become "firm believers." They have absorbed knowledge from Circuit Court Judge Frank T. Lloyd, at Seaside Park, where the judge and some of Mt. Holly's first citizens go for the summer. The judge is a student of spiritualism and has presided at a number of impromptu seances at the seashore. One of the things he has specialized in is "table rapping," and so apt have been some of his "scholars" that they have taken to "seancing" themselves at their homes there.

The other night several of them got together in a dimly lighted room and placed their hands on a small table. A couple of Burlington county "regular" Republicans were in the assemblage. They were inclined to scoff at the proceedings and when they got the table responding to their influence, as it is called, they asked a series of questions with a view of disproving the reliability of the replies. By Judge Lloyd's "system" one rap on the table means "no" and three sharp, quick raps mean "yes." In "spelling" names the table does so by raps, also, the number of raps corresponding with the numerical position of the letter in the alphabet. For instance, in spelling Taft the table raps twenty times, pause a moment, then rap once, then six times and again twenty times. The table rapped out "Taft" a good many times during the evening and he was proclaimed by the "spirit" as "the next President," "the next best man to Roosevelt" and several other things. But it was when the "regulars" got to quizzing about Essex county conditions that surprises came. Those who were supposed to be the real mystifiers were women and were not believed to be acquainted with north State politics so that when the table was asked "Who will be the next Senator from Essex?" it did seem mystifying the table should give the raps that corresponded with the spelling of "Raymond."

"Who would be the next Governor?" brought two repsonses, the first being "Colby" and the other "Fisk." The "Fisk" answer was presumed to refer to Charles J. Fisk, Mayor of Plainfield and chairman of the State Excise Commission. Anyhow, that's the way the "seancers" decided upon it. Other political inquiries "disclosed" that Fort has made the best Governor of the State, that he will be the next United States Senator and that Senator Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington county, will not be the next president of the Senate. The seances are becoming quite a fad and in some houses are being held nightly.

ROOSEVELT CANNOT GO.

But Invites Athletes to Be His Guests at Oyster Bay.

President Rosevelt has sent a letter from Oyster Bay to V. P. McLoughlin, secretary of the Olympic athletes reception committee, saying he cannot be in New York on August 29, but that he would like to meet the athletes. The President said in his communication:

"My Dear Sir—I am very glad to have been named honorary president of the American Olympic reception, but it will not be possible for me to go into the city of New York to attend the reception. If the members of the team can come out to Oyster Bay I shall be sincerely glad to see them here at my house and greet them in person. Sincerely yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

It is thought probable that the athletes will make the trip to Oyster Bay to meet the President. Governor Hughes says he will arrange for the participation of the National Guard in the parade.

Y. W. C. A. Walk Tomorrow.

Members of the Y. W. C. A. are arranging for a five mile "hike" for tomorrow afternoon, and members are requested to meet at the association building at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This is the first of the season's outings which will be entirely a walk, for it has been the custom to ride part way on the regular weekly jaunts. Those who plan to go have decided to bring a basket luncheon, and the party will have a picnic supper at a place on the walk.

THREATEN EXCISE HEAD

Mayor Gets "Black Hand" Letter Warning Him of Dire Vengence.

RECIPIENT LAUGHS HEARTILY.

Excise Commission to Hold Three More Public Meetings Before Filing Its Report.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, chairman of the State Excise Commission, received a "black hand" letter yesterday warning him that some day vengeance would be taken on him for his work as a member of the commission. The mayor laughed heartily when he read the threatening letter which bore an Elizabeth postmark and was addressed to "Mr. Fisk, State Exercise Commissioner, Plainfield, N. J., Personall."

Here is the letter:

"Mr. Fisk. You are a noble man only for those who got a good supply in their cellar. the middle class and poor working people shuld suffer. you can take a Drink any time on Sunday and you have a fine wine cellar but that don't cut any Ice. you will some day repent. Plainfield High Tone people are rotten. Also same in Westfield. One leading minister who preaches from the holy book and temperance drinks his whiskey straight x x x You high toned people are rotten and now squeeze the poor Saloonkeepers out of all they got.—Graft Graft. Revolution in this Country is all we need and it is coming to.

"Now Mr. Fisk, that Peter Backus is what he wants to bring this state is that the pope of Rome will Control the U. S. I only hope it will be so, that all the imported Irish will control. Let the republican Party give liberal Laws to the working man. Now Mr. Fisk you are a millionaire. you don't give a ——— for a working man. as you know you aint got twelve good people in Plainfield. who are your friends. Some fine day you will get a crack on your (here is a picture of a skull and cross bones) and you are done, same as Gov Fort. I only hope you will get what you deserve. the Bible say Thou shall not bare fals witness against thy neighbor." Beneath this is a picture of a hand with the words inscribed "Black Hand."

Mr. Fisk stated that the commission will hold a session in Trenton on Monday and on the following Monday one at Asbury Park At the latter meeting the surrounding country will be covered. After that a meeting will be held at another place to investigate Morris, Sussex and Warren. According to the chairman, the commission will hold but these three more meetings.

MRS. SIMS CELEBRATES HER 92ND ANNIVERSARY

Mrs. Mehaly Sims, one of Plainfield's best known residents, celebrated the ninety-second anniversary of her birthday on Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon on Putnam avenue, where she has been living for many years. In honor of the event Mrs. Sims received a flood of birthday greetings and beautiful postal cards which brought her much cheer and happiness for the day.

Mrs. Sims was born in Plainfield and has always lived here. She is conceded to be one of the few oldest residents and has always enjoyed excellent health. During the past year she has suffered to some extent from defective vision which makes it necessary for her to have a companion when she leaves the house,

She is the oldest member of the First Baptist church and ever since she joined that congregation has been a regular and faithful attendant at the Sunday and mid-week services, and has always evidenced a deep interest. She is of a particularly happy disposition and despite her old age and infirmities attendant with it she is one of the most cheerful members of the family.

Salvation Army Notes.

Captain and Mrs. A. Hopkins will conduct the services in the Salvation Army Hall tomorrow night. Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, William Cary, the railroad engineer evangelist, of Newark, will be the speaker. Mr. Cary is an interesting speaker and all are invited to hear him relate his wonderful experience.

Up-to-Date Boarding House.

Mrs. Berrien's popular boarding house, "The Plainfield," 515 Park avenue, is being refitted with the latest steam heater and with extra baths and toilets. The fine meals have established a reputation for this place. 8 12 4 ***
